HALL DETECTIVE BRIBED TO QUIT CASE, HE SAYS

Murdered Rector's Clothes Shown.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Henry L. Dickman, a sullen look on his lean face, and his black eyes thrusting about the courtroom of the Hall-Mills trial, swore today that he had been paid $2,500 as a bribe to drop his investigation of the crime four years ago. He said that the briber had been the late Azariah Beekman, who was Somerset prosecutor when the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills were murdered.

The witness made his charge with the brand of an army deserter upon him. He seemed conscious of this as he faced the spectators and he shifted uneasily in the chair close to Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker and County Judge Frank L. Cleary, presiding at the trial. He never once looked toward the three defendants.

Henry Stevens Scornful.

They, however, watched his every movement and caught each word that issued from his thin lips. Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, who had registered emotion when private letters to her brother and co-defendant, Henry Stevens, had been read, surveyed Dickman stolidly. There was a scornful expression on Henry Stevens' countenance, and the third person accused, Willie Stevens, concentrated the full power of his stare on the slender man on the stand.

The first allusion to the oft-charged thwarting of justice in the famous case came through an opening made by the defense attorneys themselves. Assistant Attorney General Alexander Simpson had [illegible] examination of the former state [illegible]. The special prosecutor had [illegible] what Dickman [illegible] in his efforts to solve [illegible].

Tells of Desertion.

Guided by the prosecutor, Dickman told how he had visited La Vallette, the home of Henry Stevens, in February, 1923. At that time, said the witness, Stevens had appeared "evasive" when questioned. He had obtained from the witness an explanation of his desertion from the army which, it appeared, had been the result of a drinking bout that lasted forty-one days—"a day longer than the flood," as a defense lawyer put it—and then had informed the defense that the state had no other questions to ask of Dickman.

State Senator Clarence E. Case, usually deliberate in his actions and speech, rose hastily to subject Dickman to the fire of his cross-examination. He went hard at the man's record in the army and navy, challenging him to say whether he had not deserted here, there, and the other place. He sought to show that Dickman had often used aliases. The witness' manner was truculent as he denied this. The defense scored when Dickman proved unable to remember how he had got to La Vallette, and again when all he could recall of the place was that it was a "resort" and had a "sandy beach."

Deserted Jersey Police.

Back again to the examination of Senator Simpson went the witness. The prosecutor tried to correct the impression which had been left by Dickman's replies to the defense. When he had satisfied himself that he had softened the testimony somewhat, Senator Simpson said he was through.

"I have one more question to ask," said Senator Case, "and that is, did you desert from the New Jersey state police also?"

"Yes," said Dickman, glaring at the questioner.

Senator Simpson jumped to his feet.

"Why did you leave the state police?" he asked.

"Because I was offered an inducement," said Dickman.

Q.—By whom? A.—Azariah Beekman.

Q.—What was the nature of the inducement? A.—Money.

Paid $2,500 to Quit.

Q.—How much money? A.—Twenty-five hundred dollars.

The defense attorney leaned back in his chair and for a period of seconds he folded his arms and fixedly looked at Dickman. The witness stared back.

"When you say Azariah Beekman," said Senator Case slowly, "you refer to the late prosecutor of this county, now dead?"

"Yes," said Dickman.

"That's all," said the senator with finality.

Then, in answer to Senator Simpson, the deserter said that when he first made his charge he had not known that Mr. Beekman had died

SAM HILL QUITS; 'FORD AID' FIRED FROM HER TRAIN

Old Command Takes Charge of Trip.

Queen Marie's Special Train at Seattle, Wash., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The storm cloud that has hovered over Queen Marie's train for several days passed away tonight with the departure of Samuel Hill, millionaire, who has been Marie's host on the western part of her trip, and the expulsion from the train of a reported representative of the Henry Ford Motor company.

It was officially denied that Queen Marie was confined to her bed by illness and that plans for the remainder of her tour had been changed. The queen spent a tiring day and retired to her private car.

Said Ford Was Paying Expenses.

The reputed Ford representive who was expelled from the train on order of Col. John H. Carroll, official host to her majesty, is J. A. Ayres of New York. The colonel's action followed published stories quoting Ayres as saying that Henry Ford was spending nearly half a million dollars to provide transportation for the royal party, and that Ayres himself was loaning money to members of the entourage.

Col. Carroll said Ayres had presented himself in New York before the tour started, asking for permission to ride on the train on the basis of an agreement which he said he had with the Roumanian legation in Washington by which he was to have automobiles made by the Ford company ready for the queen at every city she visited.

Ayres was denied a seat on the train until Ottawa, Can., was reached, having followed the train by automobile. At Ottawa Col. Carroll said he took Ayres aboard because of the long jump from that city to Winnipeg and Ayres' inability to hire an airplane.

Talked Too Much, Carroll Says.

Ayres was taken aboard, Col. Carroll said, with the understanding that he would remain inconspicuous. He had no authority, Carroll said, "to make any statements, and because he has broken his agreement with me he leaves the train tonight."

"We have made every effort," Carroll said, "to make this journey a dignified one and to divorce it entirely from any suggestion of commercialism and advertising. To that end no one has been permitted to come aboard the train except those necessary to the comfort and safety of her majesty."

Col. Carroll explained that transportation costs of Marie's tour are being paid by the railroads over which she travels.

Ayres left Seattle tonight for Denver. He formally denied having made a statement that he had financially assisted the touring party.

Dispatches from Detroit quoted Ford officials there as saying they did not know Ayres and that he did not represent them.

Hill and Differences Leave.

The differences between Mr. Hill and Maj. Stanley Washburn, special aide to the queen, were removed when Mr. Hill left the train after the dinner at which he was host to the queen and which Maj. and Mrs. Washburn attended, along with Gov. R. H. Hartley, Mayor Bertha K. Landes and members of the party.

This trouble began with the assumption by Mr. Hill of the rôle of host when he boarded the train at Spokane. He was in charge of ceremonies at the dedication by Marie of his unfinished and empty museum of fine arts at Maryhill, Wash., and his plans ran counter to those of Washburn and Carroll. Allegedly insulting remarks by Hill to the major when the party was in Portland had led to an open breach.

Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana, after motoring with their mother from Bellingham to Burlington, completed the journey to Seattle by motor, driving cars provided by Ayres, while Marie remained with the train.

No Change in Itinerary.

There was no indication tonight that any change will be made in the itinerary for the remainder of the journey, which calls for a two day stop at Detroit and a visit to the Ford plant. It was understood on the train that automobiles would be given the royal visitors by the Ford company.

Gov. Friend W. Richardson of California announced that he would not officially invite the queen to that state.

"If any king, queen, potentate, or executive of any foreign country should come to California, I know they would be cordially welcomed by our citizens," said the governor. "All visitors are welcome to come to California, regardless of whether they are queens or kings or just plain, honest citizens."

STORE NEXT TO CROWDED LOOP MOVIE IS ROBBED

While hundreds of persons were filing into the Oriental theater, next door, a robber last night entered the Spaulding Apparel company store, at 26 West Randolph street, bound Louis Rubin, one of the proprietors, with rope, tossed him into a closet, and then stole $1,500.

Rubin was released after an hour by policemen who, with David Binns, colored porter in the store, climbed through a transom.

Rubin told the police a man he knew as Charles Fox had robbed him. He said some days ago Fox had come into the store with a woman, paid $5 down on a dress, and left. Last night, Rubin said, Fox called up and asked to have the dress sent to the Fort Dearborn hotel. It was while Binns, the porter, was trying to deliver the dress that Fox entered, pistol in hand, Rubin said.

Turkey et Al. to Cost Less, U. S. Reports

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—(AP)—When Mrs. Shopping Housewife takes her basket to market a few days before Thanksgiving she will discover that the amount budgeted last year not only will buy the items on her list but will leave enough for her to enjoy a show before returning home. At least that is what agricultural department experts say.

Of course, the first item will be turkey. She will find that in Texas, the leading producing state, 15 per cent more fowls were raised this year, and early prices on turkeys are three cents a pound less than last season.

Cranberries, associated with Thanksgiving day as fixedly as pumpkin pie, she may buy for as low as ten cents a pound, as the eastern crop has been reported successful with larger ones in Wisconsin and the northwest. The pumpkin will be less than one dollar a barrel in some sections.

Bargains in Potatoes.

Celery and lettuce, both are available, and with increased production this year lower lettuce prices are expected. Celery will show a wide range of prices, reflecting uneven quality.

The greatest contribution to the "show fund" will come possibly from the item "potatoes, sweet and white." The white potato will sell at about one-third less than last season with the crop 11 per cent larger. Sweet potatoes will be on the "bargain list," selling at one-half to two-thirds of the price of their white cousin.

Apples, Grapes Plentiful.

As Mrs. Housewife buys her oranges and grapefruit, she will be surprised to learn that although two million boxes were blown off by the Florida hurricane a large California orange crop has assured an ample supply of that fruit at moderate prices. Grapefruit is expected to be at its normal price, and apples will be a holiday market feature, with first class fruit bringing from one dollar to one dollar and fifty cents a bushel.

Grapes will retail in 12 quart baskets from 60 to 75 cents, because "a tremendous crop" was reported in California, and the pecan crop is larger, particularly the wild variety.

Steeplejack Is Killed as Smokestack Falls

Fairmont, Minn., Nov. 6.—(AP)—A. O. Campbell, a steeplejack, died tonight of injuries suffered here today when the top section of a smokestack crumpled and he fell.

Policewoman Has Gun; Nabs Bandit Terror

Shortly after he had held up and robbed a woman of a purse containing $595 and jewels valued at $1,000, a stocky, muscular youth who is believed to have been the leaping "cat bandit," the masked terror who has roamed through the north side for weeks, was surrounded and captured last night at Ainslie street and Seeley avenue.

Participating in the arrest were Capt. John Stege, deputy chief of Chicago's detectives; Capt. John Egan, Sergts. William Balswick and Thomas McEnery and Policewoman Theresa Johnson.

Tossed Revolver Away.

The man, who tossed his revolver and the heavily weighted purse in a dash for freedom, declared he was William Hayes, 30 years old, 3227 West Harrison street. He added that he fought in the World War with the British army and after that struggle attained considerable note as a marathon runner.

Capt. Stege, Capt. Egan, and the sergeants caught sight of the robber a few hundred feet north of Ainslie street in Seeley avenue. Seeing them, he started to run south. Sergt. Balswick leaped out, with a shotgun ready to fire at him, while the others dashed ahead in their automobile in an attempt to head him off.

Their efforts might have been fruitless, however, had it not been for the opportune arrival of Policewoman Johnson, who has devoted many days and nights to the search for the masked marauder. Unaware that her superior officers were touring the district, she had gone to the same vicinity.

As the man reached the corner with the shouts of the officers resounding behind him, Policewoman Johnson met him with a drawn pistol.

Surrenders to Woman.

Hayes, seeing that his great speed had failed him, surrendered.

"You've got me," he said. "Take me in. I had to do this because I was out of work."

Mrs. Minnie Beiersdorf of 4956 North Seeley avenue was the robbery victim. She notified the police only a few minutes before the capture that the man had leaped upon her from the shadows of her own doorway and had wrested the purse from her, threatening to kill her if she made any outcry.

In Hayes' pockets the police found a tan handkerchief, carefully folded in such a manner that it could easily be slipped over his face and used as a mask. All the victims of the bandit terror, whose characteristic crime is the beating and robbing of women in dark spots, reported that he wore a mask of this type.

Suspects to View Him.

The latest exploit of the desperado was the robbery and beating, on Friday night, of Miss Florence Stavrum, 18 year old high school girl, 1434 Juneway terrace. On Thursday night, Miss Gladys Kugel, 16 years old, 2106 Ainslie street, was seized and robbed.

Hayes is to be viewed at the Summerdale station by Miss Kugel and other victims of the leaping bandit. In a general way he answers the descriptions given by all the women robbed and beaten by the mystery man.

Capt. Stege and Capt. Egan determined last night to take personal charge of the search for the man, the entire police force having been aroused by the beating of the Stavrum girl.

SHOOTS HUSBAND IN QUARREL OVER WIFE; ENDS LIFE

Stanley Ziemskof of 5335 Fullerton avenue was shot and seriously wounded last night by Thomas Drzast, 31 years old, a former boarder in his home. Drzast then turned his pistol upon himself and committed suicide.

The trouble, it was reported to the police, grew out of attentions paid to the wife by Ziemskof, who is a baker and 30 years old, by Drzast.

"I ran him out of my house some weeks ago," Ziemskof declared. "He had lived there two years and a half, but I could not have him there any longer when he was too friendly with my Anna."

He added that he returned unexpectedly from work last night to find the pair together. When Drzast fired and the husband fell, the former ran out to the front porch and shot himself. He died as he was being taken to the Keystone hospital. Ziemskof was wounded in the neck and his condition was regarded as serious.

Mrs. Anna Ziemskof was questioned by the police, but asserted she was an innocent victim of the ex-boarder's love and was guiltless of wrongdoing.

ROOF SAVES LIFE IN AUDITORIUM HOTEL PLUNGE

David Williams, 31 years old, of Telford, Pa., was seriously injured late last night when he fell or leaped, clad only in his pajamas, from a ninth floor window in the Auditorium hotel. His plunge ended at the seventh floor, where he landed on a canopy roof.

Williams, a salesman for the A. C. laboratories of New York, registered at the hotel in the evening and was given a room on the fifth floor. He is believed to have used a rear stairway to reach the ninth floor. The police attributed his fall to over-indulgence in liquor.

Employes of the hotel, who heard the injured man's groans on the roof, went to his assistance. The South Clark street police took him to St. Luke's hospital, where it was said his nose was fractured and his right leg either broken or sprained.

Welch today filed a lien against the estate of Rudolph Valentino for $4,491, additional income taxes alleged due for the year 1924. Mrs. Teresa Werner, aunt of Natacha Rambova and one of the three beneficiaries of Valentino's will, arrived here late yesterday, coming from France upon the cabled request of S. George Ullman, executor of Valentino's estate.

ADMITS FASCISTI IN FRANCE AIDED ATTACK ON DUCE

Paris Is Shown Dual Role of Fascism.

[Copyright, 1926, By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Hours of grilling by the chiefs of the French secret service have woven such a thick web of evidence around Col. Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the famous Italian patriot, who was seized by the French police in Nice Thursday, that no doubt now remains of the war hero's position during the last sixteen months as the leading secret agent in France for the Fascist government. He is shown to have been acting to cause plots to be hatched in France to stir up Italian bitterness against the French.

Col. Garibaldi, with fatalism born of dispair, has, it is asserted, revealed "his very soul" to the French officials.

Secret Arms Discovered.

On top of the Garibaldi sensation, evening newspapers like the Paris Soir and La Presse assert the source of a new plot has been found just outside the gates of Paris which involves the French Fascists and the discovery of a large secret arms and ammunition depot.

Meanwhile it has become known that among the most important things ascertained from Col. Garibaldi is more or less conclusive evidence that it was he who engineered the bomb attack against Premier Mussolini in the Place Furia Pia in Rome on Sept. 11.

Helped Bomber to Cross.

From the evidence, police are now reasonably certain that it was Col. Garibaldi who facilitated Gen. Lucetti's crossing into Italy from France, and that the Italian police were quite familiar with the bomb outrage subsequently perpetrated by Lucetti.

Despite the proof of his double dealing with the anti-Fascists in France, Col. Garibaldi at various times during his hearing has exclaimed, "I have done my duty and I am the victim of an unbelievable fatality."

The most dramatic moment in the whole inquiry occurred when Col. Garibaldi was brought face to face with Sig. Scivoli, well known anti-Fascist whom the police think Garibaldi was about to send into Italy on another bomb throwing expedition similar to the Sept. 11 affair.

When Sig. Scivoli walked into the room where Garibaldi sat, Scivoli glared at the Fascist spy and denounced him in Italian. Two agents were forced to restrain the hot headed anti-Fascist, who took no pains to conceal his keen desire to take revenge on the "traitor to the anti-Mussolini" cause.

Throws Light on Fascism.

Col. Garibaldi's confession that he was a Fascist agent provocateur, combined with Mussolini's newly announced laws for the protection of the Fascist régime, has raised a corner of the curtain which has hitherto successfully concealed the inner mechanism of fascism from the world. It has all marked that régime in a manner which the French regard as amply sufficient cause for mistrust, if not for nervousness.

Garibaldi's examination has revealed that Fascist police agents freely use false passports to cross the frontier and help in the institution of shadow plots against Fascism, which can be "discovered" later as proof of France's antagonism to the Duce and his people.

Garibaldi himself took a share in the instigation of the ill starred expedition of Col. Francisco Macia, to free Catalonia from Spain, which was planned it is today admitted, in order to show the truth of the Duce's contention that France is nothing but a nest of conspirators living under protection of the republic's flag.

Many of Aids Fascists.

In that adventure Col. Macia appears as an honest and much mistaken man. Nearly half of his helpers, however, it is discovered, have been Fascist agents, bent on stirring up trouble between France and Spain, and in that work Garibaldi had a direct hand.

That Italian conspiracy could go so far is held by the French to be all the proof any one needs of the malevolence of Fascism toward France. As always, the actual conspirator does not appear in the foreground. Garibaldi was only a tool and his case excites more sympathy than antagonism here. With his stronger characered brothers he served France bravely in the war, but his subsequent course has been the not unusual one of a man

MAN FOUND SLAIN IN REAR YARD OF WEST SIDE HOME

Police were confronted with a mystery murder early this morning when the unclothed body of a man identified as Maurice K. Anthony, 1024 North La Salle street was found in a yard in the rear of 2131 Maypole avenue. He had been killed by a blow on the back of the head from some heavy instrument. His clothing was later found neatly folded behind a telephone pole in the rear of 2129 Maypole avenue. Identification was made from papers in the pockets.

Anthony was 52 years old and a clerk in the offices of the Illinois Steel company. His body was identified by George W. Webster, a nephew, 4526 Ellis avenue.

Police worked on two theories. One was that he was murdered in some other part of the city and his body taken to the place where it was found. Another was that he had been slain in the second floor of the house at 2131 Maypole avenue and thrown out a window from which a screen was missing. The house is occupied by colored people and fourteen of them, seven men and seven women, were arrested. All denied any knowledge of the murder.

who was a good soldier being unable to cope with the difficulties of civilian life. Like most soldiers, he is a spender and he could not make money.

Played Dual Rôle.

To the Fascist police such a man was a godsend. He had been known for his opposition to Sig. Mussolini, yet he never seems to have enjoyed the full confidence of the Italian refugees in France. Nearly eighteen months ago, to make ends meet, he began to play the dual rôle of public opponent of the Fascisti and its private agent, being the secret agent of Sig. Federzoni, Italian minister of interior, who has just resigned.

The effect of the discovery of this kind of plotting on the part of Fascism has been to confirm the idea that Frenchmen as a whole have had for a long time about the political system of their Latin neighbors. Even the bolsheviki have never invented such a scheme in their efforts to spread their doctrine as this plot of the Macia expedition to embroil France with Spain. And now on top of it has come Mussolini's acceptance of his sixth ministerial office and laws for the protection of his régime.

Coming in conjunction with this investigation, it was learned in official circles tonight that Premier Mussolini, through his embassy in Paris, has asked the French government to withhold any conclusions regarding the Garibaldi affair for another two days, saying that at the end of that time the Italian government would be in a position to offer a satisfactory explanation.

France Demands Avowal.

It is now up to Mussolini, in the view of close observers here, to make a frank admission and an apology for the dangerous activities of Col. Garibaldi in France and to prevent future efforts of this kind. It was explained that an avowal of this sort will be demanded by France.

For the anti-French incidents at Tripoli Mussolini has forwarded a written apology to Rene Besnard, the French ambassador at Rome. Soldiers and militant Fascists who took part in the incident have been subjected to "disciplinary measures," while five or six soldiers who invaded the French consulate have been handed over to the judicial authorities. Mussolini is awaiting final reports on the Vintimille and Benghasi incidents before replying to the French protests.

MUSSOLINI FOES TO BE HERDED IN DEPORTEE CAMPS

Foreign Newspaper Men Face Prison Peril.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.)

ROME, Nov. 6.—Italy awoke today to the realization that the opposition to Fascism, far from being crushed, was more dangerous than ever.

Publication of the new laws and decrees for the "safety of the state" in the Fascist press this morning revealed how strong and extensive are the illegal underground efforts against the government. Driven entirely under the ground within the last eighteen months, the opposition turned from parliamentary action to guns and bombs.

There is no longer any doubt in the mind of the Fascist authorities that the four attempts against Premier Mussolini were closely connected, one with another. The plans were hatched by exiles abroad and the opposition leaders at home to lay low the man who through his own wonderful personality and diplomacy and far sightedness placed Fascism at the rudder of Italy.

Deportation Laws Like Czar's.

In the opinion of Fascist leaders the assassination attempts are an admission by the opposition leaders that they can do nothing unless Premier Mussolini is removed. Perchance the severity of the measures directed against these plots was not conceived to control isolated acts of a mad woman or an adolescent youth, with tendencies toward insanity, but to crush the dangerous, widespread criminal net whose object is death to Fascism and the duce.

The discretionary powers given the police to deport for political offenses or opinions are similar to those existing in Russia before the war. The police deportation act, which will be rushed through parliament, to become later part of the new police laws, provides for two sorts of deportation.

Plans Colonies for Deportees.

The first, or light deportation, forces banishment to a certain locality within continental Italy, where the banished will have the right to live in freedom, but which he must not leave.

The second, or heavy deportation, calls for exile in one of Italy's island penal colonies—Pantelleria, Tremits, Ustica or Lipadi.

Article 5 of the safety of state law provides for the punishment of any persons guilty of spreading abroad false, exaggerated or malicious reports concerning internal conditions of Italy.

May Imprison Correspondents.

This measure also touches newspaper correspondents on duty in Italy. Previously, correspondents of foreign newspapers could be invited to leave the country at the discretion of the government. Now they can be punished with jail sentences of five to fifteen years.

Article 6 provides that Italians or foreigners who commit such acts abroad can be tried if they ever set foot on Italian soil, whether or not they have been tried abroad.

When the chamber of deputies meets Tuesday the text of the laws will be laid before the deputies, after which Premier Mussolini will take the floor to deliver what promises to be one of the most important speeches of his career.

STIRS BRITISH FEARS

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—British official opinion is uneasy about the progress of events in Italy and the fear openly expressed of an early outbreak which may sweep away the Fascist government, introducing chaos.

Alternatively, it is feared that Premier Benito Mussolini, to save his position in Italy, may be forced to indulge in some foreign adventure dangerous to world peace. The disclosures of the last two days of the connection of Italian agents with the plot against the Spanish dictator, also has created a bad impression here.

While the officials of the British government all are of the opinions just stated, Sir Austen Chamberlain, the British foreign secretary, since meeting the Italian premier, seems bewitched by the duce's personality and refuses to believe the Fascist power is in any danger.

Seeks Excuse to Attack Turkey.

Reports from many quarters show Premier Mussolini's agents all over Europe are conducting propaganda in favor of Italy's expansion, particularly in Turkey, and it is now quite evident that the Roman policy envisages an attack on Turkey at the first excuse, with the object of robbing it of territories in Asia Minor suitable for Italian settlements.

From Paris it is learned that the Italian ambassador has insisted that if France wishes to retain Italy's friendship and secure Italian support for the French aims in Morocco and Tunis, it must leave Turkey to its fate. Foreign Minister Aristide Briand is known to have a soft spot for the Turks and so far has resisted the pressure of the Italians in this direction.

CATALONIA QUIET BUT READY FOR A REVOLUTION

Only Surface of Spanish Province Peaceful.

[Here is the first of a series of articles embodying The Tribune correspondent's findings in Catalonia after a month's investigation during the visit of King Alfonso and Gen. Primo de Rivera that has thrown Spain's eternal trouble area again into high relief.]

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.)

BARCELONA, Spain, Nov. 4.—[Delayed.]—After three years of the Spanish directorate's gag rule, Catalonia is so quiet that it is getting on its own nerves. At the same time it has grown to be a greater menace to the existing order of things in Spain than it has ever been in the quarter century during which the awakening national consciousness of these 2,000,000 people has given the Spaniard bad dreams.

Gen. Primo de Rivera found Catalonia a troubled autonomist, but no more, and in three years has done Spain the doubtful service of rendering it enforcedly docile and passionately separatist. Catalonia today for the first time is a potential revolutionary force in Spain, which is of vast import at a time when a not very strong push is required to shove over the dictatorship and perhaps oven the monarchy.

A Dictator's Boast to King.

Outward appearances alone justify the Spanish dictator's boast to his king that he is well on the road to Castilianizing Catalonia and is ironing out the difficulties that from 1919 to 1923 made a no man's land, through syndicalism and autonomism, of the province that boasts formidable agricultural wealth and four-fifths of the Spanish industry, as well as the business of that unique Iberian peninsula.

Because Madrid has ceased to play it as a convenient weapon against the Catalan nationalism, and because Barcelona is in the throes of an industrial crisis, the syndicalist menace with its weekly plot setting has evaporated.

But the bludgeon Gen. De Rivera is wielding to beat down all manifestations of Catalonian racial, cultural and political ambitions has succeeded chiefly in fanning the Catalan nationalism to a flame that has consumed all conservatism in it. Catalonia is ready to join the revolutionary movement emanating from Madrid.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent today watched workmen guarded by soldiery taking down all street signs in Catalan, leaving only twin placards in Castilian, where both heretofore had done duty as name plates for Barcelona's broad avenues, shaded by trees.

This is what Gen. de Rivera's accomplishment in Catalonia totals today:

Catalan, which is the language of 800,000 to 1,000,000 inhabitants of the entire province, as well as a vehicle of flourishing culture, cannot be used in schools, postoffices, courts or anywhere officially.

View of Catalan Scholar.

"The Catalan thus is a citizen of second class, since he cannot be judged or even buy stamps in the only language he knows and cares how to use," said a Catalan classical scholar with a world reputation to THE TRIBUNE.

Catalan schools, most of which are technical and artistic, established by the short-lived provincial parliament, are all closed and hundreds of teachers are out of work.

Padlocks adorn the doors of all but two of two dozen Catalan organizations, ranging from political parties to reading circles and walking clubs.

The Barcelona Bar association exercises its functions under directors appointed by the government, while the old board is exiled and sits in lonely grandeur.

With everything else prescribed, the Catalan energy is diverting to cultural fields, with astonishing results. Catalan theaters are thriving. Twelve publishers are printing books in Catalan, against four in 1923. Sales of classics translated into Catalan have increased 300 per cent in three years. The circulation of the great provincial dailies such as the Vanguardia has fallen off 25 per cent in favor of newspapers written in Catalan, which are thriving despite almost daily fines for indiscretions.

A QUIXOTIC PLEA

BY LANSING WARREN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PERPIGNAN, ON THE SPANISH FRONTIER, Nov. 6.—The energies of the departmental prefecture tonight are still directed toward uncovering the relations of Col. Francesco Macia's quixotic "conquest of Catalonia" with the so-called "Garibaldian." Col. Ricciotti Garibaldi, who was taken from Nice to Paris after the arrest of the Catalan rebel band, is reported to have confessed that he had been acting with the Fascist police officials of Italy.

Col. Macia, former Spanish deputy, Utopian and litterateur, true to the style of Don Quixote, whose example the colonel followed, today asked to see Prefect Fernand Charles of the Pyrenees-Orientales, and in a dramatic statement announced that he desired to assume personally the entire responsibility "both for organizing and directing this glorious, ill-fated blow for Catalonia's freedom," and for transporting and concealing arms and munitions which secret agents discovered in the mountain villa of Prats de Mollo, whence Col. Macia proposed to lead his adherents over the trails to glorious deaths in behalf of the Catalan independence.

Weapons Are Seized.

Guns, revolvers, carbines, 1,000 rounds of cartridges and one machine gun constitute the seizure thus far, though it is believed other caches soon will be found. This evidence is sufficient to permit the French authorities to prosecute the conspirators, but it is probable that Col. Macia will succeed in his heroic demand that himself alone be held to answer.

"Grateful as I am to France for harboring me as an exile, I wish to remain here, but I feel bound to warn you I do not intend to abandon the Catalan cause. Immediately I am released I will begin reorganizing the campaign against the oppression of Catalonia and the next one will be successful."

Col. Macia stood in a proud, aristocratic pose, his white locks tossed back, his goatee tilted out by his firm chin, and his eyes flashing with fanatical fervor. He is not treated as a criminal, but is confined by day in the departmental prefecture and by night in a hotel room under a strong guard of police agents. With him are five of his lieutenants—including Bordas de la Cuesta—all intelligent and cultured men, who regard Col. Macia almost with adoration.

The evidence shows that large portions of the funds backing Col. Macia's organization were contributed in Chile, Argentina, and Cuba, where he conducted intensive propaganda, as well as in the purely Catalan regions, but the police are unable to wrench any avowal of the exact source of his financial aid from the grizzled rebel.

Fear Capital Punishment.

In Barcelona's Catalan circles, where Col. Macia is loved but regarded as a visionary, great fear is expressed lest the French authorities should turn Col. Macia and his aids over to Spain, which probably would mean swift and vicious capital punishment. His movement is popular, but is not considered seriously.

One Barcelona Catalan told THE TRIBUNE:

"Col. Macia is just mad enough to get himself foolishly killed without aiding our cause in the least."

who appreciate the value of appearing at their best, wear rimless glasses . . .

There was a time when men of business thought a certain indifference in matters of dress an asset. Millions are spent now in "dressing up" merchandise and windows, in the construction and furnishing of fine business quarters, and—modern business men overlook no detail of their own personal appearance . . . WET VICTORIES DO NOT MODIFY VOLSTEAD ACT

Issue Will Live for 1928 Campaign.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

As the result of the congressional election last Tuesday the question of the modification of the prohibition law stands forth as the prospective paramount issue of the Presidential election of 1928.

GOV. AL SMITH. [Newsreel Photo.]

The battle lines have been drawn and the wets on the one side and the drys on the other are girding for the fray. The test in 1928 will determine whether the nation is to continue its endeavors, unsuccessful up to date, to enforce bone dry prohibition, or is to modify the Volstead act with a view to making enforcement practicable.

See Popular Reaction.

The congressional election furnished impressive evidence of the extent of the popular reaction against Volsteadism. The reverses suffered by the Republicans which jeopardize their control of the senate in the new congress were due in no small degree to the handicaps under which the G. O. P. candidates labored wherever prohibition figured as an issue. In New York Wadsworth, tardily embracing the wet cause, could not compete with the old reliable brand of anti-prohibition dispensed under the patronage of Al Smith.

Bay State Votes Wet.

In Massachusetts a wet Democrat beat a dry Republican senator, while in Maryland and Missouri wet Republican senators were defeated by wetter Democrats. In Pennsylvania and Wisconsin dry Republican senators already had been beaten in the primaries by wet opponents, who won in the election on Tuesday.

On the prohibition referenda Wisconsin, New York, and Illinois voted overwhelmingly wet and were joined by such states in the arid west as Montana and Nevada. The reaction against Volsteadism in these far western states in the territory from which the eighteenth amendment sprang is perhaps the most significant development in the modification movement.

So far as the Seventieth congress is concerned the three senate seats gained by the wets in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts and the half dozen wet members gained in the house and the wet victories in the referenda will settle nothing. The wets will still be far short of the majority of each house necessary for modification of the Volstead act.

Significance of Vote.

The real significance of the wet gains in membership of congress and the wet victories in the referenda is to be measured by the shadow they cast athwart the 1928 election. Had the wets failed to register these advances a decided crimp would have been put in the modification cause. As it turned out the wet victories last Tuesday put the modification issue on the map and assured it a hearing in 1928. The election of 1926, was only the skirmishing before the real battle of 1928 on the question of mitigating the rigors of bone dry prohibition.

The fight from now on will be to swing one national party or the other or both into line for modification. There will be a showdown between the wets and the drys of each party on the nomination of the candidate for President and the prohibition declaration of the platform.

New York Governor Looms.

It is in the Democratic party that the wets feel they already have a running start for the achievement of their end. Gov. Al Smith of New York, who is as wet as the Atlantic and the progenitor of the leading modification proposal, which is to allow the individual states to define intoxicating liquor, looms up as the foremost contender for the Democratic nomination for President.

It also appears not unlikely that the Democratic national convention will abolish the two-thirds and unit rule governing nominations and require only a simple majority for the naming of the candidate. There is widespread conviction that if this should be done it will be impossible to prevent the nomination of Smith despite the prejudice against him in the south because of the fact that he is wringing wet and a Roman Catholic.

If, however, it should prove impossible to put Smith over, the wets, according to present indications, would turn to Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, who is as wet as Smith but a Protestant and a southerner.

The dry Democrats from south and west who fought under the banner of McAdoo in 1924 are preparing for another desperate struggle to prevent Smith or any other wet from being nominated.

G. O. P. Thinks of Concessions.

At the same time that the Democrats are struggling with the vexed question of prohibition modification, the Republicans will be trying to decide what concessions, if any, they are to make to the reaction against Volsteadism. The Republican party long has been the stronghold of the drys and the partner of the Anti-Saloon league. For several years, however, the wet sentiment in the party has been gaining in volume and the hold of the Anti-Saloon league on the G. O. P. has been weakening. In the next Republican national convention the wets will be sufficiently numerous, it now seems certain, to make a formidable fight for a modification plank and the nomination of a candidate in harmony therewith.

If President Coolidge should be a candidate for renomination his views on modification will become of the greatest importance. It is known that he does not look with favor on the state option plan, as he regards it impractical to have 48 different standards of intoxicating liquor. This does not mean, however, that he is opposed to any modification.

Speaker Longworth of the house of representatives, who looms up as a Republican presidential possibility for 1928, is a pronounced wet.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, another piece of presidential timber on the Republican wood lot, leans in the other direction. Vice President Dawes and Frank Lowden have not disclosed their attitude on modification.

EDWARDS SEES WET VICTORY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Tuesday's revolt against Volsteadism not only assures the nomination of Gov. Al Smith for the presidency by the Democrats in 1928, but will force President Coolidge to recede from his "uncompromising dry stand," or give way to a more liberal Republican candidate, according to Senator Edward I. Edwards [Dem., N. J.].

Senator Edwards picks Speaker Nicholas Longworth as the only Republican capable of giving Gov. Smith a battle. "If the Democratic party cannot win with 'Al' Smith in 1928, the nomination isn't worth having—he is the only man in the country today who can command the respect of a party out to win," he added.

Evidence that the country is ready to deal with the prohibition question is seen, according to Senator Edwards, in the defeat of Republican senatorial candidates who emphasized "Coolidge economy and national prosperity," and evaded the real issue.

The most significant warning to the Republican party, Edwards concluded, is found in the repudiation of prohibition in its present form by the voters in five states.

DRY AGENTS RAID COUNTY BUILDING

Byl checking up liquor seized in raid on one of Sweitzer's offices that caused panic in county building. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Dry Agents Cause Uproar by Raid on County Building Bar

A barroom on the second floor of the county building was uncovered yesterday by two dozen prohibition agents in a raid upon the tax extension department in room 217 of County Clerk R. M. Sweitzer's department. It was revealed that three men had been selling whisky to the 150 employés of the department in a vault opening off the department which lacked only sawdust and a brass rail to make it an old fashioned taproom.

The three alleged bartenders were arrested and about eleven pints of liquor found in their lockers and desks were seized. They were William Dessow, said to be a clerk in the board of local improvements; Fred Haverkamp, recently discharged from the tax extension department, and Anthony McVeady, 6645 North Marshfield avenue, clerk in the tax extension department. They were arraigned before a United States commissioner and accused of violating the Volstead act.

Raid Excites Officials.

The excitement in other county departments aroused by the raid was intense. Throughout the eleven floors, the tinkle of breaking glass was audible as frightened officials dumped the contents of their lockers into drains. The agents, however, made no search beyond the second floor.

The agents were led by Alexander Jamie, chief investigator for Prohibition Administrator E. C. Yellowley. They were armed with a search warrant from Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson which they obtained on affidavits by Agents Daniel R. Vaccarilli and Robert McNaught, who said they had made purchases of liquor in the tax extension department.

The raid was said to be particularly exciting, from an official standpoint, because just now the fuse is sputtering on the first of Assistant District Attorney Hope Thompson's federal indictment bombs, due to explode this week.

If true bills now reported to be before the federal jury are returned as indictments, in accordance with the usual procedure, the excitement in the county's half of the big structure will spread to the city hall—according to rumors in federal circles yesterday.

Mr. Thompson, installed to "clean up Cook county and the Chicago police department," remained non-communicative yesterday, but continued to grind away at his task of evidence gathering.

County Clerk Coöperates.

County Clerk Sweitzer, who has control of the department raided yesterday, said he was astonished at the revelation made by the agents. He accompanied the raiders in their search of lockers and desks and promised to cooperate in every way to help the federal men. He immediately discharged McVeady, the only man under his control. Haverkamp was fired last October for drinking and inefficiency, he said.

There was no warning of the raid. Shortly before noon the force of federal men poured into the county building and leaped up the stairs to the second floor. Guards were posted at every entrance to the tax extension department and the agents then entered the room.

As the agents entered they saw the vault in which the liquor had been sold. They entered and found Dessow on the point of pouring a drink for a customer. Vaccarilli said he had bought several drinks from Dessow in the last few weeks.

Heavy Drinking on Saturdays.

The other two men were pointed out by agents as those who had sold drinks to them and they were also taken into custody. The liquor confiscated was found in their desks. Each was held in $1,000 bail.

It was said by agents that each Saturday afternoon there have been drunken scenes in the tax extension department when the liquor flowed freely from the vault barroom. They declared they had also made investigations in other county building departments but apparently had found no sales of intoxicants.

When news of the raid spread throughout the county building, hundreds of employés jammed the corridors on the second floor to watch the proceedings.

TENANTS START FIGHT ON JAZZ PALACE NOISES

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Hotel and apartment residents living between 53d and 59th streets and 6th and 8th avenues were discussing today the advisability of taxpayers' action to close some of the night clubs in their neighborhood as public nuisances. They have concluded that they must make a concerted move against the jazz palaces if they hope to stay in their apartments and suites without losing sleep.

Many tenants notified managers of apartment houses and hotels that they did not sleep a wink on Friday night, that it was impossible to sleep with from two to five night club jazz orchestras going at full blast, and that they regretted they were compelled to vacate rooms overlooking the roofs of buildings occupied by night clubs.

NAB AUTOIST WITH LIQUOR.

Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 6.—William S Mack 26, of South Chicago, was arrested here today charged with transporting liquor and with speeding.

FELLED BY IRON PIPE IN QUARREL OVER PARKED CAR

Hyde Park police are hunting Harry Bernstein, 23 years old, 4631 Drexel boulevard, accused of assaulting Frank Madison, a caretaker at the home of Henry L. Newhouse, 4623 Drexel boulevard, in an argument over Bernstein's right to park his automobile in the driveway leading to the garage on the Newhouse place. Madison was knocked unconscious by blows from a piece of gas pipe, but was revived and is reported recovering. The trouble started when Madison ordered Bernstein, who lives next door, to drive away a truck from which radio parts were being unloaded. Bernstein, after the attack, sped away in the truck owned by his employer, J. M. Braverman, 4646 Cottage Grove avenue, a radio dealer.

DOUBLE DECKED LOOP URGED IN SUBWAY'S PLACE

Delano Says Plan Is More Cheap and Practical.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Frederic A. Delano urges "a by-pass" street system for the relief of congestion in the loop. He would eliminate part of the grade crossings and increase the capacity of the downtown streets four-fold by elevating the north and south streets only. This he recommends for all streets between Wells street and Wabash avenue and between Wacker drive and Polk street or Roosevelt road. This would necessitate the tearing down of the loop on the north, east and south sides. He would parallel the Wells street elevated with another in Market street.

Mr. Delano is a former Chicago railroad president and pioneer member of the Chicago plan commission, who now lives in Washington and New York. He is now chairman of both the Washington plan commission and the New York regional plan commission.

Questions Subway Plan.

His suggestions come in the form of an open letter from his position as a detached observer to the Commercial club, Chicago plan commission, and Association of Commerce. Mr. Delano questions the advisability of subways in Chicago. In his letter, he discusses various methods proposed for relieving congestion and then continues:

"Among the more radical solutions which have been suggested is the construction of subways to relieve streets of street car traffic. My study of the results of subways in New York and in Boston, and their cost, leads me to argue against this solution. The cost of subways is enormous—in New York city from $7,000,000 to $15,000,000 per mile.

"In Chicago, while the material to be excavated can be more cheaply handled, the building of subways will jeopardise many foundations and throw an unknown burden of consequential damages upon the city. Furthermore, the cost of taking care of sewers, water pipes, electric and telephone conduits and many other services that are now below the street level runs into very stiff figures.

Level Streets an Advantage.

"On the other hand, Chicago is so flat and lies so near to the lake level that it might well be suggested that her subways be built above ground, a thought not original with me. The only advantage of subways is their avoidance of grade crossings, and therefore a subway above ground level to be effective must equally avoid grade crossings, and this can be readily accomplished by using the present street level for east and west street traffic, and establishing a north and south street level some 20 feet above it, with suitable ramp connections only at rare intervals, in the center of the blocks."

Regarding the cost and capacity created Mr. Delano says:

"The cost of rearranging the building fronts on the north and south arteries is insignificant when compared to the cost of subsurface subways, while the elimination of grade crossings at all street intersections between the north and south and the east and west streets will multiply by four fold the traffic capacity of the present street system."

Mr. Delano asserts that the city has full power to establish street grades and one of the advantages of his plan is that it can be carried on progressively.

"If Chicago is seriously considering a centennial exposition in the near future, worthy of herself and of the record she has made in her previous world's fair," Mr. Delano concludes, "and if she is to avoid making the kind of a fiasco that has been made in Philadelphia, this matter of internal development must be studied carefully and a solution arrived at with as little delay as possible."

6 NOW HELD IN GUN FIGHT; FACE HOLDUP VICTIMS

More victims of recent robberies are to view six men held in custody at the detective bureau as the result of a pistol fight between police and three alleged bandits at Hoyne and Chicago avenues on Thursday night. Two young women taken into custody in raids immediately after the battle also are being held.

A number of stickup victims attempted unsuccessfully to identify the six men yesterday. Twelve other men picked up by raiding police squads are not believed aligned with the alleged robber gang, but were booked on disorderly charges yesterday. The girls held are Mrs. Arline Paul, 19 years old, mother of two children, and Miss Frances Gilkey, said to be from Clinton, Ill.

Julius Benjamin, 11 West Ohio street, one of the group of six held, admitted being one of the three who had planned to rob a drug store at the scene of the shooting. Frank Taylor, another of the trio, was shot five times and is at Alexian Brothers' hospital.

Asks Damages of $250,000 for Injuries in Film Work

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Suit for $250,000 damages against the Famous Players-Lasky corporation was begun here today on behalf of Harry F. Broyles, at present in a Los Angeles hospital. The complaint alleges that last June 27, while engaged by the company to appear as a sailor on the ship used in filming a motion picture off Catalina island, Cal., Broyles suffered several fractured ribs, a broken arm and collarbone, and internal injuries as the result of a dynamite explosion.

Evanston Police Squads Seek Negro Desperado

Several picked squads from the Evanston police department last night started search for James Frierson, a colored desperado, after he had shot and wounded James Cowings, colored. It was reported that Frierson was armed with two revolvers and had threatened to kill any policeman he met. He bears the officers a grudge because his place at 1812 West Railroad avenue was closed for violations of the prohibition laws.

GEORGE, ONE OF 6 FAMOUS HANLONS, KILLED BY TAXI

Hanlon, who was nearing his eighty-third birthday, had been living for some time at a home for the aged. Of the troupe of acrobats the six Hanlon brothers, who won applause in a death defying act, only one survives.

Spectators Perilled as Walls Crash in Spectacular Fire

The plant of the Reliance Picture Frame company at 1031 South Leavitt street was destroyed last night by a spectacular 4-11 fire, which enveloped the entire structure in less than ten minutes after it had been discovered. Varnish and dry wood used in the making of frames aided the spread of the flames. Several thousand spectators gathered to watch the firemen several of whom narrowly escaped death when the roof collapsed. Residents of nearby flat buildings fled to the street fearing the blaze would reach their homes.

GRIP OF DRYS ON LEGISLATURE CALLED SLIPPING

Senate Race Bared Discord in League Ranks.

Downstate politicians, who came up to Chicago for the football games yesterday, held that one result of the recent senatorial battle is the probable loosening of the grip of Anti-Saloon league officials upon the politically dry but personally wet members of the state legislature.

Old-timers who helped put through the local option law some twenty years ago pointed out that in the late campaign, the league leaders for the first time had a revolt on their hands among the rank and file led by prominent clergymen, the hottest area of the attacks and criticisms being no less a spot than classic Evanston, home of the W. C. T. U. and center of Methodism.

Discord in Own Ranks.

Heretofore, they argued, dry members have been afraid to get up and make a peep against the league bosses, no matter what their program, unless they wanted to court a fight with the league for reelection, and the criticism by drys of the league's methods has revealed to the lawmakers that it is vulnerable among its own constituency.

The effect of the fight, they conjecture, is not only to increase the strength of the modificationists but to weaken the old hammerlock of the league officials both among members who are politically and personally dry and those who vote dry but personally attend the room parties that have been the place of the old-fashioned irrigation stations in the legislatures of most states.

Recount On Tomorrow.

Offical canvass of last Tuesday's vote starts tomorrow at the election commission offices. The main interest is over the county treasurership. Martin J. O'Brien, Democrat, had a lead of 247 votes on the unofficial police returns, but his managers next day said errors had been discovered in the tabulation which would give O'Brien a lead of 7,182 votes. Managers of George F. Harding, Republican, maintain their candidate won, and the canvass will be closely followed by both sides.

Gossip among the Democrats yesterday was that Emil Kreutgen, former member of the board of education, may be offered the city controllership in case the canvass shows Mr. O'Brien, now controller, to have won. There was also talk that Mr. Kreutgen might be offered the vacancy on the board of local improvements, made by the election of Mitchell C. Robin as Probate court clerk.

On the mayoralty, politicians on all sides are waiting for an announcement one way or the other from Mayor Dever, as to whether he will run. Among many of the big chiefs, the sentiment is Dever will be the candidate. The mayor has told some intimates that he does not want a second term. Organization men, especially from the privilege wards, are saying he won't run. After the mayor returns from Excelsior Springs the understanding is he will shortly make known his intentions.

William Hale Thompson led a group on the usual outing downriver yesterday, the embarkation point being La Salle. Senator-elect Frank L. Smith and Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom, whose names were on the publicity sheet, were not at the train, and it was said they would join the party somewhere downstream. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe and Joseph P. Savage, defeated candidate for county judge, went down to the depot to see them off, but stayed at home, although on the typewritten list of prominent guests. The mayoralty is expected to be put in the incubator on the trip.

High-Handed Enforcement Must Cease, Andrews Orders

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Sharply attacking the unwarranted use of pistols, smoke screens, and threatening and insulting language in the enforcement of the prohibition law, Lincoln C. Andrews, prohibition administrator, today announced that the dry chief of the Washington district and three agents have been ousted for conduct unbecoming federal officers.

At the same time, he issued a sharp warning to his field force in which he declared that the ax will fall in all cases where agents fail to obey the law in enforcing the prohibition amendment. Andrews further ordered that dry agents must not stop automobiles and search them except for unquestionable reasons indicating that the car is engaged in illicit practice.

Stopped Car of Official.

High handed practices of dry agents, which finally came to roost in the treasury department itself, resulted in the local shakeup and the temporary retirement of Robert L. Livingston, prohibition administrator for the district.

Livingston and his three agents are charged with having held up the automobile in which Charles R. Nash, assistant commissioner of internal revenue, was returning to Washington some days ago. According to Andrews all four of the dry sleuths were guilty of inexcusable conduct. In a statement issued today he charges that they drew their pistols and used threatening and insulting language and methods absolutely without cause or excuse.

"Agents Fitzpatrick, Carter, and Cook, who participated in the actual stopping of the car, did not announce themselves as federal officers or show their badges," Andrews said. "They might easily have been mistaken for bandits and, had the occupants of the car been armed, their ridiculous conduct might easily have resulted in a shooting scrape."

Acted Without Cause.

The dry chief also rebuked another group of agents who signalled to Livingston that the machine used by Nash was a bootleg car.

"The agents responsible for giving the signal that this was a bootleg car are culpable," he said, "to the extent that they acted without having reasonable grounds.

"It is definitely directed that our agents must not stop automobiles except for unquestionable reasons indicating that the car is engaged in questionable practice."

Andrews emphatically denied that he had taken action because the owner of the automobile which was held up belonged to a government officer. According to friends of Nash, the agents rushed up to the car and cried out: "Stick 'em up, big boy." The gents, it is charged, used a smoke screen in stopping the car. The ambush took place in the early morning on a lonely road, it is charged, and Nash believed he was being held up. The three agents were dismissed from the service and Livingston was allowed to resign.

HALL DETECTIVE BRIBED TO QUIT CASE, HE SAYS

Slain Rector's, Singer's Clothes Exhibited.

last spring. That, at last, was "all" for Dickman and he left the stand and the courtroom with quick steps.

Matching this development of the case were letters which Senator Simpson read into the record. They were written by Mrs. Hall to her brother, Henry, on Aug. 15 and on Aug. 30. They were penned after her own arrest and the arrest of Willie Stevens, but before the grand jury had indicted Henry Stevens for murder.

There was a hint of reproach in the letters because of Henry's failure to visit Willie in the Somerset jail. She referred to the arrest of her eccentric brother and also to the arrest of her cousin, Henry de la Bruyere Carpender, member of the New York stock exchange, who was indicted but is to be tried later. She quoted Willie Stevens as saying, at the time of his arrest, not to tell Henry, "as he would not come near me."

In order to get the letters into the record of the trial, and thus later on be able to stress his interpretations of them, Senator Simpson put Charlotte Mills, the 20 year old daugnter of the murdered woman, on the stand. The girl, who is attending the trial of her mother's alleged slayers, went to the witness chair in the manner of an expert.

Familiar with Writing.

"You are familiar with the handwriting of Mrs. Hall, aren't you?" said the senator. "She's written correspondence to you?"

"Yes," said Charlotte.

"Look at these letters and let the court know if they are in the hand of Mrs. Hall."

The witness identified them and then the prosecutor offered them in evidence. The Hall-Stevens lawyers quickly got possession of the missives and read them. They entered objections to the reading of the missives, but were overruled. Robert H. McCarter, senior counsel, declared the letters had been seized "in a raid on the home of Henry Stevens." Again the defense was overruled.

Proud of Willie.

Senator Simpson then read the letters. The first one was, in part, as follows:

"Dear Henry: Perhaps you have seen by the papers that Willie and Harry have been arrested and are now in the Somerset county jail. Willie has been so incensed at you for not coming up instantly when you heard of my arrest that he at once said when they came for him, 'don't send word to Henry, he would not come near me.'

"I admit that I have been greatly embarrassed by the many questions of why you have not been here. I would not say his wife would not let him come. It would have been too much of a slap at Ethel's intelligence and at your affection and loyalty.

"It was terrific when they took Willie, but he has been brave and fine, and we are all proud of him. It hurts me awfully to write all this, but after all, you are my brother.

"Your affectionate sister,

"FRANCES NOEL HALL."

Second Letter Read.

"The senator then read the second letter which was also addressed to her brother Henry and discussed the hearing at which bail was denied Willie Stevens and Mr. Carpender. In this letter Mrs. Hall asked Henry to sanction as co-trustee of Willie's inheritance, the use of some of his money to defray legal expenses.

Another emotional crisis for the defendants, or for Mrs. Hall at least, came in the closing hours of the day's session, when the state introduced the clothing worn by the clergyman and by Mrs. Mills when they were killed. This came during the testimony of George D. Totten, formerly county detective for Somerset, who identified all the exhibits in the case which were carried over from the investigation of 1922.

Senator Simpson lifted the various articles of clothing from a pasteboard box, piece by piece. He held them aloft for Totten to examine and identify. He produced the rector's panama hat. It was soiled and battered. Then the coat, the trousers, the vest, and his eye glasses. As the prosecutor did this, Timothy N. Pfeiffer of defense counsel moved quickly over and stood in front of Mrs. Hall. He bent over as though conferring with her.

Obstruct Widow's View.

Senator Case also moved into line between the clothing and Mrs. Hall. The posts taken by the defense lawyers did not escape Senator Simpson.

"I want the defendants to see this clothing," he said, "and their view is being obstructed by defense counsel. I object."

Mr. Pfeiffer wheeled, but kept himself in front of Mrs. Hall. He was flushed, while Mrs. Hall's face, naturally pale, seemed to have gained in whiteness. She did not cry, however, and continued to look down at the floor.

"I am purposely standing here——" said Senator Case, but did not finish when Mr. Pfeiffer stepped behind him and said something. The clothing was then entered in evidence.

Charlotte Sheds Tears.

Charlotte Mills, out in the audience, deserted her pencil and pad. She hung her head and seemed to be crying, as she dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief.

Another high light of the day came in the testimony of Mrs. Anna K. Bearman, a cousin of Mrs. Hall. Mrs. Bearman testified that a short time after the murder she sent Mrs. Hall's gray coat to Philadelphia to be dyed black. She said there were no stains on it; that it was dyed for mourning.

Woman Entered House.

William Phillips, who was a night watchman opposite the Hall home at the time of the murder, testified that at 2:45 the morning after the crime he saw a woman entering the Hall home. He was unable to identify her, he said. Subsequently the sworn statement which Mrs. Hall made to the Middlesex county authorities four years ago was read into the record by Prosecutor John E. Toolan.

The statement showed that Mrs. Hall related her movements on the night of Sept. 14 and had been told by Detective Totten that Phillips had reported seeing a woman enter the Hall home. Up to that time Mrs. Hall had not disclosed that she had left her home. When Totten mentioned Phillips' statement she remembered and said that she and Willie Stevens had gone, at about 2 a. m., or 2:15 a. m., to see whether the missing rector was at his church, the Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Tells of Spying.

Efforts of the defense to indicate that Mrs. Marie Demarest, recalled at the opening of court for cross-examination, was a "nosey busy body" failed as she held to the story she had told the previous day of seeing Ralph Gorsline and Mrs. Minna Clark, members of Dr. Hall's church, spying on the pastor and Mrs. Mills as they sat on a bench in Buccleuch park.

It may be two weeks before Mrs. Jane Gibson, the state's chief witness, can take the stand. She told of witnessing the crime, and her story was the foundation for the indictment returned against the four defendants.

Senator Simpson announced tonight, however, that he had retained Dr. William J. Arlitz of Hoboken to act as a specialist for the state. Dr. Arlitz examined Mrs. Gibson in the Somerville General hospital late tonight and his report will be made to Senator Simpson tomorrow. The prosecutor said that he hoped to put Mrs. Gibson on the stand either Wednesday or Thursday, despite the opinion of the physicians.

JAMES MILLS WITNESS AT MURDER TRIAL

PRINCESS MOPS FLOORS; SAYS IT BEATS POTSDAM

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Scrubbing floors as an avocation is infinitely preferable to sitting in the princely halls of Potsdam, says Princess Alexandra Victoria, former wife of Prince August Wilhelm, the former kaiser's fourth son, from whom she was divorced in 1920.

The princess, who is now the wife of former Commander Ruemann of the imperial navy, recently was found cleaning floors by a prominent Berlin lawyer who unexpectedly called upon her at her home in Munich.

"No doubt you are surprised to see me doing housework," the princess said, smiling, "but, believe me, I am a thousand times happier managing my own home and supporting myself than I ever was when breathing the muggy air of the Potsdam court."

Princess Alexandra depends on her artistic skill for her livelihood, as her husband, who is a simple bourgeois, has merely his officer's pension. Her skill as a painter of landscapes and portraits is considered unusual by critics.

Her Munich home is a snug, comfortable apartment, in which she does her own housework and cooking.

Senators Balk Bill to Give Obregon Second Term

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Mexico City, Nov. 5.—A little group of senators is holding up the constitutional amendment designed to make former President Alvaro Obregon eligible for another term. The measure went through the chamber of deputies by a vote of 171 to 7. Now it is proposed in the senate to amend the measure, extending the presidential term to six years. The anti-reelectionist elements loudly predict that on the showndown in the senate the reform will fail of passage.

The wounded boy was taken to the Bridewell hospital. Placzek said he did not see the shooting, but that one of the boy's companion had carried a .22 rifle. Before the police arrived the boys had fled.

SAYS PUBLICITY IN MURDER CASES THROTTLES CRIME

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Complete reports of such crimes as the Hall-Mills murder case fulfill a useful social function and the newspapers in giving them are "rendering a necessary service in the vast hospital of our human world," is the opinion expressed today by the Rev. Dr. James H. Snowden, former professor of the Western Theological seminary.

"Such publication," said Dr. Snowden, "tends to deter the commission of crimes, for public exposure is one of the greatest punishments of misbehavior in the higher social circles and the fear of it acts as a powerful deterrent. If all such evil deeds were smothered in silence and secrecy, they would multiply and run riot in the dark."

Denmark to Vote Dec. 2; Expect Conservative Gain

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 6.—The day of the Danish election has been fixed at Dec. 2. The conservatives expect gains, while the socialists seem due to lose heavily.

VOTE TO PROBE CHARGE AGAINST DANISH BISHOP

Denver, Colo., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Investigation of charges made by Methodist ministers of the Denmark conference of the Methodist Episcopal church against Bishop Anton Bast of Copenhagen was ordered here today by the board of bishops of the church at its regular semi-annual meeting. Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Detroit was named by Bishop J. F. Berry of Philadelphia, senior bishop of the board, to conduct the investigation and will leave for Copenhagen late in December or early in 1927.

Bishop Bast was released from prison in August, after having served a three months' sentence for an offense against the Danish law regarding financial appeals. Various charges of misuse of money or misappropriation were dismissed on the motion of the Danish prosecutor. It is the charges made by the ministers prior to and at the time of the trial that will be investigated.

JOE SALTIS WITH MILD 'NO' DENIES HE KILLED FOLEY

Gang Leader Testifies in His Own Defense.

Joe Saltis was on the witness stand yesterday.

For months he had been pictured as a killer and the leader of ruthless beer gangsters. He was being tried on an indictment for killing Mitters Foley, and two witnesses said they saw him do it.

It was now Saltis' turn to have his say. A doctor and an X-ray photographer had furnished something of an alibi for him. His co-defendant, Frank Koncil, had denied participation in the murder.

Saltis steps up to the witness stand beside Judge Harry B. Miller. He is sworn to tell the truth and he sits down.

Well Dressed and Calm.

A large, broad shouldered man is Saltis. He is well dressed.

His voice, as he gives his name and address, is surprisingly mild, compared to the snap and vigor which otherwise appear to characterize him, and he doesn't seem to fit the popular conception of a gang leader as he says "No" to the question of his counsel, Attorney W. W. O'Brien:

"Did you shoot John Foley?"

The "no" came at once, nothing hesitant about it, but the "no" was just a negative, not the roar of denial of a leader, but the meek protest of a chastened subordinate.

He proceeds easily enough as he answers Attorney O'Brien's questions as to his whereabouts at the time of the Foley murder. Occasionally he uses a "dis" or a "dat," but in the main he expresses himself fairly well.

"What was your business before you were arrested?" Special Prosecutor Lloyd Heth asked him when O'Brien finished.

"I refuse to answer on the grounds I might incriminate myself with the government," he replies, not defiantly nor sulkily, but as if his business were unimportant.

Heth asks the court to direct him to answer, saying that when a defendant gives testimony in his own behalf he may not refuse to answer any questions.

Judge Miller ruled that Saltis need not answer, but after the argument Saltis was willing to answer.

"I had a saloon in Joliet," he states after telling of a job he held for 7 years prior to 1920. "I had another saloon in Chicago."

Witness Balks Again.

"What did you mean when you said you were afraid you might incriminate yourself?" Heth asked.

"I meant saloons," Saltis explained, but in a few minutes he was showing that he had meant something else. He told of going to Wausau, Wis., and replied that he wanted to buy some property, "on any lake." He said he was registered at Wausau as Frank Young and he was going to buy the property in the name of Schultz. Soon he was compelled to admit that he wasn't going to buy property and again he resorted to the "I might incriminate myself" when asked to explain why he used the name of Young.

In reply to Heth, Saltis told of owning a Marmon sedan, a Cadillac sedan, a Lincoln sedan, and four or five trucks and that the licenses for all of them were in names other than Saltis.

Alibi Witness Recalled.

When Prosecutor Heth had finished questioning Saltis, the alibi witness of the day before, Dr. E. Thomas Brand, was recalled to the stand by Prosecutor James C. O'Brien.

Dr. Brand formerly owned a drug store at Clark and Lake streets, which was closed by the government after prohibition agents said they had caught Dr. Brand selling drinks over the counter.

DEMOCRATS TO FIGHT COOLIDGE TAX REFUND PLAN

Demand Permanent and Greater Reduction.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The announcement of President Coolidge that he will urge, at the coming session of congress, a reduction of from ten to twelve per cent of income taxes, both individual and corporation, being paid this year, met with opposition from Democratic leaders today.

They declared that what was needed was an "immediate and real revision of taxes all along the line," and not merely a rebate of taxes which were in excess of the government's needs and which never should have been collected. The Democrats promised that they would "wait until the administration's bill reached congress and then make a real bill out of it." They will demand a 20 per cent reduction in 1927 taxes.

Means $180,000,000 Refund.

No official statement was made at the treasury department regarding the White House announcement. Officials there merely pointed to the fact that the refund to the tax payers would approximate $180,000,000 if the rate of reduction is fixed at 10 per cent, and to about $216,000,000 if it is made twelve per cent. It is estimated that corporation income taxes this year will total $1,000,000,000 while those of individuals will be about $800,000,000.

Senator Simmons [N. Car.], ranking Democrat on the finance committee; Representative Oldfield, Ark., ranking minority member of the ways and means committee, and Senator Swanson of Virginia united in voicing the opinion that the minority would insist upon complete tax revision, which would be immediately effective.

Senator Simmons labelled the White House announcement as "a humiliating surrender for the President and the administration." He added that it was "artificially devised to mislead the country and to deny the tax payer the full benefit of relief to which he is entitled." Senator Swanson asserted that it was "political subterfuge" and that "obviously, the Republican plan is to make a rebate now and a political revision in 1928."

Smoot Wants to Study Plan.

Senator Smoot, chairman of the finance committee, stated that the desired to make a more careful study of the probable income from the present tax bill and of the surplus which will be available, but that if it were shown there would be a surplus he would favor tax reduction.

Treasury officials indicated that the simplest way to handle the proposed refund or rebate would be to have it deducted from the first payment of the 1927 taxes, rather than to deduct it from Dec. 15 payments this year or to refund it to those who have paid in full. This would avoid the necessity of sending out millions of checks.

Senator Simmons, in a statement, argued that "there ought to be two surpluses for distribution, one of $377,000,000, which had accumulated in the treasury during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1926, notwithstanding tax reductions made in the 1926 act, and another, of $250,000,000, in prospect for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927." He declared that the latter should be returned "by a reduction in the taxes levied and not by rebates or refunds."

Ask Inheritance Tax Repeal.

He asserted that "there is a deep-seated objection in this country to rebates and refunds." He said he had an abiding confidence that both in the house and the senate there would be found a sufficient number of votes to pass a "tax reduction bill that will do full justice to American taxpayers, and not merely provide relief to a part of the taxpayers, and, in the main, to those who have not in fact paid the tax."

Immediate repeal of the federal inheritance tax at the coming session of congress will be demanded in a resolution adopted at a meeting held here today of officials representing twenty states.

CHICAGO PRAISE FOR IT.

President Coolidge's announced intention of seeking a 10 to 12 per cent refund on income taxes paid this year brought enthusiastic praise yesterday from many of Chicago's financial leaders, who see in the refund a stimulus to business and cheer to the average income tax payer.

"President Coolidge's idea is an excellent one and should be given the utmost support in congress," George Woodruff, vice chairman of the National Bank of the Republic, declared. "A refund this year on taxes for the calendar year 1925 would in no way affect the rates to be levied next year. There is a surplus in the treasury now and it is only fair it should be refunded. Should it be found next year that a lower rate could not apply, then taxes could be levied at the existing or another rate without injuring the nation's financial status. In the meantime every class of business would be greatly benefited by the refund."

Mr. Woodruff's opinion was reflected in the statements of others who likewise saw in the realization of the plan a boon to the nation's business generally.

"Taxes on incomes should be adjusted to the needs of the treasury, and if the treasury now has a surplus, then it would be very gratifying if a refund were made," declared Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank. "I hope congress will act favorably on Mr. Coolidge's request."

George M. Reynolds, chairman of the board of directors of the Continental and Commercial bank, said "the nation is certainly entitled to the refund if the treasury can stand it."

Van Vechten Backs Plan.

"The plan is reasonable and will find great support from the financial and business leaders of the country," declared Ralph Van Vechten, president of the State Bank of Chicago. "The distribution of a surplus in the treasury would bring an untold benefit to business, which has experienced a most successful year and is hopeful of another next year."

AGED MAN HIT BY TRAIN.

Joseph Stern, 76 years old, was struck by an Illinois Central suburban train yesterday and dragged several feet. The police say he had crawled under the safety gates at 71st street and Jeffery avenue. The train caught his clothing and carried him down the track.

TICKET BROKER NABBED FOR $15 FOOTBALL SEAT

Because he sold a seat at the Illini-Chicago football game yesterday for $15 and failed to mark the price on the ticket, Harry N. Waterfall, ticket broker in the Palmer house lobby, was summoned to appear before a United States commissioner. If found guilty, he is liable to a fine of $200.

Waterfall took $15 from F. H. Smiley, a detective employed by the University of Chicago, in return for the privilege of using a season book of tickets at Stagg field yesterday afternoon. Smiley posted $15 more as a bond for return of the book after the game. The broker did not stamp on the face of the ticket the price he charged for it as required by federal law.

George Fairweather, business manager at the university, explained that the school does not accept tickets marked by scalpers and that they therefore dare not mark tickets. The university is making a campaign to stop scalping of football tickets, he explained.

WAS ORMISTON TRUNK A PLANT? KEYES WONDERS

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—An investigation was launched today into the authenticity of evidence contained in the so called Ormiston trunk. The investigation followed circulation of a report that the trunk with its sixty-seven pieces of woman's finery asserted to be the Rev. Mrs. Aimee McPherson's, may have been "discovered" in New York and shipped to the district attorney's office here as a hoax intended to affect the legal conduct of the McPherson case.

The Evening Express tonight prints:

"From investigations conducted today the following facts speak for themselves:

"District Attorney Keyes declared that a sport blouse and a handkerchief bearing the name of Paul Rader never arrived in Los Angeles in the trunk, although both were listed in the east as having been found.

"There is grave doubt as to the authenticity of the 'Dear Darling Man' letter. Mrs. McPherson has mentioned one person, a newspaper reporter, whom she suspects."

Mrs. McPherson has charged clothing was stolen from her home.

N. U. RECEIVES GIFT FILMS FOR HISTORY COURSE

Motion pictures will be used at Northwestern university to aid in the teaching of American history, it was announced yesterday. The films were presented to the history department by Frank S. Cunningham, president of Butler Bros. and a trustee of the university, who made the gift in memory of his son, Capt. Oliver Baty Cunningham, who gave up his life in the world war.

Fifteen of the series of thirty-three films have reached the university and as soon as the projector arrives lectures will begin in a special lecture room with Dean James A. James and Dr. Isaac J. Cox coöperating in the course. The films include the following subjects:

Columbus, Jamestown, The Pilgrims, The Puritans, Peter Stuyvesant, The Declaration of Independence, Yorktown, Daniel Boone, The Frontier Woman, Alexander Hamilton, and Dixie.

FOUND DEAD OF GAS.

SAND FILLS MINE ENGULFED WHEN SWAMP SETTLED

Ishpeming, Mich., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Penetrating 420 feet down into the wrecked shaft of the Barnes Hecker mine, workmen engaged in clearing the shaft encountered conditions which indicate that little water would be found below the first level on which 13 of the 51 men killed in Wednesday's disaster are believed to have perished.

Mine officials today expressed the opinion that the shaft probably is filled with sand nearly to the first level, six hundred feet below the surface. From a point 420 feet down, the workers could see a huge mass of timbers, criss-crossed in the shaft like a log jam. They estimate that this jam is about 40 feet thick, reaching nearly to the first level, and they expect to have to dig through sand to clear out the remainder of the shaft and get to the second and third levels.

Coroner William J. Blewett of Ishpeming announced today that he had selected a jury for an inquest into the mine disaster, but stated that no time had been set for the inquest.

MONEY MORALS IN POLITICS.

In a number of elections in recent years in this state the voters have had to give an ethical judgment. They have had the opportunity to fix a standard of official conduct regarding the handling of money and the results of these elections have been curious.

It has been an assumption as to the voters that they would be severe with a public man who took public money, used his office for his personal profit or fattened his friends and political supporters at public expense.

A man's relations to a public trust contain the best definition of his character. Money is a severe test of qualities and unscrupulousness with regard to it leaves a wrecked personality. There is no salvage. That is hardly true of any other human error. No other has the completely obliterating effect. Dishonor in money matters is complete dishonor. Other virtues if they can exist with the vice of money dishonesty cannot redeem the vice, but integrity in money affairs can save a person from other obliquities.

This probably is because money is the complete temptation. It represents selfishness in all its forms and gratification in nearly every form. If the supreme test of character, scrupulousness of dealing with money, particularly in trust, is applied in politics it seldom gets a positive result, more frequently a negative one.

A complete case for the true standard in public conduct is the historic one of Hamilton, sacrificing his reputation for sexual morality to prove his integrity in the handling of public funds. He did that to a committee of congress when he proved that his relations with Mrs. Reynolds explained his financial dealings with her wretched husband, a minor employé of the treasury. We are not sure now that it would not be politically advisable for a politician to explain that he had been guilty of a betrayal of public trust and thus conceal the fact that his private conduct had offended the moral code of sex.

The republic had its financial scandals from the beginning. Greed for funds obtained by public knavery was not outside the political scheme. The debt assumption scandals, the Yazoo land scandal and others in the earliest days and the scandals which disturbed the country after the civil war, in Grant's administration, proved that unscrupulous men would corrupt wherever they could for what they could get out of it. We can't see that all the moralizing about it has maintained or produced any effective public sensitiveness.

It certainly is proved in this state that a politician can be tainted and survive without much difficulty. It has been shown in the Small and Thompson administrations. The fact that Frank Smith's campaign for nomination for the senate was conducted with money taken from utility corporations whose rates he controlled did not hurt him much in the election. It may have taken 150,000 votes away from him but it left him all he needed. It did not offend the very people who would vote against any one who believed that moral conduct and a case of beer could go together in private life.

The financial relation of the candidate to his public trust was a negligible element for a majority of voters. The highest qualification a public man can have, that of scrupulous attitude toward an intrinsically sacred duty, was not seriously considered. Departures from the essential standard are regarded as explainable peccadilloes. Small has been hurt some by the fact that the Supreme court found he took the state's money by the use of a phony bank, but not a great deal as yet, if we judge by election returns.

The minority which resents such public conduct merely acts in the fashion in which political assumption would predicate the majority would act. These malfeasances are all paid for. It is the public trust which is being betrayed, which hits the people themselves, directly or indirectly. It is true that few citizens see the money taken away from them but if it required a sense of personal loss to cause resentment the affair would be on a much lower plane than if a sense of public morals caused it.

We do not know why proof that a man lacks the finest quality of private and public integrity concerns so many people so little. We know that some people accept persecution stories against all proof. We know that others say: "O, they all do it, why pick on this one?" That in itself adds to the curiosity of the situation.

The individual voter is quick enough to believe the truth of an unproved and unpublished scandal told him by another individual. His credulity seems to increase as the credibility of the story decreases. The incredulity of the mass of voters seems to grow as the credibility of the proof increases. The best substantiated case has the least political effect.

This is true in the state outside of Chicago. There are many reflections from downstate on metropolitan character and morals but always the greatest sensitiveness to public honor has been found in the city electorate and the least in the rural and small towns. Thompson did fear the consequences of acts which had been found in his administration and he is not in public office. Downstate has kept Small in office. Downstate made Smith senator. These candidates must come to Cook county with sufficient votes to wipe out the metropolitan verdict against them.

Fred Busse was politically broken down by the discoveries of misconduct in departments of city government under him. The city has maintained a standard of public honesty. The country appears indifferent to it. The honest farmer, the small town merchant, the rural banker, and the country minister pass over public acts which condemn politicians beyond redemption and by their tolerance malfeasance continues without political rebuke or check.

LESSONS JUTLAND HAS FOR US.

An article by Hector Bywater in the Atlantic Monthly emphasizes an aspect of preparedness the civilian is likely to ignore. Most of us think of naval strength crudely in terms of number of ships, perhaps in number of battleships. Few of us are likely to consider the importance of cruisers and auxiliaries, although we shall be doing that as soon as the project for another conference on naval limitation comes again into serious discussion. But when we have got as far as visualizing the navy as it were, externally, as composed of battleships, cruisers of different types, destroyers, submarines, airplane carriers, gunboats, colliers, and repair ships, we are only dealing with the surface of naval strength.

Read Mr. Bywater's discussion of the battle of Jutland and you will realise that it is not so simple as all that, even considered as material and waiving such large questions as naval policy, strategy, tactics, morale, etc. There are ships and ships. The battle of Jutland revealed among other things serious defects in the construction of some of the British ships. Mr. Bywater says the German subsurface protection was much better than the British. "It was the British custom to design ships with an eye to existing dock accommodation. New ships were built to fit old docks, in consequence of which their dimensions, and particularly their breadth, had to be circumscribed, so that less room was available for protective devices below the water line." But the Germans gave their ships the measurements required for safety and efficiency, and built new docks, if necessary, to accommodate them. Mr. Bywater asserts that Admiral Jellicoe's movements at Jutland undoubtedly were influenced by his fear that his own ships were more vulnerable to torpedo attack than the German. As it happened gun fire was the important destructive agency at Jutland, but the fear referred to must have had an unfortunate influence upon the British tactics and in the next war a superiority of defensive construction against submarine attack may be more important than in 1916.

But another phase of construction which had more dramatic results was the placing of the magazines or means of protection of the ammunition supplies. Four of the great British ships blew up suddenly before their waterline was pierced. At least three German ships were hit in the same way but did not explode. The Germans, it seems, had experimented in protection against this danger and devised a method of avoiding it which was evidently reliable under conditions of battle.

Mr. Bywater says also that the German gunnery was better than the British and that the German shells showed higher penetration and disruptive power. We cite these points only to emphasize the fact that preparedness involves a constant industry and inventive enterprise in the perfection of the instruments of war. We might have a paper equality of ships but when the test came there might be a tragic revelation of inferiority in fact. Ship construction, munition quality, fire control instruments, devices for perfection of range and for locating the enemy above and below the water, protection within and without—in short, innumerable details of efficiency enter into the problem of preparedness. We cannot afford to assume that because we are an inventive and progressive people our naval and military preparedness will be up to our reputation. We sat on the rim of the European cataclysm for three years, yet when we went in we had no cannon, machine guns or automatic rifles up to the standard of our allies. We had to reconstruct even our infantry formations and to learn artillery technique from the French. We spent an enormous sum on airplane manufacture and got none over in time to fight. In short, we were not only unprepared for modern warfare in terms of quantity of men or ships, but also as to means and methods. Our ships showed no serious structural defects so far as the public knows, and acquitted themselves well so far as they were tested. But they were in no major action such as Coronel or Jutland.

Our point is that preparedness is not only a responsibility of congress. The professional soldier and sailor have their share. The general staffs of the army and navy, the war and navy departments, must of course work within the financial limits of the provision made for them by congress and within the outlines of such policy as congress has adopted. But within these limits there is a tremendous responsibility for constant study, for alert observation, for initiative, inventiveness, perpetual self-criticism and attention to detail. Says Mr. Bywater: "The British navy had the biggest ships and the heaviest guns, but its controllers appear to have lacked the infinite capacity for taking pains which was so marked a feature of the whole German organization." Says Admiral Cecil Lambert, who was a member of the admiralty at the time of Jutland: "The want of success at Jutland was due mainly to the fact that ship for ship, gun for gun, engine for engine, there was a higher standard of efficiency in the German fleet than any which the British could claim. The great asset on which the British admiral could rely was the incomparable personnel of his ships; otherwise it was indeed a melancholy experience to find at the outbreak of the war that all the public money which had been expended in parliament, on the assurance that they were getting the best that money and science could provide, had produced such meager results."

May we never make the same discovery. That will largely depend on the spirit of enterprise and progress in the services themselves. That spirit must be strong enough to resist discouragement and the greatest enemy of efficiency, routine.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF THE RELIGIOUS EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

BY SIR ROBERT A. FALCONER.

(President of the Religious Education association. President of the University of Toronto, Canada.)

Art, music, literature, and religion have no national boundaries. They are fundamental to the human mind and heart and cannot be hemmed in by geographical lines. Preëminently it is true that Canada and the United States are bound to each other in the most intimate relationships. Therefore, when the Religious Education association, which originated in Chicago and still has its headquarters and library there at 306 North Michigan avenue, reached its hand of greeting to us on the Canada side of the North American continent, we eagerly grasped it and we are now one in this great organization.

Last March the annual meeting of the association was held in Toronto, and we regarded it as very successful. In fact, the formation of the association was warmly welcomed at its inception in 1903 by many of the leaders of religious thought in the dominion. The moral, religious, and educational problems of the United States and Canada are so similar that an organization of this kind may give inspiration and direction to those of us in the two countries who are concerned with their solution.

The problems which the Religious Education association is trying to meet are becoming more obvious every day. Our best thinkers are warning us that our education is in need of enrichment by a warmer religious life. As a mere means of mental and technical efficiency, education may put weapons into the hands of those who have gone far in the public school. It may turn out the exploiter, the manipulator for his own selfish ends of stocks, investments, public office, or the souls and bodies of men and women. Indeed, it is difficult to say when a man passes into the criminal class. He may seem to be respectable one day and be in the penitentiary the next.

Unfortunately, the world has too many who can see the good only in their own race, religion, party, or even family. They cling to them with indiscriminate adherence as possessing the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; whereas in these persons the fine ore is imbedded in so much useless rock that it is difficult to extract from the vein sufficient to be of real value to the community.

Protestantism easily runs into sectarianism. This is its besetting sin. What may have been a necessity is so no longer. Aspects of truth were in danger of being blurred or neglected, and as they were emphasized by strong leaders denominations appeared from time to time. When, however, the truth that had been neglected became a possession of the larger church, the need for denominational witness lessened. The denomination is sometimes called a communion, and truthfully so, in so far as within it there is fellowship among its members. But too often the intensity has meant separation from others in a spirit of superiority as regards the possession of the truth and criticism of their conduct. Thus the smaller fellowship has become an obstacle to the larger communion of the saints, the attainment of which is an accepted article in the Christian faith.

Surely there is among the Protestant churches today a wide enough agreement as to the essentials of Christian belief and morals for them to make greater coöperative effort for the religious education of their own children. Sectarianism has been mitigated, progress is seen in the finer spirit that is abroad. We still cling with affection to our own church. By our inheritance, upbringing, and our social surrounding we have acquired an attitude to life which is most fully satisfied by our own denomination. Our fathers and mothers lived and died in it; our childhood friends belonged to it; our sentiments as to right and wrong, fitting or unfitting, were cultivated with it; our hopes for the future were cherished by it. We love its services, we take pleasure in the greeting and fellowship of its members, we find that its memories quicken the best that is in us. An old church, a familiar hymn, the sight of a minister who has faithfully served his day, or of some devoted woman—any of these touches our emotion and awakens an affection that the way of the world may have been chilling.

The further we have gone in our spiritual education, however, the more do we realize that something similar is the experience of others; that they, too, love their churches, and that these churches have a real culture and have promoted virtues and graces which we do not possess in the same measure. Moreover, the progress of knowledge, the clarifying of truth, and the diffusion of the Christian spirit have made us kindlier towards those who differ from us; have produced effective comity among the churches. There is less sectarianism and more fellowship.

It is at such a time as this that the Religious Education association has been brought into being; indeed, has been made possible. It knows no denominational lines, but works through and with all churches, recognizing that all hold in common fundamental truths of religion which go to the making of character.

Within our lands all religions agree that the moral law is divine, that God's law is written on our hearts, that by education it may be made sufficiently clear to show us the path of life, that his will for us can no more be neglected with impunity than any other law. They all agree that knowledge of the moral law is more requisite for the progress of humanity than the knowledge of physical law. It is more essential to know and avoid moral evil that blights a community or a race than to arrest the course of bodily disease.

The Religious Education association regards the churches as the most potent institutions for maintaining the moral health of the individual and for keeping pure the life of society. Accordingly, it seeks to help them in emphasizing the great truths that they hold in common and in formulating them for effective educational purpose. It gives thought also to the methods whereby the churches may best supplement the work of the public schools to this end.

The Religious Education association also believes in education by the state for a common citizenship. It recognizes that our common school system is one of the most remarkable accomplishment of democracy and a proof of our growth in social unity. We send our children to school, where they will sit side by side with, meet on the playground and form intimacies with children of different churches, or of no church; it may be with those we regard as aliens. We intrust them for many hours of the day to teachers provided and trained by the community, who will mold and fashion them in mind and body. But these teachers have learned how to teach the things that unite, not those that separate. We are debtors to our teachers for their wisdom as well as for their devotion, for their common sense as well as for their patience.

Here the Religious Education association recognises an opportunity. It holds to the view that education should form the character as well as train the intellect, being aware that dangers lurk in cleverness without morals, in skill without high purpose. It is on the side of purifying and fortifying the will that our education has come short. Here it is the Religious Education association seeks to bring help. It tries to point out to those who will listen that here is the weakest point in our educational armor.

COD LIVER OIL AND RICKETS

I THINK it was Hess who threw a little cold water on the routine use of cod liver oil in winter time in northern latitudes as a preventive of rickets. He found that some babies had minor bone changes of a rickety nature in spite of the fact that they had taken cod liver oil systematically.

Drs. Gerstenburger and Nourse have done some work which tends to restore it to favor. They used it on premature babies in a northern city in the short day season. It would be difficult to conceive of a harder test. However, they made use of it with premature babies because they had been satisfied with the effects they had gotten from it in saving normal children from rickets.

Premature babies are especially prone to rickets for several reasons. They are susceptible to all sorts of diseases and rickets is very likely to be an after effect of other diseases. Premature babies are poor machines at best and rickets is likely to develop in a poor machine. Being delicate they are not likely to get as much sunlight and open air as they need. And, finally, having gotten a poor start they must grow fast day and night to catch up. An urge to rapid growth lays the foundation to rickets.

Drs. Gerstenberger and Nourse conclude that rickets can be prevented or cured in premature babies. They gave less than 30 drops a day to the average premature baby. They advise beginning cod liver oil when other feeding is begun. That means giving it in the first weeks of life. Not only did it prevent rickets but somewhat larger doses cured it. One week's use of cod liver oil started healing the bones as shown by X-ray, and nine weeks' use completed it.

Premature babies need more mineral matter and protein than they get in breast milk. Therefore, they advise that these babies either get some food instead of breast milk, or that they get breast milk supplemented with boiled, skimmed milk.

ADVICE ON EPILEPTICS.

W. J. L. writes: For the last two years I have been troubled with seizures which seem to come over me in any place, such as on the street, in buildings, in my own home. I have had X-rays taken of my head, spine, teeth, and stomach. Several surgeons have examined these pictures and have found them perfectly normal in every way except for the bowel, which they claim is very small.

Gas on the stomach and belching seem to bother me quite a bit, and I am wondering whether or not you could suggest anything that might help me in my trouble.

REPLY.

If we are to infer that your seizures are mild attacks of epilepsy you would not expect an X-ray to show anything.

As a rule, epilepsy is made worse by constipation and a diet which overcomes that condition benefits the epileptic.

As a rule, epileptics do better when they eat sparingly.

MENTAL HYGIENE.

A. K. writes: I inherited feeblemindedness or insanity—I do not know which. While in this state I married a very visionary man, but one who had no real insanity in his family.

A girl was born to us who is now 22 years of age. Do you think she could escape such an inheritance and be normal?

She has been a good student and was an honor student when she graduated from the university.

REPLY.

Whatever the diagnosis may have been of your mental makeup and that of your husband, it is certain your daughter has not inherited feeblemindedness. Feebleminded people do not graduate from universities with honors.

The mental histories of her parents suggest that this young lady should pay especial attention to mental hygiene. She should train her emotional reactions and her mental habits.

CURVE IN SPINE.

C. H. Jr. writes: 1. I have curvature of the spine with depression in right side. I believe this is from carrying many books during school days.

2. Have had sciatica. The pain still persists in left leg. I am 32.

REPLY.

1. The habit of carrying heavy books is one of the causes of spinal curvature. Some of the cases due to this cause are cured by corrective exercises.

2. It is possible that your sciatica is due to pressure on a nerve from a curvature. Have that possibility investigated.

Whenever there is a curve on one side at one level there are curves on the other side at other levels.

HOT WATER SUPPLY.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am the owner of a two flat building and would like to know if it is necessary for me to have a fire hot enough to supply the tenant with hot water every day. The rooms are always well heated and the water has always been sufficiently warm, but they have complained to me that they have had to warm the water at certain times.

F. D. B.

Ordinarily it is presumed that the landlord must supply hot water at reasonable hours. We would interpret that to mean every day in the ordinary case.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE WILL RULES.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband died six years ago, leaving me with two boys, one 18 and one 14, the latter a cripple for life. His grandfather died, and now the grandmother has died, leaving a large sum of money. She mentioned the boys in her last will, but they did not get their father's share. Are they entitled to the full share or not? O. L.

Unless they can attack the will for undue influence or lack of testamentary capacity, they cannot take more than the gifts provided in the will.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TAKE THE CABINET.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Two years ago I bought a house and made over the pantry part into a bathroom, buying a large kitchen cabinet for the kitchen. Now, I have sold the house and the buyer claims we were supposed to leave the kitchen cabinet here when we move. Are we compelled to leave it since we paid for it? It was not mentioned when we sold the house and there is nothing in writing about it? M. A.

No. The mere fact that there is no pantry would not obligate a seller to leave a kitchen cabinet which was not attached to the building. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 7, 1861.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—Gen. Hunter, who succeeds Gen. Fremont in command of the department of the west, arrived here. Before Gen. Fremont left for St. Louis with his staff he had a long conference with Gen. Hunter and gave him all the intelligence he possessed concerning the position of the rebels and his plan for battle as decided upon by himself and his council of war just before the order removing him reached him. A scout reports the rebels moving slowly in this direction, and they must be near us. A battle is imminent. The rebels greatly exceed the Union men in numbers, but no fears are felt for the result. McCulloch is leading the rebel advance of Price's army.

WASHINGTON.—Richmond papers just received here make no mention of the landing of the great Union fleet on the southern coast. It is quite clear, however, from the tone of the press that the movement of the fleet has created intense alarm among the rebels. Jeff Davis has appointed Friday, Nov. 15, as a day of fasting and prayer.

NEW YORK.—A letter from Fortress Monroe says the resignation of Gen. Wool is expected. It also says there is excellent authority for stating that a major and lieutenant colonel of artillery at the fort are favorable to the rebel cause.

WASHINGTON.—A scout from Virginia reports Beauregard's rebel army stationed at the right of Braddock's road, between Fairfax and Centerville, 100,000 strong, with 200 pieces of artillery indifferently manned with undisciplined cannoneers.

LOUISVILLE.—Beauregard's report of the battle at Manassas says that 399 rebels were killed and 1,200 wounded, and that the Federals lost 4,500 killed, wounded, and prisoners. He says his entire force there was 28,000, of which only one-fourth were engaged. (This is either a telegraphic blunder or a big lie—EDS. TRIB.)

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 7, 1901.

PEKIN.—Li Hung Chang died at 11 o'clock this forenoon. His death was expected, as his physicians have known for some time that his health was precarious. Earl Li served China as a soldier, statesman, and diplomat. From a humble place he rose to the highest rank, being almost the only Chinese who had attained a world wide reputation. He was 79 years old.

CHICAGO.—Thomas W. Lawson's saddle horse Gorgeous Regina won first prize at the horse show. Alice Nun, owned by Mr. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, won the coveted Speedway cup.

CHICAGO.—Arthur B. Meeker, who until his retirement from business in 1885 had been identified for nearly thirty years with the iron and coal trade of Chicago, died in Utica, N. Y., at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Amelia M. Collier, at the age of 67. Arthur Meeker of Armour & Co. was summoned to his father's bedside, but arrived too late. The widow and two daughters, Mrs. James R. Walker and Miss Margaret Meeker, also survive.

CONSTANTINOPLE. — Officials of the American legation have received news, through Saloniki, that indicate the early release of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary who is the captive of brigands near the Turkish frontier, and her companion, Mme. Tsilka.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — John Armstrong Chanler, millionaire, and the first husband of Amélie Rives, was declared of sound mind by the County court in proceedings instituted to test his sanity and right to possession of his property. Chanler recited all his movements since his escape from Bloomingdale asylum last November.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 7, 1910.

NEW YORK.—Chairman William R. Willcox of the Republican national committee, in his final statement, claims the election of Charles E. Hughes at today's balloting by a majority of not less than 100 in the electoral college. Vance McCormick, chairman of the Democratic national committee, declared there is a fighting chance of President Wilson having the electoral votes of Utah and one or two other hitherto rock-ribbed Republican states, in addition to the 364 votes he has already claimed.

CHICAGO.—(By Arthur Sears Henning.)—Approximately seventeen million American citizens, constituting the greatest electorate in the world, will determine at the polls today whether the government of the United States shall continue under the direction of Woodrow Wilson or be committed to administration by Charles Evans Hughes. While developments of the last day of the campaign increased the probability that Hughes will be elected by a comfortable plurality in the electoral college, surface indications are that the contest will be a close one on the popular vote.

WAR NEWS.—Bucharest reports that Von Mackensen and his Teutonic forces have been forced to retreat in Dobrudja and that four villages have been burned. The Russians stormed a series of heights in the Carpathian mountains and claim they repulsed Teutonic attacks in Galicia and Volhynia. The French claim gains north of the River Somme, but admit losses elsewhere.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

FOR STRAIGHT-SHOOTING POLICE.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—November 21 will usher in the first week of the annual competition for THE TRIBUNE cup, a magnificent cup, donated by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to be awarded to the champion five man rifle team in the city of Chicago. And in the same competition will be awarded an appropriate medal to the person who is the champion individual rifle shot of the city.

THE TRIBUNE advocates the complete disarmament of the private citizen, with the members of the police force being the only persons allowed to carry firearms. Yet in the many years that the cup has been up for competition there has been no record of any police team trying for it, nor has any policeman been able to hold his own among electrical engineers, surveyors, or even draftsmen, in shoulder to shoulder competition at what should be his own game.

Before we powder-burners are asked to give up our favorite toys, wouldn't it be appropriate to give them to some one who is on the side of law and order, as we are, and to some one who is also more skillful in their use than we are? And let him prove it to us in fair, open competition first, beginning Nov. 2.

POWDER-BURNER.

SCHOOLS FOR THE DEAF.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—There is no west side school to which I can send my son, who is 20 years old and deaf. The only schools teaching the sign language are on the extreme south side and the extreme north side, and, as my son is not very active, I cannot send him so far alone. None of the regular schools teaching the deaf has accommodations for boys over 16 years of age. My son, therefore, is deprived of education. Why should such a condition exist in so large a city? J. HODOUS.

EVANS AND SCOTT.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 29.—We of Milwaukee can't entirely comprehend your Chicago method of criminal law administration. You hang the poor, friendless, youthful Evans for murder, but allow that callous murderer, Russell Scott, to go unhanged for four years.

Evans should hang; he committed murder. But so should Scott; he is guilty of a more cruel, unwarranted murder. What influence is keeping Scott from the gallows? Four times, I read, the Supreme court of Illinois has saved this seemingly powerful or influential murderer from the rope. And why? Now, the Supreme court grants Scott another writ of supersedeas, which means that he is to have another court trial. He has had a half dozen. Twice he has been tried for his sanity and now he is to have another sanity trial. The courts will yet drive him into insanity.

Once Scott was within two hours of the gallows. Then a judge gets out of bed at 3 a. m., rushes to his courtroom, and signs an order staying the execution. He said he was obliged to do it under Illinois law. When the two men who killed the cashier of the Drake hotel stood at the brink of the gallows a motion similar to that which saved Scott was made before another Circuit court judge, McGoorty, and he said he had no authority to sign it, to ward off the execution.

Your Supreme court refused a writ of supersedeas to Evans, yet it has granted at least three to Scott. Evans is hanged within one year of his crime and that is well, as it should be. Scott has been able to escape his just punishment for four years. How is that? I should much like to read your explanation.

MILWAUKEEN.

CROWDED.

Chicago, Oct. 29. — After extending platforms to accommodate eight car trains, doesn't it seem absurd that the Northwestern "L" sends out three car trains during the early evening rush hour?

There is a Howard street express that leaves the Kinzie street terminal at 4:55 each evening, stopping at Fullerton and Belmont and other express stops north; yet at Fullerton and Belmont the three cars become so jammed that there is sometimes scarcely standing room.

Here is an instance of where, if the elevated road would act in good faith with the public, they could give service, with no excuse that they are running full capacity, etc. Yet innumerable letters I have written to the Chicago Rapid Transit have failed of results. L. J. H.

CANADA AND THE QUEEN.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—At the present time our northern neighbor is entertaining, with more or less curiosity, the queen of Roumania.

The nation she represents seems to owe the Dominion of Canada some thirty million dollars on which they have paid neither principal nor interest, and the Canadians, though handicapped as they have been by royal traditions in their struggle to pioneer the priceless resources of the northern half of the American continent, are accustomed, at any rate, to royalty from nations who pay their bills.

It is needless to say that the American people do not in any way want to interfere with the vicious economic situation in the kingdom of Roumania. Those who think, however, cannot understand the mania whereby prominent people in Chicago and throughout the country rush to the four corners of the nation to buy feather beds and other things and furnish receptions for royalty which ought to be tottering when its people are subject to conditions such as they are in Roumania. We may have no business criticizing these economic conditions, but we can carry our own opinions about people who are toadying to the representatives who at least are cognizant, if not responsible, for such things and furnishing them with the reception they are getting in spite of the knowledge.

AXEL LONNQUIST.

COUNTRY LIFE DIRECTORS.

Wheeling, Ill., Oct. 27.—There are seven or eight men and women who go about Cook county visiting country schools, when their fancy directs, advising the children to raise garden products, chickens, pigs, etc., something they already know. In my opinion, this is a useless expense on the already overburdened taxpayers. These people receive over $3,000 each per year. Wouldn't this $25,000 or $30,000 be a nice saving to the taxpayers? It would let our children study the three R's as they are doing in other schools. VIRGINIA BYRNE.

FROM A SWEDISH READER.

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 28.—In an article headed "Neglected Scandinavia" in the Voice of the People, complaint is made that progress made by the Scandinavian countries is ignored and purposely minimized by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

I was born in Sweden and came to this country in 1884 when 27 years of age. I have read THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE ever since. I have done so because of political principles advocated by the paper which agree with mine, but I have never found THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE ignoring or denying justice to merit whether individual or national.

CHARLES AXBERGER.

CAMPAIGN POSTERS.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 29.—Who will remove the thousands upon thousands of campaign posters disfiguring our streets and even extending miles beyond the limits of the city? Do we have a law that those who put up election posters are responsible for removing them?

G. N. W.

SEARCH ALL SUSPECTS.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The chief of police should issue an order to his men to search every man whom they arrest for arms. Richard Evans shot Officer Finnegan while Evans was sitting in the rear of the car when Finnegan took Evans to the station. Had the officer taken Evans' gun away there would have been no murder—and no hanging today. W. BODEMANN.

THE FUNDAMENTAL QUESTION.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—In your many editorials in opposition to the 18th amendment, you ignore the fundamental question: who pays the money that makes bootleggers and their associates millionaires? It is an undeniable fact that the wets pay the millions that result in crime, bribery, and corruption. You cannot charge the drys with this, and if you would print on your editorial page the slogan: "Millions for Booze; Not One Cent for Prohibition," you would make clearer your stand on the question.

FURNITURE
for music room and living room—

It is fitting that the house that sells more fine pianos than any music store in the world should undertake to provide furniture to complete the room of which the piano is the central piece. For the piano strikes the key for the furnishing of the room.

The modern woman is demanding more and more that there be harmony and good taste in the furnishing of her house. And the living room—where the piano stands—is the most important room of all.

In 62 years of business, Lyon & Healy have always endeavored to keep alert to the demands of their customers. And now, in answer to a very evident and growing demand, Lyon & Healy open a new furniture department, offering furniture of the better grades—including period furniture—for the music room and living room.

This furniture will be found on the Second Floor, in conjunction with the piano department.

Five Beautifully Furnished Rooms to Show Furniture and Pianos Together

On the Second Floor, tomorrow, five specially designed rooms will be opened to the public. Each is designed and furnished in a different period. And each shows how beautiful a living room or music room can be when the furniture plays a harmonious obbligato to the piano.

You are invited to inspect these rooms tomorrow—and as often as you like, for they will be frequently changed.

Come Here For the Unusual in Furniture

A new cabinet or chair for your music room—a table, a screen or a lamp for your living room—you want it to be distinctive and unusual. You will discover it at Lyon & Healy's.

The New Furniture Department
Under the Direction of
MR. W. K. COWAN

Thousands of Chicagoans remember the time—only a few years ago—when The Cowan Furniture Company was the aristocrat of Chicago furniture houses, and when people would come from all over the country to Mr. Cowan for furniture of the better kind.

With W. K. Cowan as director of the Lyon & Healy furniture section, Chicagoans are assured of all the good taste and high character which built Mr. Cowan's reputation and which are still in evidence in many beautiful Chicago homes which he furnished.

Atwood, president of the Constitution Anniversary association, yesterday declared before the German Club of Chicago in the Morrison hotel. In pointing out that such measures would result in chaos, he said it was under such measures that Christ was convicted and crucified.

S. DAKOTA VOTES $3,000 IS ENOUGH FOR GOVERNOR

Refuses to Increase His Salary.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Other states may pay their governors $10,000 or more, but South Dakota has decided for the sixth time that $3,000 a year is enough compensation for its highest official.

Back in 1883, fathers of the state constitution stipulated that the governor should get $3,000, Supreme court judges, $2,400, and other state officials downward from $1,800 to the attorney general, who served for $1,200 a year.

Thrice since then the legislature has submitted a scale of salary increases, raising the governor's pay to $7,000 and other compensations proportionately, but the sovereign voter would have none of it.

The last effort to raise salaries was in a constitutional amendment submitted Tuesday, and the voters said no at the rate of two to one, despite espousal of the reform by both major parties.

Only one other state, Vermont, pays its executive so little.

Expense allowances help officials some, and the governor may save house rent by residing in a four room cottage at one edge of the statehouse lawn. But the executive finds himself served by a secretary whose pay check is $600 bigger than his own.

Number 37 of Our Series of Interesting and Historic American Homes

Mount Clare Dedicated by the City of Baltimore to Our American Homes

MOUNT CLARE
The Home of Barrister Carroll, Baltimore, Maryland. Erected in 1754.

ONE of the most beautiful of our old historic homes is Barrister Carroll's, known as Mount Clare. It is in Baltimore; the oldest Colonial rooftree now left within the city limits. The city owns this home and maintained by the Maryland Society of Colonial Dames who have furnished it with the furniture of the period, Mount Clare is open to the public the year around. Thus, through its memories and the furniture and furnishings so reminiscent of the ideals of our early home life, is the American home exalted and honored.

Enthusiasm for the preservation of our interesting and historic American homes with the furniture that makes them attractive and charming—has spread like wildfire throughout the country. People are using these historic shrines as centers of inspiration for furnishing their present day homes. Craftsmen and designers go thither to study and to bring forth the most faithful reproductions of the best of the delightful old furniture. And stores such as this keep in constant touch with these old homes, these fine reproductions, and with your desires.

Hallway in Mount Clare
—with its arch so perfect architecturally. The furniture here as in all the rooms is for the most part just as it was when the Carroll family lived there. And that is the way to show a home—so that you can see how it was actually lived in and enjoyed.

The Home is the Thing

One of the Bedrooms
Luxurious simplicity in every line of this old furniture... Such is the simplicity which has become the guiding star of the best American furniture manufacturers of today. If you like simple elegance, fine workmanship, and the best—Know this Store; and Know our Low Prices.

Drawing Room
Above the fine Hepplewhite desk hangs the coat of arms of old Maryland families, and on top of the mantelpiece are handsome old candelabra with grindoles, which can be had in styles suited to our modern houses and modern apartments.

Whatever You Want
Whatever style of Furniture you like best can be had at this store or obtained through our co-operation. It is most satisfactory to see our very large assortments and range of prices. Opposite are a sofa and tilt-top table such as bespeaks Mount Clare—both to be had in this store.

Dining Room
—the satiny polished furniture in its 18th century style, makes you think of lavender velvet coats and rustling silks which adorned the lords and ladies of Colonial Maryland. Similar styles of furniture in fine reproductions are to be had at this store.

NINE-PIECE ALL WALNUT GROUP, $1,650.00

The designing and construction of this suite would seem to be a test in woodworking art. All of the known notes of finesse seem to have been combined into making this an unusual masterpiece. There are burl panels with an alternating inlay of ebony and white holly wood. On the fronts of the center panels in the Vanity Dresser, the Chest and the Foot ends of the Bedsteads a hand painted design is carried out in soft Tuscan colors; a border of carving surrounds the Mirror frames and another more elaborate carved design trims the two top drawer fronts and the side panels in the Bedsteads, while in the center of the head ends is an overlay of Walnut Veneers. Only master craftsmen could borrow such beauty from the Spanish age of Furniture triumph and bring it to us in selected woods of our own time. There are the modern features of improvement as well—the fully dustproof construction; the sliding tray in the dresser and vanity dresser, and the drawers, by the way, are lined in American Walnut. Two very typical characteristics of the period are the wrought iron stretcher in the Vanity Dresser and the handsome Portable Mirror with hand painted Red Lacquer frame. This is illustrated on the Chest of Drawers.

In the group—Twin Bedsteads, Dresser, 49 inches wide; Chiffonette, 37 inches wide; Vanity Dresser, 54 inches wide; Chair, Bench and Mirror. Sold en suite $1,650.00

In Booth to Right of East Elevator—Sixth Floor—Main Room

We call your attention to the Night Table at right; it is a part of the Bedroom Group and is included in the group price. The top measures 14x17 inches and there is a compartment below, which is the unusual feature.

SOLID MAHOGANY COXWELL CHAIR, $149.00

Solid Mahogany frame covered in a conventional pattern of Denim. There is a curve in the back to accommodate the relaxed body; the padded arms are built just the right height, there is a loose spring filled cushion and the back is spring filled. It would be hard to imagine a more comfortable chair. This is one of our own manufacture and acknowledging it to be our own gives us the responsibility for its goodness.

FIRE SET $7.50

Finished black with Swedish handles, including Poker, Tong, Shovel and Stand.

ANDIRONS $6.00

In the study of an Owl—very individual design.

LOUNGING CHAIR, $69.00

Soft and strong—it is all down filled seat and back with imported selected down—the only kind of down that is ever used in SMYTH-MADE upholstery; this feature, combined with a frame built to give absolute comfort to the body, with its long seat and slightly slanting back with a rolled pillow top. The under construction is all spring, hand tied to a strong webbing. The covering illustrated is a figured Linen Friezette in combination with Mohair.

The Red Cross is rushing supplies to Batangas.

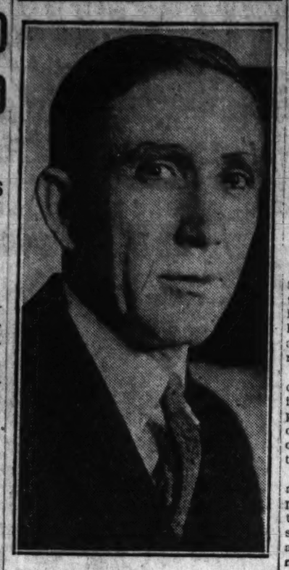
Mozart Playgrounds Boys Win Harmonica Contest

Four boys from the Mozart playground won the harmonica quartet contest yesterday in the auditorium of the Hartman Furniture company, conducted by Charles H. English, director of playgrounds for the board of education. The contests, staged every Saturday, are intended to give the public an idea of the scope of the musical work offered by the playgrounds. Besides the harmonica there are exhibitions of ability with the ocarina, freak whistling contests and barber shop quartet.

HERO POLICEMAN



LIEUT. MAURICE J. BYRNE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

KILLS TWO IN FAMILY, SELF.

Fort Smith, Ark., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Miss Chloe Dixon died early today as a result of bullet wounds suffered when her brother-in-law, William Christy, shot her and then killed his wife and himself last night. Christy is believed to have gone insane because of grief over the death of a sister.

RISKS LIFE TO DISARM ROBBER; GETS HERO PRIZE

Lieut. Maurice Byrne Is Given Tribune Award.

Bravery by Chicago policemen in a fair fight is not uncommon, but when, with the barrel of a gun jammed into his stomach and all the odds against him, an officer puts duty before life and gets his man, he has earned the right to be called a hero.

That is why Lieut. Maurice J. Byrne of zone squad 14-c, detective bureau, is awarded the $100 TRIBUNE hero prize for October. His act, occurring on the night of Oct. 13, was easily the outstanding display of courage during the month.

Leaving his home at 934 Leclaire avenue to report for duty at 11:45 p. m., Lieut. Byrne noticed a car containing three men pass him, stop, start, then stop again. His suspicion aroused, the officer hurried toward the machine.

Menaces Officer with Gun.

Two of the men stepped out and walked back toward him. Coming near, the leader, with a quick draw, jerked a revolver from his pocket and thrust it against the policeman with a curt order to "stick 'em up and be quick."

Instead of complying, Lieut. Byrne wrenched the gun downward, twisted it out of his assailant's hand, and drew his own weapon. At the same time, the second man reached for a gun, but he was too late.

Byrne's bullet struck him in the side of the head and he fell, although later the would proved to be slight. The policeman then disarmed the second man and turned his attention to the third, at the wheel of the automobile.

Seeing what had happened to his pals, the driver had already put the car in gear. He ducked low and stepped on the accelerator. Lieut. Byrne emptied his gun after him, none of the shots taking effect. He was arrested the next day, however.

Three in Stolen Auto.

At the station, where Byrne took his prisoners, they were identified as Joseph Tumcxyk, 1109 Winchester avenue, and Stanley Lewandowski, 1156 Cherry street. The driver of the car was Edward Piskulski, 2549 Long avenue. The machine had been stolen.

All three of the men were found to have criminal records and had been arrested before on automobile stealing charges. They were arraigned Oct. 18 before Judge Allegretti and held to the Criminal court, Piskulski in bonds of $10,000, and the other two in bonds of $13,000 each.

A report of the capture was made to Chief Collins by Chief of Detectives Schoemaker, who stated that "Lieut. Byrne displayed the highest degree of efficiency, alertness, and attention to duty and bravery under fire."

On Police Force 15 Years.

Lieut. Byrne has been on the police force fifteen years, eleven of them at the detective bureau. He is married and has three sons.

Honorable mention this month goes to Patrolmen William P. Neeson and Bernard J. Dohney, both of the Sixth district, for bravery shown Oct. 13 when assigned to investigate an attempt to bomb a garage at 7341 Dante avenue.

As the two policemen approached the garage, the alleged bomber, who gave the name of W. F. Krell, an ex-convict, ran out and Neeson gave chase, ordering him to halt and firing two shots in the air. The fleeing man ran through a passageway and under a porch at 7337 Dante avenue, where Neeson disarmed and captured him.

Find Bomb in Garage.

Meanwhile Dohney entered the garage and found a bomb made of three sticks of dynamite taped together with the fuse burning. He stepped on the fuse, then cut it off with a pockett knife. No motive for the attempted bombing was discovered.

Six firemen, members of hook and ladder company No. 8, at 2867 Loomis street, also received consideration for rescuing two women from the second floor of a burning building at 3200 Wallace street. The firemen brought them down a ladder.

The members of the company are Capt. Charles J. Pathe, Firemen Edward Fikejs, William Conneley, Joseph P. Gilhooly, Theodore Boudrie, and Dennis D. Daley. The incident was reported by James Enright, chief of the 21st battalion.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The Rev. Jacob Hammerschmidt, who was fatally assaulted by Gustav Low at his residence, 6617 South Lincoln street, Thursday night, was not pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist church as stated in THE TRIBUNE Friday morning, nor was Low a member of the church. Mr. Hammerschmidt was pastor of the Pentecostal church at 61st and Ada streets.

FEARS LOSS OF JOB, ENDS LIFE WITH SHOTGUN

Benjamin Jennings, 35 years old, employed by the Columbia Bank Note company, Congress street and Ashland avenue, committed suicide yesterday in a room at a west side hotel by shooting himself through the head with a shotgun.

A note scribbled on a piece of brown wrapping paper read: "I have fallen down miserably on the job. It is too late to get up. Winter is coming on. I know I'll be fired, and I don't know any way I could make a living or get another job. I haven't the heart to face you again. I'm broke except for a little money I have in a bank. I want you to have it."

The letter is believed to have been meant for his divorced wife, for whom the police are searching.

Seize Four on Charge of Looting Jewelry Concern

Four persons, one of them a woman, were taken into custody yesterday morning by Central station detectives after they were caught removing merchandise alleged to be owned by Moore & Evans, wholesale jewelers in the McClurg building, 218 South Wabash avenue. Fred Paull, 43, 2152 Farragut avenue, engineer of the building; his son, Gust, 18 years old; Joseph Kelly, 56, 1821 North Washtenaw avenue, janitor of the building, and the latter's wife were those taken into custody.

JUDGE OFFICIATES AT WEDDING.

Judge William E. Helander in the Grand Crossing court yesterday performed the marriage ceremony for Frank O'Keefe, 26, 2156 Millard avenue, and Miss Ruth Kefr, 27, 6040 Winthrop avenue. The judge and O'Keefe were buddies in the army.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL

The glory of this season's garden has departed. The planting of a tulip bed may hold a fascinating promise for the future, but at present it teaches by contrast the ever new delights of a grate fire. Once more family interests center around the hearth and its cheery hospitality. Our nation has a growing recognition of the value of genial surroundings. We know that any bettering of home conditions may lead one to greater things.

For every improvement—no matter how simple—is great, if it makes the family dwelling more beautiful.

DEFIANT TROTZKY DEFENDS ATTACK ON STALIN RULE

Russia Worse Off than in Pre-War Days, He Says

MOSCOW, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Self confident and defiant, Leon Trotzky, once the idol of the red army, gave the appearance of a man unafraid when he took the rostrum at the Communist party conference today and defended his principles in the face of the disciplinary measures recently taken against him and other opposition leaders.

"We decline to renounce any part of our principles or views," he shouted, "and we refuse to swallow those theories and ideas that are forced upon us. But while we shall not abandon our views, we have no intention of aggravating the differences and factional strife within our party."

Replies to Stalin.

Insisting that the theories of Joseph Stalin, head of the party, and Rykoff and Bukharin, members of the central executive committee, were based on false premises, he declared.

"Comrade Stalin, you must find stronger arguments than you have if you wish to impress the world with my failings."

Then, turning to Bukharin, M. Trotzky cried:

"Comrade Bukharin says that we can build socialism, provided we are not menaced by foreign intervention. But I say we shall never build socialism if we advance at a tortoise-like pace, because our industrial progress depends entirely on imports of machinery and raw materials from capitalistic countries."

"Worse Than Before the War."

Directing his fire next at Rykoff, he said:

"Rykoff claims that the country has reached prewar production in almost every industry, but I say that not only do we not approach the prewar level but the population is much worse off now than then."

Countering Rykoff's optimistic claims, M. Trotzky declared the crops were worse than expected, and added, "We may be proud of whatever economic success we have achieved, but what we have accomplished up to the present is merely the first serious advance on the long bridge separating socialism from capitalism."

Members of 131st Infantry Guests of Chipilly Post

All members of the 131st infantry were guests of the Chipilly post of the American Legion at the annual dinner of the organization in the Hotel La Salle last night. John V. Clinnin, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, and Curtis Smith, state commander, were guests of honor.

THE GATE AT THAT FAMOUS BALLET REACHED ONLY $17,000

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Wayne Kendrick, certified public accountant and treasurer of the Woman's Universal Alliance for the Mothers memorial, declared in a statement today that gross receipts at the Metropolitan opera house performance in New York, Oct. 24, which was attended by Queen Marie, amounted to approximately $17,000.

The entertainment feature was a ballet, "The Lily of Life," based on a fairy story written by Queen Marie, presented by the Loie Fuller troupe, and some of the boxes were said to have been sold for $1,000 or more each. Net proceeds were dedicated to a fund being raised by the alliance, and they probably would have been greater than they were, Mr. Kendrick said, if "uncalled for attacks on the entertainment" had not caused many box holders to cancel their reservations and take seats in the orchestra.

Body of Farmer Is Found Hanging from Barn Rafter

The body of John Nieken, a farmer two miles west of Chicago Heights, was found hanging from a rafter yesterday in his barn. His wife told police that Nieken had been despondent for several weeks, following his investment in the Washington Park race track, which is now involved in litigation. He was 49 years old and the father of eleven children.

The workers will carry banners urging an amelioration of the condition of peasants and other toilers in Roumania, the announcement said.

A protest massmeeting at Redifer hall, 30 North Wells street, will be held before the arrival of the train, and will be addressed by William F. Dunne, editor of the Daily Worker; Max Shachtman, editor of the Labor Defender; George Neder, Roumanian labor organizer, and others.

Italy Demands Split with British on Russian Oil

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—It is reported here that Italy had demanded a share in the Russian oil monopoly sought by British finance in return for a loan to the soviet government. Italy proposes to share in the loan and also in the reciprocal benefits obtained from Russia, or else issue an additional loan and take the monopoly on Russian oil sales to the world trade outside the British empire.

Nicaraguan Rebel Army Captures Atlantic Port

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 6.—San Juan del Norte, proposed Atlantic canal port, was captured today by the Liberal revolutionists, who are advancing along the river towards the Conservative stronghold, El Castillo, which has been reinforced.

SOCIETY OF DEAF CELEBRATES ITS SILVER JUBILEE

Silence packed with words, laughs that made no sound, and greetings that could not be heard last night filled the dining hall of the Auditorium hotel when 200 Chicago members of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf celebrated the organization's silver jubilee anniversary at a banquet. Despite its quiet the room hummed with activity.

Not a sound was uttered, but in their own language the banqueters gave praise to their way of speaking, scoffed at those who would sympathize with them, and proclaimed to the world that they were as hale and hearty and just as able as the next fellow.

A review of the accomplishments and growth of the organization during its twenty-five years was given by the speakers, including President Charles B. Kemp, Edward DesRocher, Oscar Pearson, Frank A. Spears, Washington Barrow, David J. Padden, Peter Livahis, Jacob J. Kleinhans, and Francis P. Gibson.

The national organization is composed of 107 divisions, has 6,050 members, and assets of more than $1,000,000, it was announced.

$300,000 FIRE AT COLUMBUS.

Columbus, O., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Fire, which for a time threatened to destroy the entire plant of the Teachout Sash and Door company, early today was confined to the company's warehouse, causing a loss estimated at $300,000. One fireman was injured. The origin of the fire is not known.

SPIRITUALISTS TO HUNT HOUDINI IN WORLD OF GHOSTS

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Harry Houdini's spirit will be sought in the after life under plans made by spiritualists, whose claims of communication with the departed were frequently challenged by the great magician.

British and continental believers in spiritualism desire to settle the question whether the man whom Sir Arthur Conan Doyle characterized as the "master trickster" actually did his remarkable feats by legerdemain or through the exercise of supernatural power.

Those who believe that the latter was the case contend that he extricated himself from places of confinement, including his famous "water cell" by dematerialization, and that his feats were not actually accomplished by dexterity and trickery as he claimed.

Arrangements are already being made, following upon his death last Sunday, to endeavor to communicate with his spirit in hopes of proving this contention.

335 Princeton Undergrads Work Way; Earn $188,322

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Working as waiters, bricklayers, salesmen, teachers, or in others of the fifty-three fields developed at Princeton for earning expenses, 335 Princeton undergraduates earned a total of $188,321.65 last year, or an average of $562.15 each.

FAKE CHAPLINS AND LLOYDS WIN SOVIET FILM FAN

MOSCOW, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Bolshevik imitators of American movie stars are making a big hit with Russian screen fans, who get quite a kick out of seeing "New York policemen" wielding little clubs and chasing Illinsky Apor, imitator of Harold Lloyd, past the Kremlin gates.

Finding it impossible to gratify completely the Russian public's demand for American motion pictures, the Soviet Kino trust is producing imitations of American films, with obscure Russian actors impersonating such stars as Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, and Buster Keaton.

The new films are popular with the Russians, many of whom confess that they do not know the difference between the genuine and spurious article, but Americans who have seen the films characterize them as poor, talentless caricatures that deceive no one except the guileless.

New-type "Crankcase" Breather Preventing Crankcase Dilution.
Motor Heat Control by Thermostatic Water Regulator.
Double Beam Headlights with Control at Steering Wheel.
Oil Screen "Agitator" Preventing Oil Coagulation in Coldest Weather.
4-wheel Brakes—

The Ultra Modern Motor
World's Smoothest Type

ONLY Nash of all the great motor car manufacturers offers you the vital advantage of a 7-bearing crankshaft motor in every model.

This is the motor type that engineering authorities concede to be the newest and highest expression of six-cylinder power-plant development.

It creates a calibre of performance vastly superior to anything that older motor types achieve.

You do not need to be a mechanic to realize that 7 great bearings give a rigidity and resultant smoother performance to a crankshaft revolving at high speed that cannot possibly be approached by a 3- or 4-bearing design.

And you know, of course, that less than 7 bearings will not eliminate crankshaft deflection and resultant rough performance.

It is a fundamental engineering fact that the degree in which it is possible to make a motor crankshaft run absolutely smooth and quiet depends upon the number of bearings—and 7 is the maximum for a six.

Come drive one of these new Nash models. See clearly for yourself the utter power-smoothness and power-quietness that this 7-bearing motor gives—how striking its performance is as contrasted to older motor types with fewer bearings.

Don't buy an old-type motor if you're buying a new car.

TWO MURDERERS FACING GALLOWS GET NEW TRIALS

Judge Wants Juries to Hear New Evidence.

"It is discouraging to work and get results and then have judges by the swave of a hand nullify it all."

This was the comment of Assistant State's Attorney Emmet Byrne, one of the team of hanging prosecutors, yesterday when he finished his day's work and found that two crimina court judges had upset hanging ver dicts rendered by criminal cour juries some weeks ago.

Vincenzo Esposito, 29 years old, con victed and sentenced to death by a jury after it had listened to the testi mony of the murder on Oct. 10, 1925. of Frank Beto in the latter's home, 928 South Robey street, was granted a new trial by Judge Harry B. Miller. The motiof was granted after Attorney J. F. Powers had presented an affidavit signed by Gabriel Fumo, that he had seen Beto with a revolver in his hand.

Wants Jury to Hear Testimony.

The judge said that he was granting a new trial to Esposito because he thought that a jury should be allowed to hear the testimony of Fumo, which corroborated Esposito's story that he shot in self defense. Fumo did not appear at the trial.

Oscar Quarles, colored, was the second slayer to receive judicial consideration. Judge William V. Brothers granted him a new trial after declaring from the bench that "Justice and law call for your life."

"Despite your denials of guilt, I still believe that you committed a wanton, cruel and unjustified murder," said the judge. "There is not the slightest mitigation. Justice and law call for your life. In spite of all I feel I am going to grant you a new trial. I do not believe you are telling the truth and it is not because I believe you innocent or that the jury made a mistake that I am granting you a new trial."

New Evidence in Case.

The judge then went on to say that he believed a jury had the right to hear testimony, which was produced in Quarles' behalf, after the verdict was rendered, that caused him to grant the motion.

The testimony referred to was by several negroes that Quarles was employed in a south side restaurant at the time of the murder.

Quarles was convicted of murdering Morris Dushoff, 600 East Fiftieth place, on April 2, when he entered an Atlantic and Pacific company store at 534 East Fiftieth street, during a robbery. Arcalous Butts, negro, co-defendant, who turned state's evidence and was sentenced to 40 years, identified Quarles as the slayer as well as several other witnesses.

"It has taken courage to give you a new trial rather than to hang you," said the judge.

BURNS FATAL

BILLIE HOLINGUE.

Billie Holingue, 9 years old, died at the Grant hospital yesterday of burns received while playing with a can of gasoline at his home, 423 Roslyn place. An inquest into the death was continued yesterday until Nov. 14 when Sheffield avenue police announced they wished to investigate the circumstances of the death. The boy is reported to have said before he died that he did not have any matches.

Boy Rebuked for School Failure Believed Runaway

Because he was not advanced to the eighth grade in school and was reprimanded by his parents, Joseph Skibicki, 14 years old, 3322 North Avers avenue, a student at St. Hyacinth's school, is believed to have run away from home last Wednesday. Irving Park police are searching for him. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Skibicki, think that the boy may have taken a job. They say they will welcome him home.

HE'S KILLED BY FALL.

Zacharel Blackman, colored, of Melrose Park, was killed yesterday when he fell from a scaffold in the yards of a roofing plant where he had been employed.

BAUER TAXI MEN WIN CONTINUANCE OF BOND CASES

Continuances granted yesterday by Judge Matthew Hartigan in traffic court to more than 500 Bauer Cab company drivers arrested for failure to post bonds of $2,500, as required by state law, may result in bringing Corporation Counsel Busch into the cases. Judge Hartigan gave the drivers until Nov. 15 to post their bonds, indicating he would punish any who failed to do so by that time.

Some dissatisfaction at the delay granted by Judge Hartigan was expressed by police officials, who asked Mr. Busch to give an opinion as to right of continuing the cases. It was hinted that steps might be taken in an effort to obtain transfer of the cases from his court.

Arrest of the drivers began Friday, when Hugh H. Smith, deputy secretary of state, informed Chief of Police Collins that most of the Bauer chauffeurs had failed to post the bonds required for protection of patrons.

Negotiations are under way for the bonding of all the company's cabs, attorneys for the chauffeurs explained to Judge Hartigan yesterday in asking the continuances.

A. Starr Best Residence Robbed of Coats and Rugs

Two fur coats and three Oriental rugs were stolen early yesterday morning from the front hallway of the home of A. Starr Best, 2911 Sheridan road, Evanston. Mrs. Best said she could not accurately estimate the value of the stolen property, as all the items were gifts. On Friday she had placed a want ad for a domestic servant in THE TRIBUNE and more than fifty applicants responded in person. It is her opinion that some of those who were turned down came back later and committed the theft.

NATION'S TURKEY CROP PLENTIFUL, SURVEY REVEALS

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Experts who have been out checking up on the turkey crop find there will be plenty of Thanksgiving birds for those who are willing to pay the price of perhaps 50 to 60 cents a pound, it was declared yesterday. Officials of the federal government, the National Poultry, Butter and Egg association, expert produce market writers, buyers in packing town, and commission merchants all agree that there are more turkeys in the country this year than last and there is no evidence of a shortage.

Texas, the biggest turkey state in the union, has 15 per cent more turkeys than last year and California has 13 per cent more, according to the federal government's report which reached here yesterday.

Average Crop 1% Higher.

The figures for the seventeen chief turkey producing states show that their average crop is 1 per cent higher than it was last year. Establishing the 1925 crop on a 100 per cent basis, the states this year are producing birds on the following percentage.

State	Per Cent	State	Per Cent
Ohio	96	Kansas	98
Indiana	95	Virginia	102
Illinois	93	West Virginia	90
Minnesota	95	Kentucky	93
Iowa	100	Tennessee	90
Wisconsin	103	Arkansas	95
North Dakota	95	Oklahoma	94
South Dakota	90	Texas	115
		California	114

Montana and Wyoming, not included in the above estimate, are unofficially reported to have a good crop of turkeys.

Shippers at the Carlot Produce and Egg association's meeting held recently in Dallas, Tex., decided that 22 to 25 cents would be the price they would be justified in paying growers for live turkeys. The movement of dressed turkeys already has started in Texas, about a week earlier than usual, and growers are expected to sell about 1,100 carloads this year. Dressed birds are selling in Texas and Oklahoma at 30 to 32 cents a pound.

The consumer will have to pay more than double what the farmer gets for the live bird, dealers say. It is figured that it will cost about 47 cents a pound to put the Texas birds in Chicago. With the commission merchant's commission of 5 cents a pound and the retailer's profits on top of that, the 1926 consumer will pay about as much as last year, when retail prices ranged between 50 and 60 cents a pound.

The cold storage holdings of turkeys in the country are estimated at only 2,674,000 pounds, or 3,038,000 pounds short of last year's total.

Low prices of cotton are expected to have a marked influence on the marketing of low quality turkeys in Texas and Oklahoma this fall. Cotton planters in need of ready cash already are bringing immature, under sized turkeys to market. On the other hand, there will be a larger proportion of market size birds for this Thanksgiving than last, it was said.

Weight Advice to Farmers.

Farmers are advised to hold their toms until they weigh at least eleven pounds and hens until they weigh eight pounds or more.

A telegram from Fort Worth yesterday said that truckers were picking up live turkeys at country plants and paying 25 and 26 cents a pound. The slim supply of turkeys on the Chicago market yesterday sold wholesale at 46 to 47 cents a pound.

There is a big chicken crop coming into the fall market, which will have a tendency to hold turkey prices down for the Thanksgiving dinners, experts agreed.

Vermont's Turkeys Are Ready

With Thanksgiving day near, a survey reveals that the turkey supply is large. Here are two boys in Vermont, noted for its choice turkeys, holding one of the largest ones raised on their father's farm.

WIFE SLAIN; HUSBAND HELD.

Inese Clay, 22 years old, colored, 2953 Vernon avenue, was shot and killed in her home yesterday. Her husband, Lemon Clay, is being held.

SHOT IN QUARREL WITH EMPLOYER OVER $4; IS DEAD

Leo Protowski, 55, of 1906 South Loomis street, was fatally wounded yesterday by Martin Tessner, 45, 1526 West Twenty-first street, a roofing contractor. Protowski was employed by Tessner and the two argued over $4 tendered to Protowski in payment. Tessner went to his home and returned to Protowski's flat accompanied by his two sons.

The $4 was again tendered and when Protowski insisted upon more pay the father and his sons, Martin Jr. and Leo, assaulted him, it is charged. The father then drew a revolver, it is said, and shot his former employé near the heart. Protowski is in the County hospital and the father and two sons are in custody at the Maxwell street station.

Railway Surgeons Elect Dr. J. R. Garner President

Dr. J. R. Garner of Atlanta, Ga., was elected president of the American Association of Railway Surgeons yesterday at the closing session of the 23d annual convention of the organization in the Hotel Sherman. Other new officers are: Dr. F. S. Clinton, Tulsa, Okla.; Dr. J. W. Martin, Des Moines, Ia., and Dr. John W. Towey, Powers, Mich., vice presidents; Dr. F. G. Dyas, Chicago, treasurer, and Dr. Louis J. Mitchell, Chicago, secretary-editor.

School Children Asked to Donate Dolls to Orphans

Dolls, old and new, those that squeak and those that don't, were solicited from Chicago school children yesterday at the request of Supt. William McAndrew to be donated to the Thanksgiving doll offering committee for distribution among inmates of orphan asylums.

CHICAGOANS GO TO CAPITAL TO FIGHT LAKE SUIT

Illinois and sanitary district attorneys and engineers left for Washington yesterday to fight the suit brought by Michigan and New York against the diversion of water through the Chicago river. Charles Evans Hughes will begin taking evidence tomorrow as referee appointed by the United States Supreme court.

The first move by the attorneys for the district will be an attempt to restrain New York from joining hands with Michigan. Michigan wants the water for navigation, while New York is after more water power. The district will contend that these suits should be answered separately.

Michigan and New York hold that the control of Chicago's diversion is in congress, while the district will uphold the right of the secretary of war to regulate the flow.

Hector Brouillet, attorney for the district; Joseph Wisner, its consulting engineer; Horace P. Ramey, its assistant chief engineer, and Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom are among the defense group.

CITY CAUGHT IN METER DILEMMA, OFFICIALS CLAIM

Delay Called Critical in Face of U. S. Orders.

Confronted with a critical delay in its water metering program, the city found itself apparently helpless yesterday in its controversy with members of the Plumbers' union over their reported pact to set only one meter a day instead of four or five.

If the installations per man per day are not increased, officials pointed out, there are but three courses open to the city if it is to catch up on the schedule set by the war department in allowing withdrawal of 8,500 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan.

Disadvantages in All Plans.

They are: Advertise for bids and award a contract for the work to a private concern; or turn back to work to the Meter Setters' union, or employ more plumbers at $12 a day. Any one of the three moves has disadvantages for the city, it was maintained.

The first proposal, officials say, would gain nothing, since the union, controlling all master plumbers in the city, would still be in the saddle. If the plumbers wished to set one meter each and quit for the day a contractor would be in the same predicament as the city and would be compelled to raise his price accordingly, it was said.

Adoption of the second plan, it is believed, would immediately renew the old fight between the meter setters and the plumbers which ended last July when the latter group won a monopoly on the work. Furthermore, it probably would bring on a strike by the plumbers, officials said.

Sprague Asks More Plumbers.

The city administration, according to an authentic report, does not relish the idea of the strike and possible enmity of organized labor with a mayoralty campaign ahead and desires a peaceable settlement. With this in view A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, has proposed the employment of fifteen more plumbers.

This step would cost the city an additional $180 a day in wages and has been opposed in the council finance committee. Mr. Sprague's request is to come up in the next committee meeting, at which the union officials have been asked to appear. The fight may then go to the floor of the council.

City Engineer John Ericson assailed the statement that a plumber cannot set more than one or two meters a day. With a test squad of workmen recently, he said, an average of a meter an hour was installed, or eight per man per day.

Work Far Behind, Ericson Says.

"It is an intolerable situation," he declared. "I have done the best I could with it, but it was taken out of my department and put under the water pipe extension bureau because the plumbers would not work under nonunion men. Now there is more fighting and work is already far behind."

Under the agreement with the government the city is supposed to meterize 90 per cent of its water service in ten years. This means it must install 380,000 meters, 26,000 being this year's quota. So far only 9,000 have been installed and the total for the year is not expected to exceed half the required number.

FETE COMPLETION OF LINCOLN PARK DRIVEWEDNESDAY

Luncheon at the Edgewater Beach hotel has been arranged for Wednesday to mark completion of the Simmons island drive in Lincoln park to meet the double drive off Belmont avenue.

The presidents of the three park boards, Edward J. Kelly of the south parks, David H. Jackson of Lincoln park and Dr. John Dill Robertson of the west parks, have been invited to attend and address the meeting. It is expected that 1,000 representatives of north side clubs will be on hand.

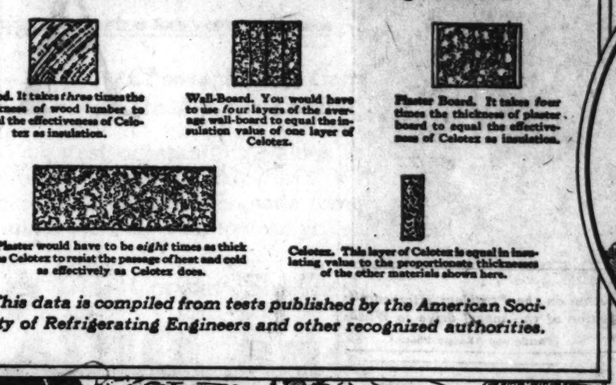
Scientific facts every home owner must face!

Tests show that the usual building materials when used alone offer inadequate protection against cold and heat. Lining your attic with Celotex will make your home more comfortable. It will save in fuel money more than it costs.

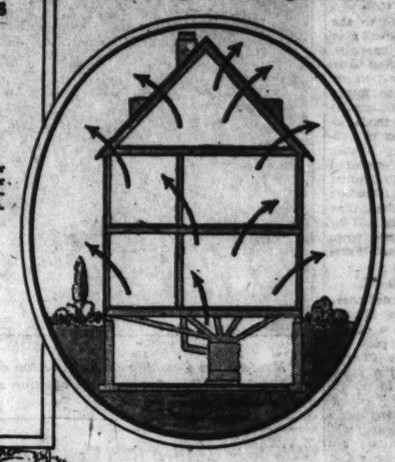
Relative heat-stopping values of building materials

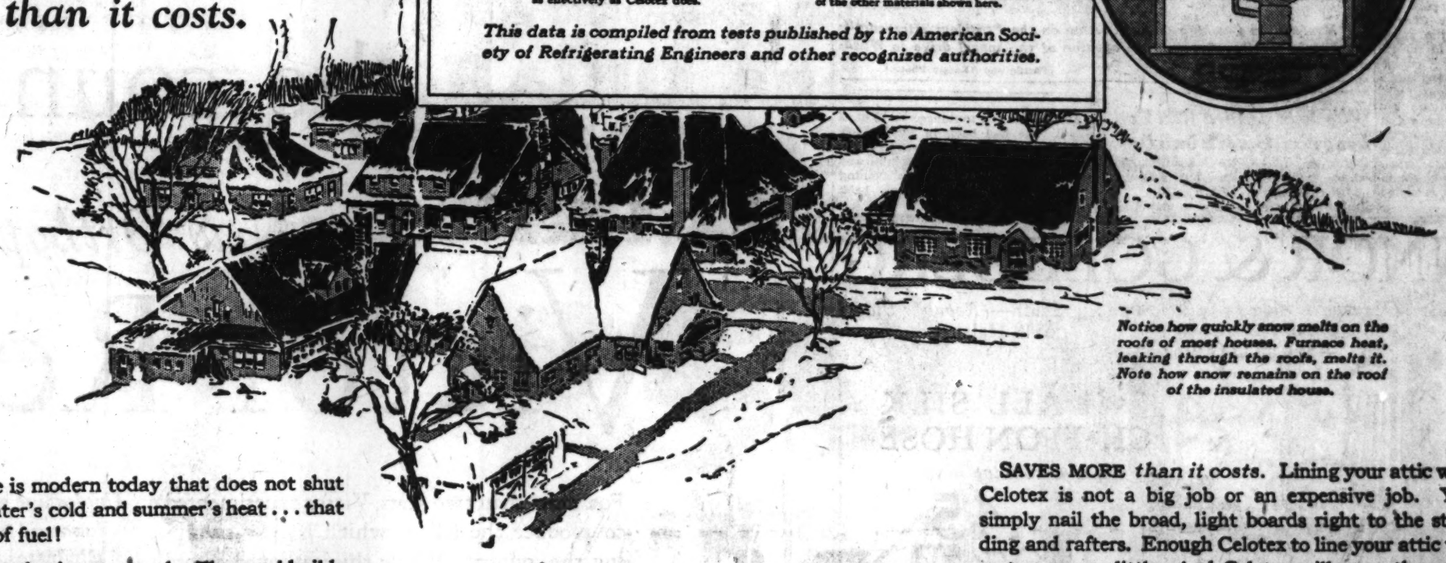
These cross-sections show why Celotex is needed as insulation, in addition to the usual building materials.



This data is compiled from tests published by the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers and other recognized authorities.

Because furnace-heated air naturally rises, the greatest amount of the avoidable heat-leakage occurs through the roof.



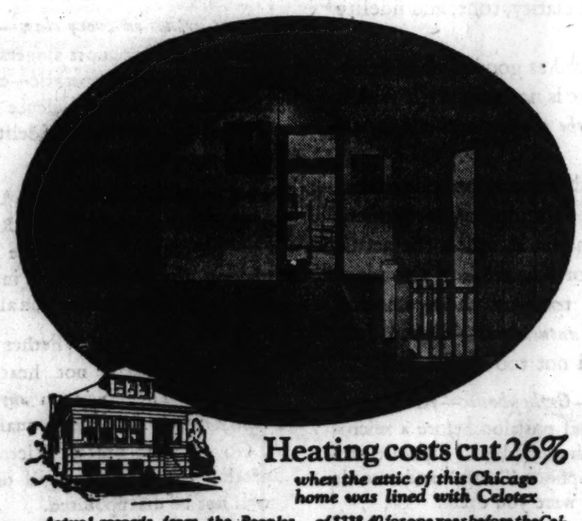


Notice how quickly snow melts on the roofs of most houses. Furnace heat, leaking through the roofs, melts it. Note how snow remains on the roof of the insulated house.

NO home is modern today that does not shut out winter's cold and summer's heat . . . that is wasteful of fuel!

Solid construction is not enough. The usual building materials such as wood, brick, plaster, wall-boards, shingles and roofing materials, alone, offer too little resistance to the passage of heat and cold. Scientific tests prove it.

And careful experiments in hundreds of homes show that there is an avoidable heat loss of from 25% to 35% right through solid walls and roofs of homes built with only these materials.



Heating costs cut 26%
when the attic of this Chicago home was lined with Celotex

Actual records from the Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company show that the owners of this house at 5424 Trumbull Avenue, Chicago, saved 26% in fuel money by lining the attic with Celotex. The house was heated by a gas-fired boiler at a cost of $338.40 for one year before the Celotex was applied. The next season's gas consumption, after the Celotex was applied amounted to only $250.92 . . . a saving of $87.48. (Allowances made to correct for the difference in the severity of the winters.)

A special heat-stopping, or insulating, material is needed. And such a material is available for every home, new or old, right now.

This material is Celotex, the amazing lumber that stops the passage of heat and cold . . . shuts out wind and moisture . . . quiets noise. Celotex is not cut from trees, but is manufactured from the tough fibres of cane. The broad Celotex boards are stronger in walls than wood lumber.

Already more than 90,000 new homes built with Celotex have set a new American building standard. For these homes are winter-warm, summer-cool, quiet, strong and about ⅓ more economical to heat.

LINE YOUR ATTIC with Celotex. Thousands more who built before Celotex was available are now making their old homes modern by lining their attics with this amazing lumber.

While attic insulation cannot effect the same results as complete house insulation, it gives protection where it is most needed. The roof is the most exposed, yet the thinnest and least protected part of your house. Also, because heated air rises, the greatest amount of the avoidable heat-leakage is through the roof in winter. And in summer, such a roof is poor protection against the sun's attack.

Anyone who can use a saw and hammer can finish off an attic room with Celotex. You simply nail the broad, light boards to the studding and rafters. Celotex not only shuts out winter-cold and summer-heat but converts your old attic into an attractive, livable room.

SAVES MORE than it costs. Lining your attic with Celotex is not a big job or an expensive job. You simply nail the broad, light boards right to the studding and rafters. Enough Celotex to line your attic will cost you very little. And Celotex will more than pay for its cost in the fuel money it saves.

Celotex also converts your old attic into a comfortable, livable room. Its golden-tan color and rough-textured surface make an attractive wall finish . . . or you can decorate it in many ways.

There are also many other places where Celotex is the ideal material for re-decorating, repairing or re-modeling.

Ask your architect, contractor or lumber dealer to tell you more about this amazing lumber. All lumber dealers can supply Celotex. Also ask about the $200 gold bond now issued on all Celotex-insulated homes.

Meanwhile, send the coupon below for the free Celotex Building Book. It tells you how to use Celotex in old and new homes alike.

MOVE TO QUASH AUTO TRAP CASE AGAINST HUSZAR

Judge Decides Tomorrow on Defense Plea.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Judge Emanuel Eller in Criminal court yesterday heard a petition by the defense to quash the speed trap conspiracy indictment against Joseph "Indian Joe" Huszar, former chief of police, and Edward J. Wareham, former justice of the peace, of Broadview. The indictment grew out of the sweeping speed trap investigations recently conducted by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, aided by the Chicago Motor club.

Although Huszar was indicted on charges of conspiracy, robbery with a gun, and extortion, the defense yesterday declared that the indictment was too general.

To Give Decision Tomorrow.

Judge Eller, after listening to the arguments, announced that he will give his decision on the petition tomorrow.

Scores of complaints charging Huszar with brutality and extortion on the highway poured in to the motor club and state's attorney following the first exposé of banditry methods alleged to have been employed by officials of many Cook county towns. More than a dozen witnesses appeared before the grand jury to testify against Huszar, among them several women whose husbands and escorts had, they declared, been made to "stand and deliver" in the little Broadview town hall police station by the Huszar-Wareham combination.

Huszar Immediately Indicted.

The jury immediately returned three criminal indictments against Huszar and linked the former justice of the peace in the conspiracy charge.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who conducted the speed trap inquiry which resulted in the indictment of five Cook county village officials and has spread to many other counties in Illinois and Indiana, will have charge of the prosecution. He expects to push the case tomorrow and is confident of a conviction. The first conviction in a speed trap case came in Waukegan a few days ago, when Chief Hamlin of Lake Villa was found guilty of speed trap practices, removed from office, and heavily fined.

Wheels of Justice Ran Too Long; Jail Owes Him 5 Days

Moscow, Idaho, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The wheels of justice ground out too much in his case, Henry Wynn thinks. He pleaded guilty yesterday to drinking in public and was sentenced to 15 days in jail. He had been in 20 days already, however, waiting for a hearing. Sheriff Summerfield released him and told him he had five days coming whenever he desires to come back after it.

SET UP CANNON TO KEEP PEACE AT GREEK POLLS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Nov. 6.—Greece is awaiting tomorrow's elections calmly outwardly, although the air is charged with danger. The Royalists are attacking the Republican régime, making much use of the six political assassinations in 1922. The Republicans anticipate a victory, while the Royalists also voice hopes of winning.

Owing to the number of fantastic parties, however, and the disappointment of a large number of Republicans in the government's weakness in handling affairs, defeat for the Republicans is not impossible. It appears certain that the Republicans will not give up the struggle if they are beaten by only a small Royalist majority.

Premier Condylis admits that he has ordered several cannon placed on the heights dominating Athens, but says this is only to maintain order on election day. The populace is greatly excited by fiery articles in the press, the Royalists accusing the Republicans of establishing tyranny.

The Republicans believe the Royalists, foreseeing defeat, may try to cause trouble at the last moment

Lithuania Announces Plan for Loan by U. S. Bankers

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Nov. 6.—The Lithuanian government announces the early visit of a group of American capitalists who are prepared to offer the country a $4,000,000 loan in exchange for the tobacco monopoly. The press is skeptical, since "American capitalists" who have visited the Baltic states in the last few years have turned out to be small New York brokers offering loans at high interest.

YAQUIS ARMED BY AIDS IN U. S., MEXICO HEARS

Indians Refrain from the Usual Massacres.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Guaymas, Sonora, Mex., Nov. 6.—A strong band of Yaqui Indians fleeing, Nov. 3, from the destruction of the towns of Bacatete and Bacatito by airplane bombardment, attempted to run the blockade of federal soldiers stationed at Pilares to prevent the Indians from issuing through the mountain pass into the lowlands in search of cattle and grain. The comparatively small federal forces held their ground.

The sound of firing and skyrockets sent up brought reinforcements from Orits and airplanes from the aerial base at Lamisa. After half an hour of severe fighting the Indians were driven back into the Bacatete hills.

This was the third time in the last week that the Indians have attempted to enter the rich grain valleys. Most of their food as well as ammunition supplies were reported destroyed when the airplanes wiped out the Indian capitol of Bacatete in the north Bacatete mountain range.

Get Arms from U. S., Claim.

Reports from the Indian country say the Yaquis are becoming worried over the preparations being made completely to hem them in and because of the shortage of food.

Parties passing through the Cananea copper mining region, south of the United States border, report the Yaquis, following the mountain range all the way from Bacatete, constantly are coming and going to the United States border for arms and ammunition. They seem to be well supplied with money and it is believed Mexican revolutionary interests in the United States are backing them.

The government has begun the extension of the automobile road across the north Yaqui country from Lamisa aviation field, between Hermosillo and Guaymas, with a view to shutting off the Yaqui communication with the north. An encircling line of soldiers rapidly is being extended about the north Bacatete range.

Yaquis Claim Church Backing.

Another party of Yaquis entered Las Rastras Wednesday, carrying off a supply of grain. They left a receipt for the grain and a promise to pay, and a carefully typewritten letter.

"People of the district, do not be afraid," the letter said. "The Yaquis will not hurt you. We take your grain because we need it. We will pay when we win this revolution against the two tyrants, Alvaro Obregon and Plutarco E. Calles.

For the first time in their history the Yaquis have refrained from personal robbery, slaughter and murder. It is evident that some restraining influence is working against their Indian instincts. From these sources is supposed to come a liberal supply of funds, with which the Yaquis are buying ammunition.

The Yaquis have sent other typewritten communications to the generals and heads of divisions of the army, explaining that they have no desire to revolt against the Mexican government and that the burning of the bridges in the early part of the campaign was inspired by leaders outside the Yaqui tribe, who prepared the revolt in the name of De La Huerta and revolutionary agitators in the United States.

CALLES SUBMITS BILL TO TIGHTEN BONDS ON CHURCH

Mexico City, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Mexico's religious regulations, which already have resulted in grave controversy between the government and the Roman Catholic church, are made considerably more drastic in a new bill which President Calles today submitted to congress.

The limitations upon religious newspapers and periodicals are made more severe and the penalties for their infringement are made heavier, fines and prison terms being provided.

The new bill requires priests to register with the municipal authorities before they can perform any religious services, thus preventing them from conducting masses in private homes unless they register.

It specifies that no religious marriage ceremony can be performed by any priest or minister until after a civil marriage has gone through. Priests also are required to report every marriage they perform within five days.

Clergymen who refuse to obey this law and claim that orders must be given them by their established hierarchical authorities will be punished.

Other clauses make more stringent the regulations concerning the ownership of property by priests, forbid them publicly or privately to criticise the Mexican constitution.

COMPLETE K. OF C. PLANS TO ASSIST MEXICO CHURCH

Knights of Columbus officials closed their sessions here yesterday with three secret meetings at the Palmer house in which plans were completed for the disposition of a million dollar fund raised to arouse American opinion and aid the Roman Catholic church in Mexico.

Sixty-one deputies of the order from the United States, Porto Rico, Canada, and Central America were present, called by Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty of Philadelphia to plan a campaign against Mexico's church policy. At Friday's meeting it was decided to use pamphlets and the radio to inform the public of the plight of the Mexican church.

The officials paid their respects to Cardinal Mundelein yesterday.

HAPSBURG CLAIM TO CROWN HIT BY HUNGARY'S CHIEF

See Move to Link Nation with Roumania.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Nov. 6.—A blow to the legitimist cause was struck yesterday by Premier Bethlen when he declared in the national assembly that the continuity of the old constitution had been broken by King Charles' abdication, and sovereignty now is vested in the national assembly alone.

This is interpreted as Premier Bethlen's open announcement that he favors the election of a non-Hapsburg as king. Up to the present his attitude was not clear.

The sensational statement was made in reply to charges by the opposition leader, M. Nagy, that Count Bauffy was conducting propaganda in Premier Bethlen's behalf for a union of Roumania under the Roumanian crown prince, Carol. Premier Bethlen denied this, but in a way which suggests that he may some time change his mind.

See New King Near.

It is the general belief in Budapest that the premier's speech foreshadows a sensational turn in the near future. It may even mean that the Hungarian throne, vacant since 1918, will at last be filled.

The legitimists deny that the assembly has the right to choose a king. Premier Bethlen said that admitting Archduke Joseph and his son to the new upper house was not a concession to the legitimists, but was a compliment to the Hungarian branch of the Hapsburgs, which always sided with the nation.

From this passage it is concluded in political circles that Premier Bethlen, while leaving the door open for the candidacy of the Roumanian king, also is flirting with Archduke Joseph's aspirations.

Lithuania Gets King Score.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Nov. 6.—The Kovno paper, Rykas, reports that the Spanish Prince Alfonso has concluded a two day visit incognito to Kovno. The paper demands that the government explain the visit, alleging Prince Alfonso's name was mentioned as the probable king of Lithuania during the period of German occupation in 1920. Prince Alfonso was born Nov. 20, 1901, the son of Prince Carlos of Bourbon. His mother was Maria de las Mercedes, queen of Spain until the birth of her brother, born Sept. 11, 1886.

GUEST'S PRAISE OF HINDENBURG ROILS EX-KAISER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—The former kaiser's real feelings toward President von Hindenburg were disclosed at Doorn recently. While the former ruler of Germany and his guests were awaiting an announcement that lunch was served, the conversation drifted to political subjects. According to the Neue Leipziger Zeitung, Herr von Oldenburg of Januschau remarked it was a praiseworthy action of Gen. von Hindenburg to assume the office of presidency at his advanced age. The former kaiser, who had been displaying increasing signs of irritation, angrily called out:

"You are all traitors."

He then arose and marched majestically out of the room, leaving the disconcerted guests to dine alone.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Notice was filed in the office of Charles W. Vail, clerk of the state supreme court, today that a rehearing will be asked in December in the case involving the probation of the will of Billy McClintock. The Supreme court in a recent opinion sustained the act of Judge Scanlan in admitting the will to probate. The will leaves the million dollar estate to Attorney William D. Shepherd.

FORMER PRISON OFFICIAL FACES BEER TRIAL HERE

Alleged Leader in Million Dollar Syndicate.

David J. Allen, purchasing agent for the Atlanta penitentiary during President Harding's administration, and later an alleged beer baron of Peoria, yesterday lost a year's fight against removal to Chicago for trial in the Morton Grove amber scandal.

Allen is accused of shipping into Chicago within a short period of time $1,016,000 worth of beer manufactured in eastern breweries which he is alleged to have controlled.

Federal Judge John Bodine of Trenton, N. J., yesterday ruled that Allen must come to Chicago and face a jury with Al Winge, former Chicago police lieutenant; the Boston and Maine railway as a corporation, and three of the company's employés; three Chicago politicians, A. M. Matt and Ted Kolb, Alfred Bornier, an employé of the New York Central at the time of his indictment, and William J. Kelley, former official in the traffic department of Sears-Roebuck and company.

Beer Seized Year Ago.

On Sept. 9, 1925, prohibition agents seized five carloads of beer at the main Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul siding in Motorn Grove. A week later three more cars were halted.

The beer shipments were traced to the Glit Edge Beverage company, Lawrence, Mass. Special Intelligence Agents Pat Roche and Clarence Converse went east and established ownership of the plant.

The two agents charged they had found Allen enjoyed entre to several highly important offices in Washington and that he had used official friendships in establishing one of the biggest beer syndicate in the country.

New Raid in Chicago.

Prohibition agents under Capt. R. Q. Merrick, enforcement chief, yesterday raided the offices of the Beverage Dispensers' Benevolent Protective association, 164 West Washington street, and seized 10 cases of Old Colonial whisky, 48 bottles of Scotch, 2 sacks containing 24 quarts of whisky, 15 cases of champagne, and some miscellaneous booze.

Part of the $10,000 loot was recovered, search of Philip Gauble, 36, Detroit, one of thep risoners, yielding $1,295. John Peters, 32, Detroit, the other suspect, had $1,050.06 in his possession. Both were armed. The arrest followed a tip from a taxicab driver who took the men to a hotel.

COOLIDGE IS AFFABLE, NOT COLD AND SILENT, ENGLISH POET SAYS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—John Masefield, British author and poet, called on President Coolidge at the White House today and found him "talkative and extremely affable."

Mr. Masefield said he did not find the President the cold, silent New Englander so often pictured in the press.

"Did you talk about poetry or books?" Mr. Masefield was asked.

"No," the poet replied with a smile. It developed that the President and Mr. Masefield had spent most of the time allotted to the interview attempting to recollect where they had met before.

The President was of the opinion he had met Mr. Masefield some years ago in Boston. On this point President Coolidge had the advantage of Mr. Masefield.

Mr. Masefield said that of his own poems he liked "Reynard the Fox" as well as any other.

"The one I usually regard the most," he said, "is the one I am working on at the time. When they are written then I do not regard them any more."

EDISON WILL VIE WITH VETS AT THE TELEGRAPH KEY

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Thomas A. Edison, who in his early years worked as a telegraph operator, will have an opportunity on Armistice day to try his hand at "pounding the key" with other veterans of the craft.

On that day the inventor will be the guest of J. M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna railroad, on a trip in the president's private car to New Village, N. J., to inspect the cement plant there owned by Charles Edison, his son.

Among those making the trip will be E. M. Rine, senior vice president of the Lackawanna, who operated a telegraph key twenty years ago; P. J. Flynn, traffic vice president, who began as a telegrapher about forty years ago, and Supt. L. B. Folley, who did the same fifty years ago.

During the lunch hour a telegraph set will be placed in the dining car and the veterans will vie in sending messages.

Girl Who Sent Uncle to Prison Weds Iowan

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Elsie Dunlevy, eighteen years old, of Manchester, who caused the arrest of her uncle, John Dunlevy, in Chicago last February, on a charge of incest, left her home at Manchester yesterday with Patrick Toomey and went to Ryan, where they were married. Dunlevy is serving 25 years in Fort Madison prison for his crime. The girl was arrested last summer in Chicago on a charge of robbing the home of her employer, but the case was dismissed.

SPIKES POPULAR MYTH THAT BRIAR PIPE IS PART OF COLLEGE MAN

Columbus, O., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The popular picture of the college man with a cigaret or a pipe in his mouth has been smeared by Ohio State university as a libel.

Of two thousand freshmen at the Buckeye school, Dr. J. H. Nichols, head of the men's department of physical education, found but one in five addicted to the fag and one in eight to the pipe.

Only 19.7 per cent of this year's matriculants use cigarets, 12.3 per cent smoke a pipe, and 2 per cent puff cigars.

Six of the 2,154 frosh confessed a predilection for chewing tobacco.

ORDER SINCLAIR BE TRIED FOR OIL QUIZ CONTEMPT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[United Press.]—Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, today was ordered to stand trial in District of Columbia Supreme court on an indictment charging contempt for refusing to testify before the senate oil investigation committee.

The District Court of Appeals canceled permission for a special appeal from the indictment, which was granted Sinclair in 1924.

Attorneys for Sinclair indicated they might appeal to the United States Supreme court, charging that the Walsh act, under which the appeal was disallowed, is unconstitutional.

GRAND JURY TO HEAR NEW FACTS IN MELLETT CASE

Canton, O., Nov. 6.—(AP)—With many angles of the Don R. Mellett murder mystery yet unsolved and with Prosecutor C. H. McClintock declaring several more persons in all probability will be indicted, the Stark county grand jury will be convened within a few days to consider new evidence.

Before the jury meets, however, Patrick E. McDermott, one of the trio already indicted, will enter his plea to the charge and prepare to face trial.

Immediately following McDermott's trial Louis Maser, jointly indicted, will be tried later; Ben Rudner will be tried on the same charge.

The prosecutor declares the grand jury is to consider an indictment against Norris Nadel, Cleveland, alleged to have concealed McDermott in Cleveland for more than three months after the murder, and to have been identified as the man who shadowed Mellett shortly before he was slain. Still others may be indicted, he says.

My Powder For Girls

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Countless girls and women ask me about my powders. I did not sell them at first. In fact, I was paying per box, and only stage stars paid that.

But now I am having these powders made by the hundred thousand lots. And those boxes now sell at $1—the powders used by movie stars, the finest that skill can produce, toilet counters supply them in any store.

There are two types. One is my Youth Cream Powder—a heavy cream powder that clings and stays. Use that type. Many women prefer a light and fluffy powder, so I have the same powders made in that way, and the price is only 50c.

Let me send you some samples in little vanity tabs. Let me treat you to the finest powders in the world. Mail and clip the coupon now.

No "off-color" teeth no toneless gums when that dingy film is removed

Accept this remarkable dental test. You'll gain the dazzling white teeth and coral-like gums that make smiles attractive and inviting.

MODERN dental science has made important, recent discoveries in lightening cloudy teeth.

In a few days you can work great changes in the color of your teeth: can give them dazzling whiteness, and your gums the healthy coral tint you envy.

If you seek new beauty and new charm, test this new way. Do as millions are doing on dental advice. Multiply the value of your smile. Mail the coupon. A 10-day test will be sent you.

Beneath that film are gleaming, glorious teeth

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film, a viscous coat that covers them.

That film is an enemy to your teeth—and your gums. You must remove it.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It absorbs discolorations and gives your teeth that cloudy, "off-color" look.

Germs by the millions breed in it and lay your teeth open to decay. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and gum disorders.

Tooth troubles and gum troubles now are largely traced to that film. Old-time methods fail in successfully combating it. That's why, regardless of the care you take now, your teeth remain unattractive.

New methods remove it. And Firm the Gums

Now, in a new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent, dental science has discovered effective combatants. Their action is to curdle the film and remove it, then to firm the gums.

Ordinary methods fail in these results.

Thus the world has turned, largely on dental advice, to this new method.

What you see when that film is removed—the whiteness of your teeth—will amaze you.

You are simply hiding the natural beauty of your teeth.

A few days' use will prove its power beyond all doubt.

REVOLT BREWS IN PORTUGAL BEHIND CENSOR'S SCREEN

Rebel Chief, from Prison, Sounds Call to Arms.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—[By Courier from Lisbon, Portugal.]—The Portuguese political situation becomes more and more puzzling. Violence reigns beneath the calm surface and the uncertainty of what tomorrow will bring is getting on everybody's nerves.

The press is gagged by a strict censorship and is unable to discuss at length the work and aims of the government. This naturally tends to provoke profuse clandestine publication of pamphlets.

At the same time, a conspiracy is developing, awaiting a propitious moment when it can overturn the government. The government, in order to strengthen its position, is arresting many of its political and military adversaries. Some have been deported to Maderia and others who have been expelled have taken refuge in Spain.

Ex-Official Jailed.

One of those arrested, Maj. Alvaro de Castro, former president of the council of the high commission of Mozambique, is imprisoned in the fortress at El Vas. He was first sentenced to two months on account of a letter outlining the present conditions. More recently he was sentenced to six months because of another more violent letter accusing the cabinet of betraying the republic. This letter his secretary printed and distributed, addressed to the Portuguese people. It began:

"To arms, citizens. The republic is in danger."

The following passage is extracted from the letter:

"From the fortress at El Vas. I am very ill. Even so, I do not feel discouraged. Face to face with facts, which denounce treason to the republic and country, I feel that my energies have multiplied and the facts increased in approaching the re-establishment of Portugal's constitutional rights—a republic of principles and ideas, not a republic of the rapacious pharisees of the president in power. To arms, citizens. The republican army, whose heart I feel beating under the walls of my prison, is calm and firm. And you will accompany it, citizens.

"Betraying the Republic."

"The republican army repudiates the spying work of the minister of war's famous service, where comrades watch comrades with ferocity and inquisition. The republican army despises the tyrants now in power who cover their incompetence and the immortality of their administration by severe rule and censorship of the press. The republican army will not assist peacefully the demise of the republic, stifled and betrayed. Republicans, they are preparing in secret the betrayal of the republic.

"At a breakfast recently given at Cintra, at which were present some of the ministers of the present cabinet, accompanied by Gen. Carmona, an agreement was concluded to re-establish a monarchy. It is for the republic to conquer or die. Long live the republic. Oct. 25, 1926. [Signed] Alfaro de Castro."

ASK REMOVAL OF JUDGE WHO TRIED SACCO, VANZETTI

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—In a letter delivered to him as he was sailing today for Europe, Gov Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts was requested by 30 editors of foreign language and union newspapers and magazines to remove Judge Webster Thayer from the Massachusetts bench for his decision denying a new trial for Nicolai Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of murder.

Gov. Fuller's answer read:

"This is to acknowledge your communication, and you may rest assured this matter is to have my careful consideration. I shall be back in Boston about Dec. 20."

"On the records of this case," the letter to the governor said, "Judge Thayer stands accused of being partly responsible for a verdict based on prejudice rather than evidence. Judge Thayer's conduct of the original trial has been severely criticised. His prejudice against the defendants and their friends has been remarked by newspaper men who covered the case. From the first he made himself belligerent to defense attorneys. It is our sincere belief that Judge Thayer has practically impeached himself in this case."

DEFENDS PLEA TO FRANCE TO MAKE IT PAY AMERICA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Col. Picot, official French delegate to the American Legion convention in Philadelphia, today issued an open letter replying to the attack in the French newspapers by Deputy Jean Goy on Col. Picot's outspoken statement approving of the settlement of the French debt to the United States.

"My dear Goy," Col. Picot's reply reads, "like you, I am a deputy. You have heard me speak many times in the chamber of deputies and when I think a thing is right I say it outright. I brought back from America convictions on the subject of the debt, born and confirmed in numerous conversations I had with American people of all classes, including the highest political circles, which advised me to say what I have said, and that is, that France must settle its debts. The people in America who think this more than any others are the French-Americans.

"Your intentions, my dear Goy, probably are of the best, but I am a simple man, speak simple words, and I have the courage of my convictions. You, in spite of everything and in spite of those in whose name you speak, know that it is in the interest of our country that we settle our debts."

ALSACE RALLIES DEFENSE TROOPS TO CURB FRENCH

But Fists Are the Only Weapons of Corps.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

STRASSBOURG, France, Nov. 6.—The Thoiry rapprochment plans offer no comfort to the Alsatians.

"We do not want to be sacrificed on the altar of a Franco-German understanding," cries the weekly bill of grievances edited by the Autonomist society and read avidly in Strassbourg, Mulhouse, Colmar, and the farthest hamlets in both Alsace and Lorraine.

The Thoiry meeting and the subsequent pourparlers have failed to cheer Alsace-Lorraine, because they have given promise of no miracle to assure these 1,600,000 persons that their country will never again be a football for warring nations. And they have gone just far enough in point of back scratching between Paris and Berlin to lead the Alsatians to entertain dismal expectations that their troubles will get even less attention, less sympathy from Paris now than in the last eight years.

The discontent with the French administration methods in these provinces is unanimous, and the autonomist movement has enough vigor to assure it an important political rôle for many years.

Autonomists Raise Defense Bands.

The autonomist society has reached an ominous decision to amend its hitherto pacific character with the creation of defense troops to occupy halls where autonomist meetings are scheduled to insure them against being broken up. This is the autonomists' answer to the Colmar incident, where Fascists and Royalists, apparently with the connivance of the government, descended upon them.

The autonomist society defense troops will be purely a civil group, naturally, and will not even carry canes, which the royalists, Fascists, and even communist shock troops here affect. They will be armed only with their redoubtable Alsatian fists. The number of enlistments leaves no doubt that the defense corps means business, and its formation is taken here as a most serious manifestation of the society's vigor since the ill-fated manifesto.

There is no way of gauging the autonomist rôles accurately before the elections of 1928. The autonomist society counts on seeing its efforts bear fruit then in the shape of three or four autonomist deputies in the French chamber, which hope THE TRIBUNE correspondent finds well grounded, though the society momentarily is staggering under the blow delivered by Premier Raymond Poincare.

Clergy Backing Down.

Most autonomist opinion attributed the sudden timidity of the clergy, who hitherto have formed the right arm of the movement, to the coup d'etat which Premier Poincare is believed to have accomplished in getting Rome to counsel its clergy to silence, in return for certain assurances regarding the threatened extension of lay schools to the two provinces.

Besides this defection by the clergy, the society is forced to fight clever propaganda much of the autonomist movement is charged to the German influence by certain propaganda agencies. It is true that the Germanophiles—there are 70,000 naturalized Germans in Alsace and 80,000 not naturalized, as well as relatives and friends of 200,000 who were forced to hie themselves back across the Rhine in 1918—all of whom flocked to the autonomist society, as far as they dared. They have been a liability.

But THE TRIBUNE correspondent finds after a week's investigation that the society's leaders for the most part are sincere Alsatians who are proud of their Germanic culture and language, which is almost universal in Alsace, and who want just what they want—autonomy within the French frontiers.

The society's program naturally is the focus point for a genuine separatist sentiment, which is extremely limited, and for the most part confined to idealists who have a vision of a neutral Alsace as a part of a vast neutral buffer between France and Germany, extending through Switzerland, Luxemberg, Belgium, and Holland and acting as a bridge between Gallic and Teuton cultures.

But apart from the autonomist society there is lively alarm among the thinking Alsatians, who, conscious of the value of retaining their racial characteristics, cower at the efforts at centralization which are a part of the French administrative system. All the parties of Alsace and Lorraine desire a drastic decentralization. The Radicals and Socialists, however, want a decentralization for all France, asking no concessions for Alsace alone. They are leagued with the Bretons.

M. Hennessey of brandy manufacturing fame, former ambassador to Switzerland, who is planning to re-enter politics, is counted on to lead the fight in the chamber of deputies for an administrative reform, releasing the provinces from the grasp of Paris.

His suspension came as a climax of an investigation started a week ago when it was reported that liquor had been served at numerous parties during the homecoming celebration. Drastic penalties are promised other students found guilty.

The miners ask that agreements as to hours and wages be subject to revision nationally.

BEE "HURRICANE" MAKES SHIP REEL AND HALTS RADIO

Comes Out of Sea Like Black Cloud.

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—A "hurricane" of bumble bees threatened the comfort, if not the safety, of the crew of the Dollar liner President Adams on her recent trip through the Mediterranean.

Capt. W. A. Ross has the proper entries in his log to substantiate every detail, to say nothing of the ship's hospital record noting three days convalescence for Seaman Mike McGraw, one of the volunteers summoned to "repel boarders."

"It was a calm afternoon," reports Capt. Ross, "when a point or so off the beam I saw a black spot. Thinking we were in for a hurricane, I ordered everything battened. The spot spread and a buzz like airplane motors was perceptible. Through my glasses I could see the air teeming with bees."

His story relates the impact of the bee storm, the reeling of the good ship, the transfer of the queen bee to the liner's aerial with millions of her retainers, and the prompt collapse of that equipment.

Mike was sent along with an oil smudge to clear the wires, and Mike was under the doctor's care three days. It's all in the record.

Capt. Ross didn't capture any of the bumble bees, but he brought back two chameleons for the Bronx zoo.

FASCISTI STRIKE YANK WHO FAILS TO DOFF HIS HAT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Nov. 6.—Dr. Eli Rau, 65, well known physician in Lawrence, Long Island, was struck in the face Wednesday night in Via Baudino for failing to take off his hat when a Fascist parade passed.

Dr. Rau said he had just arrived in Rome and left his hotel after dinner for a stroll. A few paces from the hotel he was overtaken by a parade of Fascist militia, followed by Fascist groups not in uniform, but carrying standards.

"There being no flags, I was used to such parades at home and did not think anything of it," Dr. Rau said. "Then suddenly one man knocked off my hat and another struck me a blow in the temple. Mrs. Rau cried, 'Americano! Americano!' and the two assailants left us."

Dr. Rau says he intends to lay the matter before Chargé d'Affaires Warren D. Robbins at the American embassy.

Hindu Youth Steals $1.44 and Gets Life Sentence

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AHMEDABAD, India, Nov. 6.—Because he stole 4 rupees [about $1.44] a Hindu youth recently was sentenced by a sessions court judge to life imprisonment. The severity of the sentence is explained by the fact that the youth was an old offender, but newspapers now are advocating juvenile courts.

PARENTS' IGNORANCE COSTS U. S. BILLIONS YEAR, WRITER SAYS

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Ignorance and incompetency of parents in all classes of society costs the nation billions of dollars annually and shifts too great burden on the teachers, Ida Clyde Clarke, New York writer, declared today at the closing session of the Wisconsin Teachers' association.

Failing to realize that the first five years of a child's existence is the most important, she said, the country expects the schools to correct the faults caused by neglect of parents.

The speaker urged coöperation between men and women's clubs to meet the world's problems.

"Tariff and taxes are just as much the problem of women as they are of men," she declared, "for both effect the price of baby shoes and butter."

"While essentially woman's place is in the home, the age of industrialism has released her from the monotonous drudgery so that she may now contribute in the human work of the world.

"Woman must enlarge her vision in mutual meetings with men, uniting their efforts in the interests of humanity."

MICHIGAN SCHOOL HEAD IS OUSTED BY GOVERNOR

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Thomas Johnson, state superintendent of public instruction, was ousted this morning by Gov. Alex Groesbeck, who held him guilty of corruption and malfeasance in office. The governor appointed Wilford L. Coffey, deputy superintendent, Johnson's successor.

The action resulted from the recent hearing of charges filed against Johnson by Leonard T. Hands, state insurance commissioner. The charges were made, Johnson asserted, at the instance of Gov. Groesbeck, who was judge and jury in the hearing. The deposed official asserted that the proceedings were brought by Groesbeck for political revenge because of his support of Governor Elect Fred Green in the primary.

Although it is not believed here that the Supreme court will review the decision, George Nichold of Ionia, one of Johnson's attorneys, said an effort will be made to reverse the governor's action.

Ohio State Elects Cow as "Homecoming Queen"

Columbus, O., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Nominated on a ticket with ten popular Ohio State university girls, Ohio Maudine Ormisby, thoroughbred Holstein cow, was elected "homecoming queen" for the Michigan game Nov. 13. Maudine's vote far exceeded the total cast for the other candidates.

BAPTISTS OPEN WAR ON ROUMANIA FOR RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—A million Baptists will protest to the league of nations against religious intolerance in Roumania, Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Baptist World alliance, said today on his return from Europe.

The executive council of the Baptist World alliance, he said, is preparing a petition to be circulated throughout the world, memorializing the league to restrain religious persecution in Roumania.

Dr. Mullins declared Roumania to be the "darkest spot on the continent" and "ten times worse than Russia in the matter of religious liberty."

18 Die in Tidal Wave in Italy; Hundreds Homeless

BARI, Italy, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Eighteen deaths have been reported as a result of a tidal wave which swept the city today, causing heavy property damage and driving hundreds of families from their homes.

[Dispatches to The Tribune yesterday said floods, following cloudbursts, had caused heavy damage and several deaths over wide areas in Italy.]

SCHOOL KNICKERS CASE IS GRANTED CHANGE OF VENUE

Jeffersonville, Ind., Nov. 6.—Jeffersonville's famous knickerbocker case was sent to New Albany today on a change of venue. Five Jeffersonville school heads are defendants in the suit of Mrs. Fahman Allen to mandate them to admit her daughter, Virginia, 9, to school in knickerbockers. Mrs. Allen sends her daughter to the Port Fulton school twice daily in divided garments. She is met each time at the door by teachers, who send her home to get a dress.

The "knicker" case attracted nation-wide attention and aroused bitter feeling in Jeffersonville. Walter Lemmon, school board member, has filed an information asking that Lunsford Jones, Jeffersonville newspaper correspondent, be cited for contempt, alleging that his writings influenced public opinion and prevented a fair trial of the case.

McADOO DENIES CALIFORNIA CASH LICKED CAMERON

Los Angeles, Nov. 6.—(AP)—William Gibbs McAdoo, indignant at being called as a witness here today before Senator William H. King, investigating the alleged Arizona slush fund, declared that "it is making a joke out of the government and senate when any politician can bring reputable people before the senate on grounds such as these."

Ralph H. Cameron, defeated Republican candidate for reëlection to the senate, charged that California money was sent to Arizona to defeat him.

Counsel for Cameron asked McAdoo if he had not stated in a speech that $1,600,000 had been raised to educate Arizona regarding the Colorado river and other industrial developments and the political situation.

"I made no such statement," McAdoo replied. "It is purely imagination. I never thought of such a thing."

McAdoo demanded that Cameron be brought before the hearing and compelled to state why he had "hauled up a reputable citizen" to testify in the matter.

"It is an absolutely indefensible thing in which he [Cameron] knew I had no connection. I want to cross-examine him and find out on what grounds I was subpoenaed."

GIANT AIR TAXI CIRCLES CHICAGO ON MAIDEN TRIP

Thrills Eight Passengers in First Flight.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

"I'll show you the town," Pilot E. P. Lott, ace of the National Air Transport company, grinned back over his shoulder at his eight passengers, about 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning as he settled himself into the pilot seat of the giant monoplane making the first commercial passenger trip via air out of Chicago.

And he proceeded directly to the showing, in the great batlike air taxi that cost $40,000, embodies all the convenient features of a crack passenger train, and represents the zenith of airplane development with especial emphasis on safety precautions.

Even a novice to the airways gained a maximum of confidence in the first look at the huge ship, with its three great motors resembling corpulent torpedoes, its vast spread of wing, its substantial looking wheels and fuselage, and the design of the roomy body of the plane, with its neat plush carpet and swivel seats, and the adequate semi-circular windows.

Plane Built of Duralumin.

Fire hazards have been cut to a minimum in the material of which it is built—duralumin, an aluminum alloy which lends to the ensemble a deceptively ponderous appearance. It is much lighter than it looks, and puts much less of a strain than might be supposed on the 200 horsepower Wright Whirlwind aircooled motors.

Pilot Lott pulled shut the door of his cabin. Miss Lucette Mayer of Portland, a pretty co-ed, who with three girl companions has been working her way across the country, stepped into the second cabin and touched an experimental finger to a shining percolator. Outside a bevy of machinists were turning a long crank which someone explained winds up the propeller—a new type.

Starts Down the Field.

Then with a muffled roar, signs of the pilot's activity are visible in the great motors outside, where scores of lively little jumping-jacks are hopping up and down like mad, and the propeller is whirling at a dizzying rate.

The big cloud taxi turns slowly about and heads down the field, sweeps back, and heads into the wind, and then—with the slightest of lurches the wheels leave the solid terra firma of the Maywood air mail field, and there's the sensation of a bird on the wing—breath taking, glorious.

Like a map in natural colors, the landscape unfolds itself below and starts speeding by. Almost instantly large buildings have become child's toys, freight trains are Lilliputian in dimensions—one is almost surprised at the tiny puffs of steam from the engines. Field after field glides past, and the cement roads, which were at first like narrow ribbons laid down with the neatest precision at exact angles, become mere white chalk lines.

Jackson Park Seems Small.

Heading southeast at first, Pilot Lott turns directly east, and his passengers excitedly call from one window to another, pointing out familiar places that look anything but familiar—at first glance—from above. It seems a strain on the imagination that the pocket handkerchief size lawn down below can be spacious Jackson park, that Lake Calumet is so insignificant a body of water, that the Midway is only so narrow a stretch of green?

From 4,000 feet above Lake Michigan the Tribune Tower is only about two feet high to unaided optics. The landscape is dotted with plots of green that seem to have been invaded by an army of the tiny worms who chew their crooked paths through ripe apples—Maj. P. G. Kemp, chairman of the Chicago aero commission, explains that they are the sand traps on golf courses.

Luncheon Is Served.

Miss Mayer serves a delicious lunch—but chicken sandwiches remain suspended in the hand, half way to their ultimate destination, while the vista below rivets the attention of the passengers. Coffee cools in the cups without the dining car hazard of being spilled into the saucer, so smooth is the air roadbed.

Back to and south of Maywood, one side of the plane droops at a seemingly perilous angle, the plane slowly pivots, almost stationary in the air, and down below looms up a plot of ground studded with tiny white stones—a cemetery, only 2,500 feet below.

Dropping swiftly toward the landing field, the maiden trip of the plane is ended just an hour after it started, and Col. Paul Henderson, former second assistant to the postmaster general, now general manager of the National Air Transport, is receiving the congratulations of his guests, who in addition to Maj. Kemp included George B. Foster, chairman of the aviation committee of the Association of Commerce; R. W. Ireland, Allen Jackson, and David Jackson of the Lincoln park board.

SMOKE WAR KEPT UP IN SPITE OF COAL SHORTAGE

Due to a scarcity of smokeless coal, Chicago's smoke abatement campaign is under severe handicap, Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen said yesterday.

An increase in European demand occasioned by the British strike, he said, has drawn large supplies of Pennsylvania coal overseas. The result has been price boosts here of $4 a ton.

"But we are not letting up in our campaign," the commissioner said. "The public was warned last summer to buy when coal was cheap."

Where it is necessary to burn soft coal, instructions for smokeless firing can be obtained from Frank A. Chambers, head of the smoke abatement division of the health department, it is announced.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Down the field went Russell "Pug" Daugherity, his yellow headgear bobbing like a sunflower in the wind, sixty yards he went, and then he quit behind Chicago's goal.

There you have the story of an Illinois victory and another Maroon defeat yesterday before 50,000 at Stagg field. There you have the one highlight of a fight that was one-sided, yet close.

So one-sided that the versatile Illini made fifteen first downs, as against one Chicago gained on a penalty. So one-sided that the Staggmen never came within scoring distance. Still, so close that after one hour of actual struggling, most of it dull because of Chicago's lack of offense, the Orange and Blue was on top by only 7 to 0. That slim margin, at least, is evidence that the Maroons didn't fold up before the onslaughts of their traditional foe.

Daugherity's Long Run.

Pug Daugherity put on his big parade to a touchdown just as the second half got under way. Chicago was forced to punt, and Illinois started to go on its own twenty yard line. The doughty Daugherity hit the wall for four and Stewart shot inside Chicago's right tackle for thirteen yards. Then Stewart followed with a couple more stabs that put the oval on Illinois' forty yard line. That completed the preliminaries for Daugherity's long ramble over the turf.

Standing back of the right end of his line "Pug" took the ball from Lanum and charged straight ahead. As he plunged through an opening inside Chicago's left tackle a few Maroon arms reached out to grab him, but he didn't stop. The secondary couldn't bring him down and with only McDonough remaining in his path he cut over to his left. McDonough reached out his arms closed on air and Daugherity went tearing on his way and joined with every step on the couple Maroons who tried to pursue him. "Pug" is fast for a full back.

Frosty's Aim Bad.

Daugherity's sixty yard sprint wasn't his only contribution. He was always going somewhere. At the start of the second period he ran the end for twenty-eight yards. Any number of times he smashed into the line for gains of ten yards or less. When he was stopped, which was seldom, it was cause for cheering from the Maroon rooting sector.

But "Pug" had competition because every member of the Illini backfield was a menace. Lanum sneaked through the line repeatedly. Stewart, who was the only orange and blue starter who had to be rested during the game, ran the ends or cut in at the tackles and the illustrious "Frosty" Peters, aside from a few running feats, made the Maroons tremble in their boots while he was trying some long range shooting with the same toe that beat Pennsylvania a week ago. His aim was poor, but his courage above question.

Costly Illini Fumble.

Peters made three separate efforts to send an aerial greeting to Stagg. One was blocked because the kick was low. The other two were just gambles, but the Illini could afford to take chances. His first failure was from the 25 yard line in the second period. In the same quarter he tried to drop one over a goal from five yards distant. He was short by fifteen yards, but late in the fourth period he hoisted one from the forty-five yard line and missed the uprights by a matter of a few feet. But he did kick for the extra point after the touchdown.

One thing that may have cost Illinois something was a fumble by Daugherity in the first period. The Illini, after taking a Maroon punt on their twenty yard line, opened up with a powerful running, driving attack. They rolled off four first downs in a row, with every member of the back field getting a slice of the ball toting burden. But just when it looked as if Chicago would keep on backing up Daugherity fumbled on one of the many double and triple passes with which the victors befuddled their foes. Apitz recovered for Chicago, and in the three following plays the Staggmen made their

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

A slashing attack directed on and off its tackles, which was mixed nicely with a well developed forward pass offense, gave Northwestern a 22 to 0 victory over Purdue in the new Dyche stadium yesterday in the presence of 35,000 gridiron fans, most of whom were alumni of the Purple institution who had returned to Evanston to take part in the homecoming celebration, which was featured by the football game.

The old grads and the undergraduates together with many nonpartisan rooters who have seen Northwestern fall before conference teams for years saw the best Purple eleven in its football history. This year's eleven is unquestionably the best balanced and most powerful aggregation which ever wore the colors of the north shore institution. This statement includes the great Purple eleven of 1900 when Potter and Van Doozer were the half backs and Joe Hunter the quarter back.

Play Like Champions.

In fact it was a revelation to see a Northwestern team do the right thing at the proper time on most occasions. It was a pleasant surprise to see these Purple clad warriors tackle and block in a manner which would be a credit to any championship eleven. In fact, the plays were executed so smoothly and the players shifted so perfectly on defense that it is hard to figure anything but victories for Northwestern in its remaining games with Chicago and Iowa, providing the team plays as it did yesterday.

One of the most commendable features of Northwestern's play was the manner in which the Purple backs carried on when tackled. Seldom were they stopped in upright positions and they generally pivoted and lunged forward for a yard or two. This was especially true of Lewis when he made his first touchdown. With a yard to go, the Purple full back was sent through his right guard. When opposition was met, the big full back pivoted and lunged forward. When the other players were pulled off him he was a yard over the goal line and was laying on his back with the ball clutched tightly in both arms.

After the Extra Yard.

This was a pleasing feature and the Purple is one of the few teams seen this year in which the ball carriers have made that extra effort to add a yard or two to their ground gaining efforts.

There was splendid coördination between line and backfield. The ball carrier reached the point denoted by the signal the moment the forwards opened the holes and Baker, Lewis and Gustafson shot through the openings with speed and power. The ends did some clever boxing of the Purdue tackles and in general played a bang up game.

Northwestern, however, can be rightfully criticized for not having scoring plays when close to an opponents' goal lines. The Purple was frequently held for downs inside the Purdue five yard line. This was especially true in the third quarter when Northwestern took the ball inside the Boilrmakers' five yard line on no less than three occasions only to lack the punch and lose the oval on downs. In the majority of cases, the line thrust was called with Lewis carrying the oval and the full back was unable to cross the counting mark.

Purple Attack Complicated.

Northwestern's attack was varied and complicated. Plays of the delayed variety and those in which the oval was faked to a back for an off tackle slant and then given to the full back for a straight drive were good for yardage, while other formations were of the reverse order and resulted in consistent gains.

On forward pass plays the ends criss-crossed behind the Purdue line, while on others they went straight down the field, with the eligible backs going into the flat zone to receive the passes, most of which were thrown by Capt. Baker and Lewis. In the successful execution of these plays the Purple

Michigan Runs Wild Over Wisconsin Eleven, 37 to 0

BY HARLAND ROHM.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 6.—Michigan's powerful Wolverines, ripping through an inferior Wisconsin line, scored 17 points in the first half and, not satisfied, added three more touchdowns in the last half, crushing Wisconsin under a final score of 37 to 0 in the game here today.

BENNY FRIEDMAN.

It was a game which started out as a battle of plungers and ended in a blaze of passes. Friedman, who first flashed across the football horizon on this field three years ago, closed his career on his home field today against the same opponents in the same manner. His passing was sure, and several times he entrusted the passing to Gilbert and raced into the clear as a receiver.

They Have a New Hero.

But it is a new hero, Walter Webey, Michigan is hailing tonight, more or less unknown until today, though he received his letter last year, in his last home game he proved to be a 190 pound bombshell who knows how to put his head down and smash. He creaks when he starts, but the other line cracks when he hits.

Wisconsin did not make a first down by line play and only two by passes, while Michigan's plunges netted eleven first downs and their passes eight. The Wolverines threw fifteen passes, of which nine were completed for 147 yards gain, while Wisconsin tried twenty passes and complete four for 36 yards.

It was a far different team that took the field against Wisconsin today than the crew that fell before the Navy. Yost kept three line regulars on the bench at the start, but when these regulars did go in later, they ripped up the Wisconsin attack with a vengeance.

Badgers Did Their Best.

It wasn't lack of fight which beat Wisconsin, but it was simply a fair western conference team up against one of the best. Those Badgers dug their toes and hit with every ounce, but there was too much power in Michigan's line and too much brilliance in its back field.

Michigan had just enough more power in the first quarter to offset the advantage which the wind gave Wisconsin on the punting.

In the second quarter the Wolverines crashed down the field. A pass, Friedman to Oosterbaan, helped with 12 yards, but on Wisconsin's 20 yard line the Badgers' line held. Friedman, after an incomplete pass to Flora, dropped back to the 30 yard line and place kicked a goal.

Again Weber and Molenda came down the field to Wisconsin's 40 yard line, where Friedman tossed to Oosterbaan, who was rolled out of bounds on the two yard line. Weber hit the line for a touchdown on his second plunge.

The third touchdown, late in the second quarter, was much like the second, line plunges taking the ball into Wisconsin territory, where Friedman threw to Oosterbaan for 25 yards behind the goal line.

Weber Gets Touchdown.

Oosterbaan knocked Gilbert's punt out of bounds on the Badgers' five yard line in the third period. Barnum, kicking against the wind, got only to his 35 yard line. Hoffman circled left tackle for 14 yards. Gilbert made 12 yards around right end and got seven more through tackle. Weber hit the line for three yards to the one yard line and went over for a touchdown on the next smash.

Another pass, Gilbert to Friedman, counted the fourth touchdown. It was late in the last quarter when Hoffman intercepted Burbridge's pass and raced deep into Wisconsin territory. Plunges again took the ball down to the 18 yard line, where Hoffman, starting an end run, cut back outside of tackle and sprinted the 18 yards for the fifth and last touchdown.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 6.—After what happened today on Iowa field, the Hawkeye football team relinquishes all claims to any sort of supremacy, takes back all it said about having tough luck, and is ready to buy Cowboy Kutsch a Shetland pony. The big Minnesota eleven, which seems to have just found itself, simply crushed the Iowa team, romping and bounding over the Hawkeyes for a most decisive victory by a score of 41 to 0.

Minnesota looked immense. It had an offense that was by far the best we have seen this year, and a defensive that was like a brick wall. In spite of the fact that Harold Almquist, the mile a minute quarter back of the Gophers and the best passer and kicker of the team, was knocked out completely in the first quarter, the old Gold and Maroon lads from the north simply romped.

They had Iowa completely put out of the fight at the end of the first quarter with 28 points chalked up on the scoreboard. Malvin Nydahl had taken Almquist's place and the Minnesota backs went on romping just the same.

Joesting Great Plunger.

Herb Joesting did some line plunging that outclassed anything seen in the west in years. He tore through the Iowa line as if it were a row of green peas. And when he hit something first that brought him down he seemed to bounce along for a few more yards like an inflated balloon. Alongside of him were Bob Peplaw and Harold Barnhart over most of the route. Peplaw made some sparkling end runs and Barnhart, assisted by apparently six or seven linemen, knocked a lot of ambitious Iowa tacklers flat as they attempted to get the man with the ball.

The Iowa team, against this sterling outfit, was weak and helpless. Its young and green line couldn't hold at all and generally when one of the Minnesota backs had plunged through, there was another Minnesota man, or perhaps two or three, to knock the Iowa secondary line of defense on the sod.

Minnesota Starts Early.

It required only about five minutes for the Minnesota team to assert its superiority. Minnesota kicked off and Iowa was stopped at once and had to punt. From its own 23 yard line the Gophers rushed the ball down the field for a touchdown, Almquist making the score after a 40 yard run around the end.

Minnesota kicked off again and once more Iowa was stopped and Kutsch punted to Peplaw, who returned 50 yards to the Iowa 22 yard line. Here Iowa braced a bit, but Pepiaw kicked the field goal. A little later after an Iowa punt Nydahl caught the ball and ran through the entire Iowa team 70 yards for a touchdown. Before the quarter ended Nydahl again got loose for a 25 yard run to the 1 yard line and Joesting plunged over.

In the second quarter the Gophers didn't romp so much, getting only one touchdown when they rushed the ball from their own 44 yard line to the enemy's goal on terrific plunges mostly by Joesting.

One Touchdown in Third.

In the third quarter the Minnesota coach gave some of his regulars a rest and the team scored only one touchdown. It came when the Gophers rushed from their own 20 yard line clear to the goal, one long beauty pass helping.

In the fourth quarter another touchdown was counted near the end when the Gophers had rushed the ball to Iowa's 4 yard line, where they were stopped. It was fourth down with three to go and the score was made on a forward pass into the end zone. After that all the homecomers began to go back home.

Princeton Beats Harvard, but Rooters Trim Cambridge Cops

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., Nov. 6.—Harvard's long awaited victory over Princeton was postponed again this afternoon after a fierce but clumsy football game, somewhat resembling a corner lot game of pom-pom-pull-away, in which Harvard outfumbled Princeton, but not without a stiff contest by some of the most gifted fumblers ever sent up from New Jersey. The score was: Princeton, 12; Harvard, 0.

There was fist fighting during the game and a battle-royal afterward between the Princeton celebrants and the gallant police force of Cambridge, Mass., in which latter contest the gallant police were hurled for severe losses, including several caps, badges, and, in the instance of one disheveled patrolman who was seen leaving the field keeping his hands in his pockets to hold up his trousers. In this part of the country it is generally held to be reprehensible conduct in a college gentleman to steal a policeman's suspenders, so there will doubtless be solemn resolutions and diplomatic disavowals of the disorder during the Princeton snake dance.

A Little Slugging Takes Place.

During the fourth quarter a Mr. Rosengarten, who was playing tackle for Princeton, tackled Mr. Al Miller, the Harvard full back, flung him down resoundingly, and then hooked him with a right to the chin that made Miller's jaws clap together with a sound like a handclap in a telephone booth. Mr. Miller was knocked chilly by this little tribute from Mr. Rosengarten, and the shivering horde in the concrete stands cried, "Boo, boo, throw the bum out of there," in a rolling roar which would have sounded familiar at Madison Square Garden, but which sounded otherwise in a football setting at Harvard.

The officials of the game apparently were the only ones who did not see Mr. Rosengarten smack Mr. Miller, so Princeton was not penalized, but the officials did not seem to be keeping close track of things.

The officials may have had private reasons that could not be understood from the stands for allowing Princeton five downs the time Slagle kicked the field goal in the fourth quarter, but from the rim of the bowl it appeared that they just lost count of the downs.

Slagle Kicks Goal.

Anyway, Princeton already had four downs when the teams fell in again. Then, to the surprise of the onlooking company, Princeton still had possession of the ball with about nine yards to gain. At this point, Slagle fell back and drop kicked over the bars from the 22 yard line. There was much questioning between puzzled experts in the press row, and those who were keeping charts of the play could only give Princeton the extra down and let it go at that. The referee was Wilmer Crowell, late of Swarthmore.

Each time, but one, that Princeton scored, the play was set in motion by one of Harvard's numerous fumbles. It was Elliott Putnam, Harvard's juvenile quarter back and one of the surest men on the team ordinarily, who executed what might be called the touchdown fumble. A punt bounced out of his arms in the second quarter, and Lawlor of Princeton came along, running low and fast to recover.

Lawlor Also Fumbles.

But Lawlor, not to be outfumbled by any Harvard gentleman, fumbled the ball himself, and, with a clear field for a touchdown, he let the ball drop, bouncing on it for a recovery at Harvard's 26 yard line.

Bridges hit Harvard's line for five yards and Prendergast then got around Harvard's right end for an eight yard sweep. Caulkins, Princeton quarter, made a dash around left end and was run out of bounds at the exact angle of the goal line and the side line, for the touchdown. Slagle kicked the goal.

A few minutes later, Clem Coady, the Harvard captain, standing near his own goal in a punt formation, let the pass from center escape him and downed it for a safety.

The final scoring play, that drop kick of Slagle's, was not due to a fumble unless you would score a fumble by the referee in miscounting the downs.

Princeton got the ball that time on Harvard's 25 yard line after a Harvard punt that went almost straight up in the air.

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 6.—A band of titans inspired today carried the colors of Notre Dame to a 26 to 0 victory over Indiana.

The fifteen thousand who were in attendance came not so much with the hope of watching a close contest as to see the men and weapons with which Notre Dame hopes to beat the Army next Saturday.

They saw enough to satisfy. They saw the slippery Christy Flanagan and the fast stepping Tom Hearden scoot yards behind interference that was beautiful to watch. They saw a full back named Elmer Wynne, a brother of Chet Wynne, whose plunging once broke the heart of Nebraska, batter his way through the crimson forward wall. They saw a line that outcharged and outmaneuvered their opponents.

Flanagan Scores.

Although Rockne's men didn't unfold all the plays in their repertoire, they gave convincing evidence that they have a lot of flashy stuff. They had forward passes and a powerful off-tackle smash which Coach Page's forwards couldn't stop.

Defeat was Indiana's lot from the moment Flanagan dashed around end for 20 yards and a touchdown on the first play of the second quarter. But the Hoosiers never stopped trying.

The arithmetic of the game gives an idea of Notre Dame's superiority. Rockne's men made twenty first downs to Indiana's three. Notre Dame made 436 yards from scrimmage, while Indiana was picking up 43. The South Benders tried seven forward passes, completed three for a total of 45 yards. Indiana made four of its eight tosses, good for 39 yards.

Notre Dame as usual was penalised frequently. The officials carried the ball back fourteen times for 110 yards. Indiana drew six penalties for 30 yards.

Quarter Back Hurt.

Art Parisien, Notre Dame quarter back, whose southpaw passes upset Northwestern, was hurt in the first quarter when tackled by three Indiana players. The shock temporarily affected his heart action, and he was taken to a South Bend hospital. It was announced late tonight that his condition is not serious.

While the Notre Dame forwards and several backs looked impressive, the thing that stood out in the team's play was continuity of attack.

Notre Dame was held scoreless in the first period with a second string lineup on the field. The regulars went in at the start of the second and Flanagan's dash for a touchdown on the first play broke up what looked like a pretty fair ball game. After that setback Indiana's line wilted and Flanagan soon added another touchdown.

There was no more scoring until the third quarter, a perfectly executed forward pass, Riley to Dahman, brought Notre Dame another touchdown. Dahman made the final marker in the last quarter.

OHIO WESLEYAN KICKER MAKES 85 YARD PUNT

Delaware, O., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Eddie Blickle, Ohio Wesleyan kicker, booted a ball 85 yards in the Wittenberg-Wesleyan game today. Standing on his own 15 yard line, he punted over the head of Price, Wittenberg's safety man, the ball did not stop rolling until it had crossed the goal line.

ROYALTY SEES HUSKIES BEAT BEARS, 13 TO 7

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The University of California lost, 13 to 7, to the University of Washington on a field of mud today.

Jaba, Golden Bear full back, saved California from a whitewashing by breaking through the Husky line in the last period and skidding in the mud to a touchdown.

Eugene Cook, left guard, made seven of Washington's points, kicking two placement goals and one point after touchdown. The Washington touchdown came at the end of the first five minutes of play when Capt. George Guttormsen broke away for a 45 yard run.

Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana of Roumania witnessed more than half the game. The attendance was 18,000.

forwards blocked splendidly and the Purple passers were given the necessary time to permit the catchers to get down the field.

Capt. Baker established himself as one of the best backs in the country. This player did all that was expected of him. He kicked one goal from the field, threw forward passes and carried the ball frequently. Unlike other backs of former years, Baker did his share of blocking, and he deserves any man's consideration when honorary elevens are selected at the close of the season.

Lewis and Gustafson Powerful.

Lewis also was a great help to Northwestern, both offensively and defensively; and the same was true of Gustafson; but neither is the all around player that is Baker, who also directed his team's attack by calling the signals in the huddle.

Purdue played all the football it knew, but its best was not good enough. The Boilermakers were much lighter, and their clever offense, varied by many tricks, such as the talking and spin plays, failed to make enough yardage even to threaten the Purple goal. Purdue did complete some forward passes and is deserving of great credit for trying to score through the air when it was a hopeless task to make yardage with the straight or running attack.

It was this desire to score which gave Northwestern one touchdown and placed the Purple in scoring position on other occasions. Even Wilcox, the clever Boilermaker back, was unable to sneak through the Purple line or skirt the ends. He is a splendid player, but he did not show to advantage because of the manner in which the Northwestern forwards plowed through and smashed Purdue formations before they got under way.

Defeat without Disgrace.

Purdue did nobly, and it was no disgrace to be beaten by a team which is the best in Northwestern's football history.

The day was ideal for football, and the crowd took advantage of it. The two stands on each side of the field were filled, and many stood or sat in the stands on the ends of the gridiron. The purple and white colors of Northwestern predominated, although there was a sprinkling of the old gold and black of Purdue.

The Northwestern band, clad in purple and white uniforms, did its stuff before the game and between the halves. It was a perfect setting for a game which was won by the better team, one which is entitled to Western conference championship consideration if it wins its remaining struggles.

Hogan Admits a Boner.

A humorous incident took place during the second half. Capt. Hogan of Purdue was removed in the second period, and, under the rules, was permitted to return to the struggle at any time during the second half. He came into the fray and reported in the usual manner. As soon as he took his place at left end he started to give instructions to his teammates.

A play must intervene when an incoming player reports, before he can communicate with other members of his team. Purdue was promptly penalized fifteen yards. Hogan said the team had been told about such an infringement at least twenty times by Coach Jimmy Phelan, and that he, the captain, should be the one to draw the penalty made him the biggest bonehead on the squad.

After the teams had gone through the usual warming up process, the captains were called to the center of the field for choice of goals. Capt. Baker of Northwestern called the turn of the coin and elected to defend the south goal. This gave Purdue the wind. There was no scoring in the first period when Lewis missed a place kick from the Boilermaker 36 yard mark. After the two elevens had traded punts, Northwestern started a march which placed the oval on the visitors' eight yard line when the quarter ended.

Baker Kicks Goal.

On the first play of the second quarter, Northwestern drew a five yard penalty for off side. Gustafson lost five yards on an attempted end run, and the fake place kick with Lewis and Baker as the operators failed to gain. Baker then dropped back to Purdue's 26 yard line and drove the ball between the posts for the first score of the game.

After the Northwestern kickoff, Purdue was forced to punt and Wilcox drove the oval out of bounds on the Purple 35 yard line. From this point Northwestern, by use of driving attack on and off its tackles varied by forward passes, took the oval to Purdue's six yard line. A costly five yard penalty for off side placed the ball on Purdue's one yard line and then Lewis drove through his right guard for a touchdown. Baker missed the goal kick for the extra point and there was no more scoring in the period.

Two More in Fourth.

Northwestern threatened on several occasions in the third quarter but was unable to register. In the final period Griffith intercepted a Purdue pass and ran for a touchdown. The Purple's final score was the result of a long pass, Baker to Fisher. In this period, Spencer, the Purdue guard, suffered a dislocated elbow and had to be carried from the field.

The final quarter dragged terribly owing to the wholesale substitutions made by both coaches and the time taken up by bringing the ball back on incompleted forward passes. Otherwise it was a cleanly played game despite the apparently rough tactics of some players who were within their rights to stop the ball carriers before the referee's whistle had blown.

Elgin academy became the 1926 football champion in the northern Illinois junior college conference by defeating Morton Junior college by 30 to 0 at Cicero this afternoon. The Elgin eleven is undefeated this year.

Elgin's ability to follow the ball and Flora's open field running brought victory today. Twice Flora placed his team in a position to score with long runs. On two occasions the winners scored on intercepted passes. Tarr and Cronwall starred for Elgin on defense. Lineup:

only first down with the help of a penalty.

Long Pass Fails.

It may be that if Illinois had gone into the forward passing game the final figures would have been a bit more lopsided. But there was no need for Zuppke to show his hand. On only three occasions did the victors elect to advance by the overhead style. Twice they failed. The one completed was a short throw by Peters to Daugherity in the fourth period for a thirteen yard advance. It was an exact duplicate of the first of the two passes that put Peters in a position to kick his drop against Pennsylvania a week ago.

One of Illinois' passing failures was at least good to look at, even though it didn't succeed. It was sandwiched between Peters' two attempts at drop kicks in the second period. Lanum turned the oval loose like an outfielder throwing the horsehide to the plate. The wind was in his favor and the ball sailed fifty-five yards before coming to earth. Capt. Kassel, not reckoning with the wind, was five yards too close to make the catch. Had he gotten it there was nobody there to prevent him hoofing it ten yards to a touchdown.

Few Maroon Passes.

Whatever inclination Chicago might have had to pass was ruined by the lack of opportunities. The Maroons did make five attempts, but none was completed and one was intercepted by Stewart. Once, when the struggle was almost over and there was no need for caution, McDonough dropped back as if for a punt and hurled a long pass to Apitz, but the latter wasn't in the right neighborhood.

The one thrill that Chicago had for its vain fight occurred in the fourth period, when Stanley Rouse punted to Illinois' 23 yard line. Weislow, one of Stagg's tacklers, went down under the punt and thought he saw an Illini touch the ball. He scooped it up and ran over the victor's goal, but was in error, so had to bring back the pigskin and give it to Illinois.

Although Illinois went through by changing only one position, the Maroons didn't enjoy such luck. Stagg changed both line and back field combinations, but it made no difference. Two of his alterations were necessary, K. Rouse and S. Rouse being messed up slightly in the neighborhood of the hips.

ILL. WESLEYAN FIGHTS DEPAUW TO SCORELESS TIE

Greencastle, Ind., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Illinois Wesleyan held Depauw's football team scoreless for four quarters this afternoon on Blackstock field, the game ending in an 0 to 0 tie. The contest ended with the ball in Wesleyan's possession on Depauw's 10 yard line after the visitors had made a steady march down the field. Both elevens punted repeatedly on second and third downs. The Illinois Wesleyan line was the strongest that has opposed the Tigers this season. Taylor and Bodman were the outstanding players for the visitors while Sturtridge was Depauw's best performer. Place Kicks Raise N. Y. U. to Win Over Carnegie, 6-0

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—New York university's undefeated eleven, whose powerful attack had scored many touchdowns against six opponents, was held in check today by an equally powerful Carnegie Tech line, but the home eleven triumphed, 6 to 0, by virtue of two placement goals by Half Back Kenneth Strong.

Gustavus Adolphus Beats St. John's by 20 to 0 Score

Navy Swamps West Virginia Wesleyan, 53-7

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Navy's undefeated eleven climbed another rung on the 1926 championship ladder when its juggernaut attack crushed West Virginia Wesleyan, 53 to 7, here today. Wesleyan's only score was made in the last minutes of play, the result of a frantic overhead offensive.

The Miners' line was too weak to withstand Navy's powerful plungers, and after it was pierced for two touchdowns in the opening quarter substitutions became plentiful, Navy varied its attack throughout the game, trying its entire repertoire.

Nine touchdowns were pushed across the Wesleyan goal before the finish, with the middies making changes in the score board every period. Navy's third team, which took over the reins in the final quarter, scored two touchdowns, but weakened against Wesleyan's overhead attack.

ARMY WINS, 55 TO 0

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Army defeated Franklin and Marshall, 55 to 0, today. The cadets scored eight touchdowns, from which seven extra points were kicked. Harry Wilson, playing for only a part of two periods, scored 23 points for the cadets. He scored the touchdowns, all after runs of 30 to 40 yards, and kicked five extra points after touchdowns.

It was a romp for the Army as the collegians did not display any signs of strength offensively and defensively. The Army played most of the game with substitutes in their lineup. Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach, whose eleven faces Army in New York next week, was a spectator. Lineup:

CARROLL RUNS UP 29 TO 0 SCORE ON RIPON TEAM

Waukesha, Wis., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Carroll outclassed Ripon and won a lopsided encounter, 29 to 0, here today. Ripon only once got within kicking distance of the Pioneer goal and then failed to kick.

Lund began the scoring for Carroll by booting a place kick over the standards. A minute later Tom Johnson grabbed a fumbled ball and raced sixty-five yards to a touchdown. He duplicated his scoring feat a little later by grabbing Lange's forty-yard pass. The half ended 16 to 0. Coach Norris Armstrong injected his second string men after the half and they, too, earned two touchdowns.

YALE IS BEATEN THIRD IN ROW BY MARYLAND, 15-0

Regulars Sit on Bench as Second Team Loses.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Yale sought practice more than victory today and for the third successive Saturday the bright blue colors were trampled in defeat. Tad Jones started his second team against a courageous Maryland eleven and held back his regulars throughout the afternoon while the Southerners rolled up a 15 to 0 victory.

Inspired by the fleet and elusive Myron Stevens, who grabbed a Yale fumble in the first quarter and dashed seventy-seven yards to the first touchdown, Maryland took heart after a ponderous start and beat back the Blue at every turn. But as the dusk descended and Maryland's score mounted, Jones refused to send in his first team to halt the stampede.

Maryland's Is the Glory.

There is no assurance that Yale's regulars could have stopped the surging southern team, but the fact that it didn't try took none of the glory away from Curly Byrd's happy youngsters. In Maryland's history the name of Stevens will live long as the man who beat Yale. Besides his opening canter which gave the southerners something to fight for and defend, he kicked a field goal and ripped off sensational gains of twenty-two, twenty-one, and seventeen yards at a clip, besides lesser advances that were incidental. Along with him was Kessler, who caught a Yale punt and dodged his way for fifty-nine yards before he was hauled down, and Adama, a giant tackle who blocked a Yale kick, giving Stevens his chance at a field goal.

In Hall of Fame.

This pair also will be remembered when old grads gather at College park, Maryland, and talk of the Maryland team of 1926.

COLLEGE SCOFFS AT CHARGES OF SIGNAL THEFTS

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Canisius college authorities have decided to disregard as frivolous the charges of attempted theft of football signals made by the Niagara university student body yesterday on the eve of the annual gridiron struggle between the two Catholic colleges.

The protest was made when two former members of the Canisius football squad, who have resigned on account of injuries, were noticed watching the Purple practice and were chased by angry Niagara students.

IOWA HARRIERS WIN

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—With two men tying for first and two Gophers tying for third, Iowa and Minnesota staged a thrilling cross country race here this forenoon in which the Hawks were victors, 25 to 31. The winning time of Capt. Speers and Hunn of Iowa was 27:45 for the five miles of sod, four-tenths of a second better than the old course record.

Wexman and Binger of Minnesota tied for third finishing fifty yards behind Speers and Hunn. Elliott, Bender, and Brady of Iowa finishing fifth, sixth, and seventh, clinched the race for Iowa.

Kutter, Capt. Hubbard and Aker, coming in eighth, ninth, and eleventh, completed Minnesota scoring. McCammon of Iowa, a sophomore, ran a hard race to finish tenth. Speers led out from the start and at the three and one-half mile mark was leading the field by seventy yards.

PURPLE HARRIERS WIN

Northwestern's cross-country team defeated the Purdue harriers, 32 to 23, at Evanston, yesterday. It was the initial race of the season for the Purple.

Horder, Knocked Out for 2 Hours, Back in Bike Race

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—(AP)—After toppling from his bicycle in a faint, resulting from the pain of a strained ligament, and lying unconscious for two hours, Harris Horder, one of the two Americans in the six day race which began Thursday night, resumed the grind this morning. The spectators loudly applauded his pluck.

Horder's partner, Harry Horan, was unable to keep up with the field alone and the Americans today were two laps behind the leaders, Koch and Miethe of Germany.

BUCKEYES BEAT MICHIGAN AND ILLINI HARRIERS

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Ohio State won the annual triangular cross-country race against Illinois and Michigan today by placing five men in the first ten to finish. Ohio scored 27 points; Michigan, 37, and Illinois, 62. W. H. Kennedy, Ohio veteran, led from start to finish, covering the 4.9 miles in 26 minutes and 51 seconds.

BELOIT BEATEN AT HOMECOMING BY LAWRENCE

Beloit, Wis., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Lawrence disappointed the grads at Beloit's homecoming here today, by defeating Coach Bohler's Beloit Red Devils, 24 to 7.

The visitors scored in the second quarter, twice in the third and again in the last period. The local opened a belated pass attack in the final session and got their only score by that method. The largest crowd of the season witnessed the battle.

Marquette Upsets Kansas Aggies' Dope Bucket, 14-0

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Playing an inspired game from start to finish, the Marquette university Golden Avalanche unexpectedly trounced the hitherto undefeated Kansas Aggies, 14 to 0, here this afternoon before a homecoming crowd of 12,000.

Outweighed 11 pounds to the man, Coach Frank Murray's youngsters, most of them sophomores, played the visitors to a standstill in a sensational battle.

The Aggies, heavy favorites, stumbled on the first play after the kickoff. Owen Cochrane, Aggie quarter, returned the kickoff to his own 27 yard line and then attempted a long pass. It was blocked by Capt. Craine of Marquette and before it hit the ground was grabbed by Charlie Klaus, Marquette tackle, who scampered 29 yards to the goal line for a touchdown.

Marquette Kicking Superior.

Due to the kicking of Joe Leary and Rupert O'Keefe, at least half of their punts rolling out of bounds within the opponents' 20 yard line, Marquette had an advantage throughout the first half and the period ended 7 to 0.

The Aggies threatened several times on long completed passes, but never were in the danger zone in the first half.

Marquette's second touchdown came early in the third quarter. An exchange of punts, in which [illegible] Cochrane from behind his goal [illegible] was short, made it the [illegible] ball on the Aggie's 15 yard line. On the second play, O'Keefe passed to Gebert over the goal line and [illegible] again added the kick.

O'Keefe Stars at Quarter.

Local homecomers tonight are [illegible] ing the praises of Rupert O'Keefe, little quarterback from Cavalier, N. D., who engineered a heady victory over the invaders. Much praise also must be given the Marquette line which rushed through repeatedly to drive Kansas for losses. Lineup:

WABASH BEATS BUTLER AFTER BATTLE, 13 TO 0

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—After having been held scoreless almost three periods, Wabash defeated Butler here this afternoon in an Indiana Little Three classic, 13 to 0. It was the first time Wabash has scored on the Blue since 1922 and the first victory since 1921.

The Butler resistance was the surprising feature of the game, as Wabash's superior line had been expected to crush any Butler chances. Late in the third, after Butler had held for downs on its six inch line, Wabash again surged back and Meyers scored a touchdown. Again, in the fourth period, Wabash drove down the field and scored with plunges through tackle. Only Depauw now remains in the path of Wabash for the Little Three title. Lineup:

BUCKEYE SUBS NIP WILMINGTON COLLEGE, 13 TO 7

Columbus, O., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Ohio State's second team outplayed the Wilmington college eleven, 13 to 7, today before a shivering crowd of 5,000 today. The Buckeyes made 11 downs to 4 for Wilmington. The invaders scored in the last few minutes of play when Ohio was penalized four consecutive times. It was the first game of the season for most of the Ohio players and their eagerness to make good caused Ohio to be penalized frequently.

Haskell Trims Loyola, 27-7 in Hard Fight

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Haskell Indians defeated Loyola in a hard fought game today, 27 to 7. The score, however, is no indication of what a hard fought battle it was. Loyola scored the first touchdown early in the first period on a beautifully executed forward pass, Johnson to "Ma" Norton. Wetry kicked goal.

But the superior weight of the Indians was beginning to tell on the Devildogs and they worked over a touchdown early in the second period. With the help of exchanged punts and a 15 yard penalty they scored another before the half. McLaine, the Indian big gun, was removed from the game at this stage because of injuries.

The Redskins scored in the third period by straight football and again in the last period by the same method. Loyola was outweighed 15 pounds to the man, but played a strong game and had the crowd with them constantly. Lineup:

Northwestern Crushes Purdue, 22-0; Illini Trounce Maroons, 7-0; Notre Dame Humbles Indiana, 26-0

LEWIS PIVOTS AND SHOVES TWO YARDS FOR FIRST NORTHWESTERN TOUCHDOWN. The Purple full back, with back to Boilermaker wall, crosses goal line in second quarter of grid battle at Evanston in teeth of stubborn Purdue defense. Wilson, Purdue quarter back (No. 66), and Koransky (No. 82) are making a futile effort to hurl back Lewis. Walter Eckersall, Tribune football expert, is at the left, on top of the play as referee. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

NOTRE DAME STOPS HARRELL IN INDIANA ATTACK DURING SECOND QUARTER. The Hoosier half back meets some rough handling around the neck when Rockne's tacklers threw him after short gain in South Bend game. Indiana could do little against the Notre Dame line, and the ghosts of the Four Horsemen galloped almost at will for a 26 to 0 victory. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

M'KINNEY TRAVELS BACKWARD TWO YARDS IN ATTEMPT TO CARRY BALL AROUND ILLINOIS END. The Maroon half back (marked by arrow) was still behind the pile of linemen when he was nailed by Wilson, Zuppke's alert left end, in second quarter of Midway battle. McKinney's attempt was made with the ball on the Maroons' 21 yard line. At the left, the Illini secondary defense is swinging into action, but like most of the plays yesterday, the back field found little support necessary on defense. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

DAUGHERITY SIDE STEPS MAROON SAFETY MAN FOR CLEAR PATH TO GOAL AND ONLY TOUCHDOWN IN ILLINOIS-CHICAGO GRIDIRON BATTLE. The fleet full back eludes McDonough, Maroon quarter back and safety man, and outdistances Chicago's secondary defense rushing after him. Daugherity's run was made shortly after the second half opened, when he stood behind his right end, took the ball from Lanum and darted inside the Maroons' left tackle. He dodged all arms reaching for him in Stagg's secondary defense and raced past McDonough. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

DROP KICK BY SCULL PUTS PENN ON TOP, 3 TO 0

Stand on One Yard Line Saves Quakers.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 6.—(AP)—A drop kick from the 40 yard line in the first period by Paul Scull gave Pennsylvania a victory over Penn State today, 3 to 0. It was a perfect boot and the 55,000 rooters in the stands of Franklin field cheered the play.

State college, with a fighting team that lacked offensive drive, carried the ball within a yard of a touchdown in the second period, only to have Penn put up one of its old time stands and take the ball on downs. State resorted frequently to forward passes, but did not meet with much success.

Pennsylvania stuck to a straight running attack most of the time. In first downs Pennsylvania had eleven to State's five. The Quakers' hidden ball plays functioned spasmodically.

Murphy's punting gave Pennsylvania an advantage in the first period. This helped in the march that took the ball into State's territory and gave Scull his chance for the successful field goal. After the game it developed that Scull severely injured a leg. The lineup:

PENNSYLVANIA.		PENN STATE.
Thayer	L. E.	Delp
Smith	L. T.	Greenfield
Duncan	L. G.	Krall
Butler	C.	Mahoney
Parks	R. G.	Hastings
Bake	R. T.	Filak
Singer	R. E.	Weston
Murphy	Q. B.	Lanzren
Rogers	L. H.	Roopka
P. Scull	R. H.	Hame
Wascolonis	F. B.	Greene

PITT WINS, 17-7

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 6.—(AP)—A West Virginia boy, Gilbert L. Welch of Parkersburg, playing left half for the University of Pittsburgh, turned back the West Virginia eleven here today. The Panthers beat the Mountaineers, 17 to 7, for the third time in as many years.

Welch pushed across two touchdowns for 12 of the 17 points tallied by the Panthers. After marching down the field on line bucks and end runs, Welch made his first touchdown in the second period. In the waning moments of the final period he darted 20 yards around right end for his second touchdown, making Pittsburgh's victory more certain.

Hardy, West Virginia full back, starred for the Mountaineers. He scored a touchdown in the third period after Pittsburgh had fumbled on her own five yard line.

COLUMBIA GETS SCARE

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Columbia squeezed out a 13 to 10 victory over William and Mary today in a battle that was in doubt until the closing whistle. The southerners, rated easy for the team that last Saturday turned back the red wave of Cornell, played sensationally and took full advantage of many Columbia fumbles.

Spectacular dashes contributed all the touchdowns. With the New Yorkers trailing, 3 to 0, in the first period after Matsu, brilliant William and Mary quarter back, had booted a field goal from the 35 yard mark, "Dutch" Rieger broke away on a 40 yard gallop from scrimmage for the first Columbia touchdown. Again, in the third quarter, the same flashing back slipped through a hole in the Green and Gold line and raced 72 yards for a score. In the final period David, William and Mary end, scooped up Rieger's fumble on his own 9 yard line and dashed 91 yards for the southerners' touchdown.

DARTMOUTH COPS, 32-0

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Dartmouth broke into the winning column by defeating Boston university, 32 to 0, today. A wet, muddy field hindered the running attack of both teams, but superior driving power of Lane and McPhail gave Dartmouth the edge.

COLGATE ROLLS UP 28-0 VICTORY OVER PROVIDENCE

Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—In a listless game featured by a punting duel between Dumont and Lewis, Colgate won a 28-0 victory over Providence this afternoon.

With Shaughnessy and Bray out of the game with injuries, the Maroon lineup presented a crippled appearance. Vaughn, who started at full back for Colgate, was injured in the first quarter and was replaced by Drews, while Schmidt and Mankat, veteran line men, also were withdrawn in this period. This left the Maroon machine weakened and it was held scoreless in the first and third quarters by the Husky Rhode Islanders.

Alma Beats Albion, Wins Title in M. I. A. A.

Alma, Mich., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Alma college football team won the M. I. A. A. championship today by defeating Albion, 12 to 6. Line smashing and end runs gave Alma a touchdown in the first quarter. In the second Burton grabbed an Albion punt and raced 43 yards for a score. Albion came back strong the second half and scored in the third period on line smashes, Williams getting the touchdown.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

In the Wake of the News

WISCONSIN ATHLETICS.

WHEN George Little assumed the reins as athletic director at the University of Wisconsin a year and a half ago there was at Madison lack of coördinated effort within and considerable criticism by alumni from without. Little's eleven in 1925, after losing to Michigan, made a commendable showing.

This fall Wisconsin, with almost the same material and no notable accessions from the sophomores, is not faring so well against elevens strengthened from a year ago. Disappointment is rather quiet yet, but is ready to burst forth in tart comment if the Badgers do not come into their own in their two remaining games.

If these Wisconsin adherents will let Little alone and give him time to work out a system The Wake thinks he will produce all the results justified by the material at his disposal. With an eleven outclassed in offense by Minnesota, drill on the fundamentals enabled the Badgers nearly to defeat a superior team.

While in Madison we said to Little, "George, with all the other work to be done, why did you ever undertake the thankless job of coaching football?"

"Well," replied Little, "I thought the other things might wait. Our football morale was at low ebb. With football so prominent, I felt there wouldn't be any athletics to direct unless we could improve on the gridiron. The first year we can get a gridiron break you'll see new spirit up here.

"One of the hardest problems in coaching is to bring back a team after defeat for its next important game. We thought we had a chance against Minnesota. We were beaten. Now Michigan is next. They figure to beat us. But we must keep up our spirit to the point where we will do our best, even if licked again. And if we do lose, there's Iowa and Chicago ahead.

"There are four cardinal points for a director to consider and develop if possible. First, intercollegiate competition, which is a stimulus to intra-mural athletics. Then intra-mural contests, both to increase the number of students enjoying physical exercise and to develop potential varsity material. Then good sportsmanship, win or lose. And finally that state of mind among alumni where they expect only a reasonable percentage of victories, but still support the team in a bad season. We feel we are making progress in all points."

Little, who was a captain in the 33d infantry during the world war, has the army idea of outlining his campaign. Before the Gopher contest he showed us a typewritten notation of tactics and strategy designed to cover offense and defense at different stages and at different parts of the terrain. As the game was played, he was like a general with part of his troops failing to reach their objective.

Just for those who think an athletic director has nothing to do except coach, Little in his nineteen months at Wisconsin has made 265 appearances before massmeetings, alumni clubs, Y. M. C. A.'s, and various civic bodies. It's a strenuous life, this being an athletic director in these days of intense public interest in college sports.

College Songs.

[Contributed by Helper Jack C.]

Old Eleazer Wheelock was a very pious man,
He went into the wilderness to teach the Indi-an,
With a Gradus ad Parnassum, a Bible, and a drum,
And five hundred gallons of New England rum.

The big chief who met him was the Sachem of the Wah Who Wahs.
If he was not a great chief there was never one you saw who was.
He had tobacco by the cord, ten squaws, and more to come;
But he never yet had tasted of New England rum.

Eleazer and the big chief harangued and negotiated,
They founded Dartmouth college and the big chief matriculated;
Eleazer was the faculty and the whole curriculum
Was five hundred gallons of New England rum! ! !

CROSUS.

Fill the bowl, O, fill the bowl,
And drink to Eleazer with his primitive alcazer,
For he mixed drinks for the heathen
In the goodness of his soul.

Peoria Team Marks Up 21st Straight Victory.

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Bradley threw all of its power into a second half offensive and disposed of Millikin, their most formidable contender in Illinois, by a 20 to 10 score here Saturday afternoon. It was the twenty-first consecutive victory of the Peoria team.

Red Bland entered the game as a substitute for Metzger and contributed two decisive touchdowns, besides being the main instrument in Bradley's progress down the field. Bland recovered a fumble on the 23 yard line and heavy plunging ended in a touchdown by Pope. Decremer intercepted a pass near the end of the game, putting the ball on Millikin's 35 yard line. Plunges by Pope and Ririe, and a run by Bland scored. Shipherd made two of the kicks. Lineup:

CENTRE BADLY BEATEN

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The light Centre college team was battered to a 42 to 14 defeat today by the much heavier Michigan State eleven. It was Centre's most severe defeat of the year and the highest score Michigan State has made this season. Centre scored a touchdown in the first period on a blocked punt, but crumpled in the following periods as the State backs plowed through or passed almost at will.

Eldorado Preps Beat Marion Eleven, 14 to 13

Sooners Beat Missouri on Haskins' Kick

Norman, Okla., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Oklahoma Sooners halted the championship rush of the Missouri Tigers here today, turning back the Missouri Valley titleholders by a score of 19 to 7.

A field goal booted in the third period by Haskins, Oklahoma right half, spoiled the hopes of the Missourians for ending the season undefeated. It was a field goal kicked over the bars at Lawrence by "Stoney" Wall of Kansas that marred the Tigers' record last year.

Missouri Counts Touchdown.

Missouri scored first, in the second period, when Flamank passed to Clark for 30 yards and the speedy little Missouri half back ran three yards for the goal for a touchdown and Stuber kicked goal from placement.

Oklahoma's touchdown was scored just as the whistle sounded, ending the first half. Potts completing a beautiful 36 yard run over the goal line.

Mistake Turned Into Score.

On the play Potts had dropped back to pass, but, finding none of his teammates clear, doubled back across the field and ran through the entire Missouri team. Haskins kicked his goal from placement and clinched the game for Oklahoma in the third period. He made the kick from the 32 yard line.

More than 20,000 rooters filled the huge stadium and overflowed on to the field.

KNOX IS HURDLED BY COE, 13-7, IN MIDWEST RACE

Iowans' Diversified Attack Baffles Illinoisians.

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 6. — Coe trundled over Knox in the Iowa school's race to the midwest conference football title here today, 13 to 7. Ed Barrows, Mohawk right half, was the brilliant star for the visitors, ripping off 40, 45 and 55 yard runs, scoring both touchdowns and kicking goal after touchdown.

The diversified attack of the Iowa eleven kept the Knox men with backs to the wall, Barrows tossing passes to White and Lamb that accounted for great gains. Coe's driving backs accounted for 14 first downs against one for Knox.

Barrows in the third period attempted to pass from behind his goal line, Mann, Knox right half, intercepting it on his 15 yard line and scooting to a touchdown. The play of the visitors became ragged after the second period, when Wolfe, field general, was removed with cracked ribs. Lineup:

COE [13].		KNOX [7].

Godfrey	L. G.	Rice
Chase	C.	Bague

MONMOUTH BEATS CORNELL COLLEGE

Monmouth, Ill., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Monmouth downed Cornell college this afternoon in a midwest conference game, 17 to 0. Both of Monmouth's touchdowns were the result of passes, Taylor to Molesworth, the latter running 45 and 25 yards, respectively, after spearing the ball. London Defeats Chicago in Chess Match by Cable

Chicago's chess team bowed to a sextet of London masters in an intercity match played via cable yesterday. When time expired at 6 o'clock last night, the English team had a decided lead of 1½ to ½. Four games were left for adjudication, and local chess experts believe one will be won by each team, one to Chicago, and one to London, and will be declared draws.

M. E. Goldstein of London, who with Orrin Frank of Chicago, led his team being awarded one-half point. The Londoners gained a point of advantage when H. Hahlbohm of Chicago resigned, conceding victory to W. Winter of London, declaring the Englishman would have clinched the game in a few more moves.

Alekhine Judges Play.

Chess masters declared the arbitrator will give R. P. Michell of London a victory over Edward Lasker of Chicago, and C. W. Phillips of Chicago a margin over B. E. Siegheim of London. The games between J. L. Evans of Chicago and V. Bruegar of London and Samuel Factor, Chicago, and H. T. Sergeant, London, are expected to be declared draws. The winning margin will be announced definitely when the adjourned games have been judged by Alexander Alekhine, French master.

The match was played in the Hamilton club, Chicago, and the Spring Garden galleries, London. An exchange of greetings between Mayor W. E. Dever and Sir William R. Pryke, lord mayor of London, opened the play.

Play Under New Code.

The match was played under a new code introduced by M. S. Kuhn of Chicago. After each move the player cabled his play to his opponent, who would move the piece to the designated square on his own board. The latter would cable back, verifying his opponent's move and stating his own move. Each play had to be made within the time limit.

Creighton Rally Beats Regis College, 25 to

Denver, Colo., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Creighton college dropped its first intersectional game of the season to Creighton university of Omaha, 25 to 21, today. Trailing the visitors, 21 to 19, until the last few minutes of play, the Regis line collapsed under the continued pounding of O'Connor and Keane, who paraded down the field in a series of line tackle smashes and line plunges. O'Connor carried the ball across for the deciding points.

HARRISON BEATS CRANE, 26-7, FOR WEST SIDE TITLE

Summer and Seidel Lead Mates to Victory.

Semi-Finalists

Lindblom, Senn, Harrison, and Phillips yesterday qualified for the semi-final games of the City Public High School Football league. However, there are rumors that protests will be lodged against Lindblom and Senn. Otherwise Lindblom will meet Phillips and Harrison will face Senn next Saturday.

Harrison Tech won the west side football title yesterday afternoon by defeating Crane Tech, 26 to 7, before a crowd of 5,000 homecomers at Cermak park. Although the victory ties the Tech with Marshall in games won and lost, the point score gives Harrison the right to meet the north section winners in the semi-finals Saturday.

Crane scored its touchdown in the first three minutes of play on a pass, Fossier to Fossier, after fumbles by Fink. Harrison half back, had placed the ball in scoring distance. End runs by Summer and Seidel took the ball to the 5 yard line following the next kickoff and Trojka plunged over. Fink kicked the goal with a place kick.

In the third quarter Kopsak circled right end for the winning marker and Fink again kicked goal. Capt. Trojka plunged the Crane line repeatedly in the final period, registering twice on touchdown drives. Crane was able to make only two first downs. Lineup:

THE CREDULOUS CUSTOMER.

ALTHOUGH it has been only a few weeks since Jack Dempsey spent thirty minutes dubbing around the ring in the rain down at Philadelphia in a very peculiar fight for which he received $700,000, Mr. Tex Rickard already is chattering about a return match between Dempsey and Tunney. Of course, Mr. Rickard is no sentimentalist and if one comes bobbing along who can give Dempsey another smacking, Mr. Rickard will be glad to waive Mr. Dempsey and use the other fellow in the Tunney fight.

But the mere fact that Mr. Rickard even would think of sending Dempsey back in with Tunney is enough to make some of us curious and the other day I had the following conversation with him:

"Do you think Dempsey can fight, Mr. Rickard?"

"Fight?" exclaimed Mr. Rickard. "Sure he kin fight."

"Then why didn't he fight in Philadelphia, Mr. Rickard?"

"Well," Mr Rickard said, "the poor feller was all bothered to death by them lawyers and sheriffs and such fellers and talkin' about lawsuits and takin' his wife's automobile and all. How could a feller fight with all that on his mind?"

"But, Mr. Rickard, I happen to know that Dempsey wasn't worried about those matters. I asked him about it down in Atlantic City only 24 hours before the fight and he said, 'It's all a joke. I'm laughing about it. They haven't worried me a minute.'"

"Well," Mr. Rickard explained, "you can't expect a feller to tell you he isn't feeling right just before a two million dollar fight."

"Why, Mr. Rickard," I exclaimed, much surprised at such a compromise with honesty in such a great man, "Why, Mr. Rickard! You don't mean to imply that Mr. Dempsey would tell a falsehood about such a matter?"

"Not exactly a falsehood," Mr. Rickard said, "but you can't expect a feller to tell you he isn't feeling right just before a two million dollar fight."

"But, Mr. Rickard, why not?" I asked. "He was getting $700,000 for the fight, and I hope you do not mean to say that he deliberately would go into the ring realizing that he was not fit to give the customers his best?"

"Now, don't talk foolish," Mr. Rickard said. "Didn't you think it was a good fight?"

"No," Mr. Rickard," I said, "the more I look back on it the more I am inclined to believe that Dempsey acted in a very peculiar manner."

"There you go, talkin' fake," Mr. Rickard said in an annoyed way. "Why, there wasn't enough money in the world to make that feller throw that title. He was too proud of bein' champion."

"Do you think the fight was on the level, Mr. Rickard?"

"Now don't go talkin' foolish," Mr. Rickard said, picking up his walking cane and stomping away to see some brokers about a bond issue. "Don't go talkin' foolish. Dempsey looked bad because he was worrried about them lawyers and sheriffs, and that's all that was the matter with Dempsey."

AND so one wonders if the prize fight business is perhaps becoming faintly tinged with dishonesty. This is a disturbing thought, but here you have the word of Mr. Dempsey the night before the fight that he was only amused by the lawsuits and sheriffs and was only maintaining a private force of four metropolitan detective sergeants because he enjoyed their company and their police whistle recitals in the evening.

And here you have Mr. Rickard blandly stating that Mr. Dempsey spoke words of deception and was, in fact, so badly worried that he only could put up about $3.75 worth of fighting for his $700,000.

If Mr. Dempsey is as dishonest as Mr. Rickard would make out, and Mr. Rickard is such an immoral man that he would connive at the dissemination of a falsehood, can the customers feel confident that everything is as represented when Dempsey and Tunney enter the ring again?

It places a great strain on the credulity of the customers, but the credulity of the customers seems equal to any strain. If such beautiful, unquestioning faith extended to religion the big cities would be populated only by churchmen and the evening programs at the night clubs would be opened with prayer.

But it is not so, for here is the Rev. Dr. Straton, still scolding away at a wicked, skeptical New York which will not believe in hell fire and here are the prize fight customers eagerly waiting to buy expensive tickets for the next heavyweight championship prize fight under the auspices of Mr. Rickard, who says it is wise to deceive the customers at times.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

What is the strongest college football team in the middle west?

Where Asked.

Michigan at Washington.

The Answers.

Alma Crowe, 3364 Lincoln avenue, stenographer — Having seen several of the outstanding elevens in action, I rate Northwestern the strongest in this section. Notre Dame and Michigan are close behind. I don't think Ohio State or Illinois measure up to the first three named. Did you notice at the Notre Dame game how the co-eds cheered Moon Baker? Who couldn't win under conditions like that?

W. H. Welsh, Youngstown, O., traffic manager — Northwestern is my pick. Notre Dame was lucky to score that 6 to 0 victory, and if the teams were rematched I'd bet on the Purple. Baker and Lewis are a great pair of backs, and the whole team has wonderful spirit.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. Josephine McCormick, 108 East 107th street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

Francis Borrelli, 6800 Bennett avenue, judge of the Municipal court—I believe Illinois is as strong as any midwest team. Peters is second to none save possibly Walter Eckersall of the old Chicago team as a drop kicker. Michigan and Ohio State also have strong teams. As I am a former Michigan player, I naturally hope they win the Big Ten title, but it loks like a hard battle.

Lorraine O'Reilly, 344 S. Hamlin avenue, secretary — Notre Dame is far and away the best. It will take a national champion eleven to down those South Bend fighters. I think this year's eleven is as strong as the Four Horsemen outfit that won the United States title. I'm for Notre Dame all the time.

D. S. Ellinwood, 1636 N. McVickers avenue, traffic representative—After watching Purdue outplay Chicago, I'm about convinced that the Boilermakers can hold their own with any midwest eleven. Notre Dame has a good team and so has Northwestern, but Purdue has both topped. Let's go, Purdue!

Plestina Meets Lepannen on Mat Tomorrow

Martin Plestina and Charley Lapanen finished training yesterday for their wrestling match at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium tomorrow night.

The bout will go to a finish. Joe Malcewicz of Boston and Steve Savage, local heavyweight, will take holds in the semi-windup. Two other bouts complete the card.

BEARS AND BULLS FACE HARD PRO BATTLES TODAY

Louisville and Coast Team Invade Chicago.

The Chicago Bears meet the Louisville Colonels this afternoon at Cubs' park in a pro grid game which may mar their perfect record, while at the Sox park, the Chicago Bulls face the invading Wildcats piloted by George Wilson in an encounter that will determine which team can challenge the present leaders in the American league.

GEORGE WILSON. [P. & A. Photo.]

The Wildcats and the Bulls are tied for third place in the American league standings, with New York Yankees and Philadelphia leading the pack since the withdrawal of the Cleveland Panthers.

Team of Coast Stars.

Wilson's team is rated one of the best in the circuit, and is noted for open play in addition to the running of Wilson himself. All of the members of the club hail from Pacific coast universities and have been drilled in the tricks which have been used repeatedly to turn back eastern invaders.

With successive victories over the first division teams, the Bulls appear to have struck their real stride since an inauspicious opening in the eastern tour.

The Louisville Colonels will place a team on the field against the Bears today which they hope will give the north side National league leaders their first setback, something that the top notchers of the loop have been unable to do thus far.

Palmer at Quarter Back.

Chuck Palmer, Northwestern star in 1922, will oppose Paddy Driscoll. Palmer calls the signals and directs the play of Stinchcomb, Ohio State All-American half back; Glaver and Full Back Golson. Lennie Sachs coaches the team and plays end.

Although the forwards of the Colonels do not boast of widely heralded grid honors, their determination may offset the superior play shown by the forward wall of the Bears.

But if Bill Senn gets the customary support in his off tackle dashes, and the Bruin line blocks and tackles as they have done in preceding games, the Colonels may be left with nothing but vain prayers for victory. Lineups:

LESSONS IN BRIDGE

TUESDAY night auction bridge enthusiasts listening in on the game broadcast from station W-G-N witnessed a most astonishing play in which a player of national repute played a king on his opponent's ace and thereby prevented the opponents from going game in no trump!

One might expect such a remarkable manifestation of skill in a game where Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead were pitted against Mr. Wynne Ferguson of New York, author of the famous little red bridge books, and Mr. W. E. Byrnes of Cleveland, O., former president of the American Whist league and well known writer on auction.

Mr. Ferguson, as dealer, in the "south" position, held: spades, K, Q; hearts, K, Q, 10, 9, 8 spot; diamonds, 10, 9, 2; clubs, J, 9, 2.

Mr. Work, "west," held: spades, 10, 8 spot, 3; hearts, 7, 4, 3, 2; diamonds, K, Q, J, 5; clubs, 8 spot, 6.

Mr. Byrnes, "north," held: spades, J, 9, 7, 6, 3; hearts, J, 6; diamonds, 8 spot, 6, 4; clubs, K, 10, 5.

Mr. Whitehead, "east," held: spades, A, 5, 4; hearts, A, 5; diamonds, A, 7, 3; clubs, A, Q, 7, 4, 3.

Mr. Ferguson opened the bidding with one heart. This was merely an informatory bid to tell his partner that he held two quick tricks, of which at least one was in the heart suit. In making it, Mr. Ferguson was responding to the obligation laid upon the original bidder to give his partner an accurate picture of his hand.

Mr. Work, holding four diamonds to the K, Q, J, without a side trick, properly passed.

Byrnes Passes.

Mr. Byrnes also passed. He had neither normal support—3 small cards or one small card and an honor better than jack—for his partner's hearts, nor the requisite strength of one quick trick in another suit for a denial bid.

Mr. Whitehead had three possible bids: An informatory double, two clubs, or one no trump. Had he doubled to get his partner's best suit, he probably would have had to take out his partner's response. This would merely have meant an increase in his contract. Game in clubs was a remote possibility. Game in no trump seemed more probable, with what help his partner might give him. Also he held 100 aces, a valuable honor count at no trump, although he would not have given them preference over a sure game in a suit.

Therefore he felt justified in bidding one no trump, at least until his partner was heard from, even though he held but one stopper in the opponents' hearts. The others passed.

Mr. Ferguson opened with the king of hearts—the proper lead from a K, Q, 10 or K, Q, J combination. Had he held K, Q and three small hearts—even the 9, 8, 7—his fourth best heart would have been the correct lead.

Declarer played the deuce from Dummy. Mr. Byrnes knew from the lead of the king that Mr. Ferguson held the Q, 10. Therefore he played his jack. Had Mr. Byrnes played his 6 and Mr. Whitehead also played low, Mr. Ferguson would have thought Mr. Whitehead held the A, J and wanted hearts led up to his tenace. This would have put Mr. Ferguson in a quandary as to his next lead.

Declarer Analyzes Play.

Before playing to this heart trick, Declarer analyzed the situation. He knew the original heart bidder held two quick tricks. By the lead of the king of hearts and Mr. Byrne's play of the jack, Declarer saw that only one of Mr. Ferguson's quick tricks was on hearts. The other one could be either two side kings [spades and clubs since the diamond king was exposed in dummy] or the king and queen of spades. Mr. Whitehead figured that the latter was the probable holding, since it was a more conservative bid.

Mr. Whitehead could count seven tricks in his own hand and Dummy's—one spade, one heart, four diamonds, and one club. He saw that his only possible chance for game was to take two more club tricks, which he proceeded to try to do.

The first thing was to strip Mr. Byrne's hand of hearts to prevent a possible return of the suit to Mr. Ferguson. Figuring the original bidder with at least five of the suit, and counting his own hearts, and perhaps the jack singleton for Mr. Byrnes. Not wishing to take a chance on this, Mr. Whitehead played his 5 on the first trick, retaining his ace to capture Mr. Byrnes' second heart, if he had one.

Mr. Ferguson came back with the 8 spot of hearts, which drew the 3 from Dummy, the 6 from Mr. Byrnes, and ace from Declarer.

Mr. Whitehead knew he had to finesse his queen of clubs, but first he determined to take his four rounds of diamonds, hoping that the opponents' discards on the last round of diamonds might benefit him. To force embarrassing discards is one of the cardinal principles of no trump play.

Mr. Whitehead therefore led his ace of diamonds; Mr. Ferguson, "south," played the 2; Dummy the 5; "north" the 4.

Declarer led the 3 of diamonds; "south" played the 9; Dummy the jack; "north" the 6.

Dummy returned the queen of diamonds; "north" played the 8 spot; Declarer the 7; "south" the 10.

Dummy Leads King.

Dummy led the king of diamonds. Mr. Byrnes made a clever discard of the 7 of spades — an unnecessarily high spade to show his partner that he had the suit protected. Declarer discarded the 4 of spades. Mr. Ferguson, reading his partner's signal, decided that his jack of clubs was more valuable than his spade stopper, and threw off the king of spades.

Dummy next led the 6 of clubs. Mr. Byrnes played the 5; Mr. Whitehead finessed the queen; Mr. Ferguson played the 2.

Mr. Whitehead now placed the king and one other club in Mr. Byrnes' hand. He knew if he could throw the lead to Mr. Byrnes the latter would have to return spades to Declarer's ace. Mr. Whitehead then could take his two club tricks, giving him 10 in all.

Declarer therefore led the ace of clubs; Mr. Ferguson placed the 9; and Dummy the 8 spot. Mr. Byrnes, however, was too clever to fall into Mr. Whitehead's trap. He deduced from his partner's discard of the spade king and his play of the 9 of clubs that his only possible reentry was the jack of clubs. Therefore he played his own king on Mr. Whitehead's ace—a play known in auction as the Deschapelles coup.

Mr. Whitehead, still hoping that the club jack was in Mr. Byrnes' hand, led the 3 of clubs, which Mr. Ferguson took with his jack. Mr. Ferguson of course took the next 3 tricks with his 3 good hearts.

The final trick went to Declarer's ace of spades—giving him 20 for tricks and 100 for aces, on a hand that would have meant game against defense less skillful than that put up by Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Byrnes.

The hands given out for next week promise no less interesting a game.

PEANUTS RACES TO VICTORY IN PIMLICO STAKE

Beats Princess Doreen by Three Lengths.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Peanuts, Robert L. Gerry's little four year old, again demonstrated his speed and gameness today when he came from behind to win the eighteenth running of the Bowie handicap easily over the course of a mile and a half at the Pimlico track of the Maryland Jockey club.

Laverne Fator had the mount on the son of Ambassador IV. and Agnes Sard and rode a perfectly judged race. Holding the game little fellow off the pace for the first mile, conserving his strength as much as possible under his burden of 115 pounds, Fator called on him on the far turn and gradually drew up on the leaders, challenged Walter M. Jeffords' Edith Cavell, raced her down around the turn and came on to beat the Audley Farm's famous money winner Princess Doreen by the decisive margin of three lengths.

Walter J. Salmon's Display finished third, coming with a tremendous rush in the stretch and finishing fastest of all. By his victory Peanuts added $9,550 to his earnings.

CUP RACE TO PERCUSSION

Latonia, Ky., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The orange colors of Arthur B. Hancock of Kentucky flashed to victory on Percussion in the historic Latonia Cup handicap, which had its renewal over the gruelling two and one-quarter mile course before the largest crowd of the meeting here today. Hal Price Headley's Helen's Babe finished second and C. E. Hamilton's Alloy was third in the field of seven. The other starters were Liberty, Rothermel, Lady Von and Drowsy Waters. They finished behind the first three in the order named.

Burgoright, Chicago Horse, Victor in Steeplechase

New York, Nov. 6.—The Meadow Cup run this afternoon at Belmont Park terminal was won by Benjamin L. Behr's Burgoright. This is the third successive year that Mr. Behr, a Chicago man, has won the cup. Ten horses started, but Burgoright got away in front and set the pace. After three miles had been covered Bonmaster moved up and challenged for the lead. The horses jumped several fences together, but near the finish Bonmaster fell and Burgoright finished alone.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

Red hatted and red coated deer hunters in the middle west will be able to pick up their well oiled firearms this month and invade the forested haunts of the white tailed deer, as Michigan opens up on its "big game" on Nov. 15. The season continues through Nov. 30, which gives the rifle gang more than two weeks to get their bucks. Only bucks with horns not less than 3 inches above the skull can be shot during the open season and one is the limit.

Where Michigan leaves off Wisconsin begins with its open season, as Dec. 1 to 10 is the time allotted to the rifle gang for its shooting activities.

The Badger state has a closed in the odd, open in the even year law, which means that this fall is the one which will stir up the white tails after a long period of rest. Both states ask the nonresident hunter $50 for a license.

Minnesota's open season is Nov. 20 to 30 with nonresident license $50.25, which includes a metal locking deer tag. City hunters who want one fling at the nearest thing to big game that we have close to large centers of population should get busy now making arrangements for their deer hunts this fall. Also, by way of preparation, it's a good idea to take out the old rifle and try it on a target in order to tune up your shooting eye and to make sure that the sights are true. It takes just one blow to knock the sights out of line and then bloois goes your straight shooting.

HAMILTON CLUB MARKSMEN LEAD IN TRIB SHOOT

The team representing the Hamilton club won the first leg on THE TRIBUNE'S rifle trophy in the small bore competition yesterday on the Hamilton club range. The victors broke 933 targets, while Ridgeville Rifle club, which finished second, shattered 903. S. D. Monahan registered a perfect score of 200 targets, 100 prone and 100 standing, for a new city record. The standing:

Hamilton club, 933; Ridgeville Rifle club, 903; Irving Park Rifle club, 890; Bell Telephone Co., 877; Bell Telephone Co. No. 2, 805; Commonwealth-Edison Co. No. 1, 788; Commonwealth-Edison Co. No. 2, 755; Bell Telephone Co. No. 3, 658.

U. S. MAY SEND 5 BATTLESHIPS TO RESERVE IN 1927

Men Needed to Handle Aircraft Carriers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Four and possibly five battleships of the scouting fleet may have to go into reserve next year to provide men to man the new aircraft carriers, the Saratoga and Lexington, as a result of the action of the budget in curtailing the estimates for 1928 to such an extent that only about 80,000 enlisted men will be available for duty.

This action, discussed at a conference today between departmental heads and Admiral Charles F. Hughes, commander in chief of the United States fleet, is proposed as an alternative to the plan presented to the budget whereby one old battleship, one cruiser of the Trenton type, and a half dozen destroyers were to be withdrawn from the fleet.

3,600 Men for Carriers.

During the final sessions of the budget hearings the estimates were trimmed still lower, and as a result drastic curtailment of the existing fleet will have to be made to provide 3,600 men for the carriers.

Under the original plan of reduction it would have been necessary to take destroyers off the European or Asiatic station, which, for reasons of state, was held inadvisable. Should the new plan be made effective, it would leave one of the six battleships of the scouting fleet in commission to act as flagship for the cruiser, destroyer, aircraft, and submarine units of the naval forces in the Atlantic.

Decommission 35 Destroyers.

Other means of finding enough men for the carriers have been dismissed as impracticable or impossible. For instance, it would be necessary to decommission 35 destroyers, an impossibility if any semblance of a complete fleet is to be maintained. For, the same reasons, no thought was given to placing any of the battleships of the battle fleet in reserve.

Like the British grand fleet this is the main fighting force of the navy, and its entire organization is carefully worked out with the twelve battleships as the nucleus, so many cruisers, destroyers, carriers, submarines, and other auxiliaries. Any break in this organization would make it impossible to carry on peace time training effectively to be ready for war, it is asserted.

PEKING, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Chinese government today abrogated the Sino-Belgian treaty of 1865 after having received a reply from the Belgian government yesterday, definitely rejecting Chinese proposals for formation of a new treaty based on "equality and reciprocity," and returned to its original position of proposing reference of the question to the international court at The Hague.

NOT ONE AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ONE

Why So Many Reos Are Bought By Men Who Are Hard To Sell

THE man who is hard to sell never buys just transportation.

Rather he demands pleasant, carefree transportation—the joy of the open spaces, the mastery of the map, the freedom from crowded city cars and train schedules.

And this hard-to-sell buyer knows that he can find those carefree motoring miles only in the mechanical excellence of the machine. That's what leads him to Reo.

Beauty he demands, of course; and comfort in the tangled ruck of traffic or on the long days at the wheel. And always he looks behind these to the mechanics of his car.

Reo builds for this man who is hard to sell by building primarily a car that operates at greatest mechanical efficiency over the longest period of time.

Proof of carefree miles in store

Reo builds automobiles as machines should be built—simple in construction, sturdy in design, tested in materials, accessible as to parts, low in maintenance, enduring in operation, yet light for operating economy and good to look upon.

It is natural, therefore, that the majority of Reo owners are exacting men who appreciate mechanical excellence and demand it.

Reos are bought by those who prefer to look beneath the hood before they buy rather than after, who would rather look over a chassis in a salesroom than up at it on a hot, dusty road.

And it is because Reo buyers look at these things first, that they have the greatest opportunity to forget about them afterwards in their enjoyment of untroubled, economical motoring comfort.

How Reo keeps upkeep low

The hard-to-sell men know the significance of Reo engineering that cuts down the frequency of valve grinding and carbon removal by as much as seventy-five percent. And there are many more points where Reo builds to slow up wear.

Go over a Reo chassis point by point in comparison with any other car on the market. You'll see then why Reo is America's longest lasting car—bar none. You'll see why the critical buyer prefers Reo, why women feel secure with their Reos though long, long miles from a garage.

Note how Reo is put together. Every part on every car is tested. This is done only on a very few other cars, all of them exceedingly high priced.

Satisfy yourself, too, on Reo's grace of line and beauty of finish. Reo designers build Reo in quiet but debonair good taste. They make of Reo a car you can be proud of.

Yet Reo's price is moderate

Yet with all these tangible evidences of quality, of being a really superior piece of machinery, Reo is moderately priced—lower, in fact, in its more popular models than the average for other cars of its size—cars whose life is far shorter than Reo's, cars in whose construction there is not the same assurance of carefree years of motoring.

See it today

Ask to see this brawny, supple piece of machinery—then climb behind the wheel and see how easy it is to forget that there is anything there but an accelerator and a steering wheel.

The joy you'll get as a Reo owner will repay many times over the time you spend in being sure while buying.

Europe Borrows Transport Ideas from Uncle Sam

AMERICAN methods are being applied to all phases of European motor transport, according to a report to directors of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, made by George F. Bauer this week, who, as manager of the foreign department, has just concluded a trip in eleven European countries.

"Industrially, the United States has never enjoyed greater respect and admiration in Europe than now," he declared. "Manufacturers in all kinds of businesses are studying the principles by which mass production was made successful in America, and endeavoring to apply them to their purposes.

"The benefits of coöperation in mass selling are being more and more realized. The Royal Automobile club of Sweden has made great progress in this regard and is actively interested in furthering all work of highways and intelligent legislation. Similarly in Switzerland petty jealousies are abandoned and through coöperation between the Swiss Automobile club, the Touring club and the Traffic league, definite strides are being made to advance motor transport to a stage where it can economically help agriculture and commerce.

"Chiefs of police seem anxious to learn of innovations in traffic control. So one can see several traffic towers in Berlin and attend safety congresses in Vienna that are based on principles enunciated at the Hoover conference in Washington.

"In Genoa, Italy, pedestrians are compelled to walk in the direction facing motor traffic. The object is to prevent accidents in narrow streets. In this city more parking space is also being provided by moving the statue of Garibaldi.

"Many unique methods of advertising are also being employed. In Barcelona one can see a large advertisement that covers the banister along steps of an electric street car of two deck type devoted to extolling the merits of an American automobile.

"Advertisements of the different uses of the automobile are given in certain French theaters, where domestic manufacturers use lantern slides to point out the various economic benefits of motor transportation.

"The farmer in Norway has become an enthusiastic supporter of the automobile, which is being used in manners similar to those in the United States. In Denmark it is now customary to see at the flower markets in Copenhagen light delivery automobiles so constructed with glass inclosed bodies as to facilitate without trouble the display of wares to possible buyers.

"There is a definite movement toward adoption of gasoline taxes in Germany, Denmrk, and even England instead of present arrangements. There is an increasing recognition that lower taxes usually mean increased volume of returns and larger total revenue. With its application to Europe, motor transport will increase greatly."

WAITING FOR MASTERS.

Startling stories might be told by these cars, estimated to be worth half a million dollars, if they could tell of their adventures before reaching this police haven in Brooklyn. The cars were all lost, strayed or stolen and eventually picked up by the police. They range from the lowliest flivver to the most expensive town car. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

News and Views of the Auto Trade

YANKEES tourists may find an undercurrent of hostility in a few European capitals, but American motor car manufacturers have been met with a warm welcome in their new overtures toward a specialized European market, according to reports received yesterday from executives returning from the annual exhibits in Paris and London. Studebaker, with its introduction in Paris of the new Erskine six, designed and built especially for the continental markets, has won instant approval and sales far surpassing factory expectations, it was announced yesterday. Salon crowds, it was found this year, have implicit confidence in American manufacturers and their production methods.

R. F. Everett, president of Rickenbacker, stated yesterday that the entire liabilities of the company, to be revealed in the "friendly suit" for receivership brought in federal court by the Columbia Axle company of Cleveland, are less than $1,500,000. Assets, he said, are close to $7,000,000. The action, he added, will give the company necessary funds to operate the Rickenbacker plant and to build and deliver cars in quantity at once.

October Nash sales and production set new high records for the month, it was announced yesterday by E. H. McCarty, general sales manager. The production volume reached 13,476 cars and ran 43.9 per cent ahead of the biggest previous October in the company's history. For the ten months Nash has marketed 125,641 cars, as compared to 84,708 in the same period last year.

Following the close of the most prosperous year in its history, the Packard company of Chicago has just distributed a length-of-service bonus to 113 employés and beat the Chicago field to the Christmas bonus line, according to H. W. Peters, general manager. Employés who have been with the company 5 years received $50, with $10 added for each additional year of service.

Miss Jane Morton of Lake Forest, prominent in the social life of the north shore, has been appointed manager of the customs body department of the Stutz Chicago factory branch, 2500 Michigan avenue. According to President Cerf, she has been one of the most successful fine car merchandisers on the row.

The Chicago Moon organization has taken up its new quarters at 2247 Michigan avenue, according to announcement yesterday. The Emich Motor Sales company will handle the retail department on the first floor and distribution headquarters will occupy the second floor of the building.

Roamer Motor Sales company under Manager Kenworthy has opened its new quarters at 2534 Michigan avenue to feature the six cylinder Roamer speed wagon.

Big Program.

For the four years from January, 1923, to January, 1927, the Pennsylvania state highway department will have spent $220,000,000 on highway constructions and maintenance. During this period about 2,000 miles of new hard surfaced roads have been constructed, and 1,200 miles of roads will have been rebuilt by the construction of new wearing surface on existing hard surfaced roads, making a total of 4,200 miles.

Canada Spreads $100,000,000 Over Its Motor Roads

OTTAWA, Ont.—[Special Correspondence.]—Canada has spent $100,000,000 on good roads in 1926, according to a bulletin issued by A. W. Campbell, federal commissioner of highways.

"More than 2,000 miles of paved highway have been completed in the dominion this year," he reported. "Ontario led the provinces in road building with an expenditure of $30,000,000 on new highways and maintenance and repair of existing roads. Quebec spent $20,000,000. The prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta accounted for a combined total of $30,000,000; British Columbia about $8,000,000, and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick $6,000,000 each.

"Part of the provincial highways were constructed under the federal aid scheme. Under the terms of this grant the provinces undertake the construction of trunk highways. On completion and approval by the federal highways department, the dominion government pays 40 per cent of the construction cost.

"Road patrols and maintenance crews now operate constantly on 21,600 miles of highway in Canada, keeping the roads in condition for motor traffic. Highway improvement has been a big factor in developing Canada's tourist trade. More than 2,500,000 automobiles entered Canada from the United States this year for touring purposes. Rapid settlement of farm land in western Canada has encouraged a comprehensive program of road building in the prairie provinces."

Heavy Toll.

According to reports received from more than 100 American cities by the National Safety council, fifty-nine persons were killed every day during July in automobile accidents. This is an increase of just one person a day over the record of July, 1925, and June, 1926.

WORK BENCH WISDOM

BY F. E. EDWARDS.
[Chief Engineer Automobile Testing Laboratory.]

IT IS not the big things that count so much with the average motorist, probably because the trouble has come on gradually and he has practically prepared himself for the bad news. As a rule the big things are only noticed on cars belonging to the happy-go-lucky man who drives his car irrespective of its condition. This man probably uses 25 to 50 per cent more fuel than he should, and is also extravagant on oil. His motor is always sluggish. You will frequently find that his car has dented fenders, slipping fan belt, and is generally dry at most of the places needing lubrication. This is a condition for which there is no excuse, and no manufacturer will ever be able to devise means to overcome it.

The conservative automobile owner, who gets the best out of his car, is the man who is worried about the little noises. We tested a car recently and, after testing and proving it to be in first class condition, the owner called our attention to a noise which sounded like the tick of an alarm clock. It came at twenty-three miles an hour, and disappeared at higher speeds. We had proved the motor, so had to look elsewhere for the noise, which was located in the speedometer drive shaft housing. This was curved with too short a bend, and, on being straightened out, the noise was eliminated. This noise was not causing any trouble, but the careful owner will catch a noise that, located in time, will save a lot of after grief.

Another car heated and lacked pep. Our machine told us that the spark was much too late in the position where it should have been advanced, and this was the position that the owner always had it placed when driving. We found that the lever at the bottom of the steering post was in such a position that it was over the center and that the action of it was the reverse of what it formerly had been on this car. It advanced toward the retard position and retarded toward the advance position. With this corrected, the car did not heat, was peppy, and used much less fuel.

Another car, which had been giving the owner and his repairman a lot of grief, was a sleeve valve motor, which our machine showed to be much under power and also showed that air under pressure in a cylinder with the valves closed would leak out at another cylinder. Our diagnosis was that the valve timing should be checked up. This was done, the timing corrected, and the sleeve valve motor functioned with its normal power. Pre-ignition is another thing that worries motorists. Probably thirty cases having been corrected by advising the drivers to retard their spark lever on acceleration.

Little things cause a lot of worry and the large things are easily remedied if the base of the trouble can be arrived at and corrected.

Valentino's Car to Be One Feature of Annual Auto Salon

WITH fifteen custom coachwork builders having special exhibits at the forthcoming twenty-second annual automobile salon in New York and Chicago, this famous exhibition will present the largest and best display of motor car custom built bodies ever assembled. A feature will be the exhibit of the Weyman fabric body now so popular abroad.

Of special interest will be a supersport roadster designed by the late Rudolph Valentino a few weeks before his death. It is mounted on a super-eight Isotta-Fraschini chassis, the fourth car of this well known Italian make purchased by Valentino, and embodies the artistic ideas of the famous movie star. Capt. Hugo V. d'Annunzio, son of the poet and one of Italy's war aces, who is president of Isotta Motors, spent many hours with Valentino working out a most distinctive design.

NEW LOWER PRICES place the Chrysler "60" further than ever beyond comparison with the ordinary type of light six

ANY attempt to compare the Chrysler "60" with the ordinary type of six is like comparing the modern dirigible with the old-style balloon—impossible, because the two are fundamentally different.

The difference begins with a black-and-white difference in engineering, the Chrysler "60" being designed and built under the plan of Standardized Quality, as if required to give 60 miles an hour for every mile and minute of its life.

Necessarily, the difference stands out even more sharply in performance—the extraordinary power reserve of the "60" giving it a smoothness at average speeds that you recognize at once as unattainable in the ordinary type of six built by ordinary manufacturing methods to ordinary performance standards.

Just as pronounced is the difference in comfort, agility and handling ease—in gasoline economy, dependability and long life—in every single feature that makes for complete motoring satisfaction.

Try out the Chrysler "60"—discover for yourself why, at its new lower prices, it is the inevitable choice of every purchaser who searches for utmost value in the light six field.

Prices Stabilize as Auto Makers Finish Huge Year

Small Cars to Feature 1927; Plants Slow Down.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The great automobile industry, seeing a new record in sight, is experiencing a slight easing up in production after one of the most strenuous competitive years of its entire history. This, however, does not mean there is a slump in sight, but that the usual conditions exist for this particular season of the year. Leading manufacturers announce that present prices will continue for some time to come; that their 1927 models are ready, and that prospects for big business for the coming year were never better.

Although competition has been keen, several manufacturers have let it be known that their recent price cuts were designed to meet individual situations of their own particular company and not because they were hard pressed by competitors in their class. These cuts, they admit, have reduced profits per car, but increased them on account of the geater number of cars sold.

During the year, especially the last few months, a greater number of smaller cars have been brought out by various manufacturers than was anticipated there would be. One or two prominent builders started the vogue, and others, fearing perhaps that they would be working at a disadvantage, followed the leaders until now practically every concern has its big, medium, and small cars. Among these companies are the Studebaker, Jewett, Hudson, Peerless, Nash, Moon, Overland, Pontiac, Star Six, and, of course, General Motors.

Added to this list is the Rolls-Royce with a light car that will sell at a price around the $5,000 mark. This car was recently announced in London, where it was exhibited at the Olympic show. It is a two wheel brake job, but with the option of four wheel brake at an additional cost. The engine is rated at 20 horse power.

The year of 1927, from the present point of view, seems destined to become a light car year, and manufacturers are to a great extent arranging their schedules accordingly. This trend is distinctly noticeable in this fall's sales, for the light, closed vehicles have been called for to a greater extent than ever before. They have the advantage over their "big brothers" in several ways, not the least being lower cost, lower upkeep in every way, and easier to handle and park in the ever-increasing congested districts.

Dealers, on the whole, are optimistic, perhaps justly so, for a majority of them enjoyed their best period of the present year in October. They are making deliveries as fast as received, and not an unhealthy sign is visible.

It is not the low and medium price vehicle manufacturers who are reaping all the automobile prosperity, as noticed by the Packard official statement of recent date. For the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 this company reported that sales, production, and earnings all exceeded by a substantial margin any previous year in the corporation's history.

General Motors corporation's balance sheet for nine months ended Sept. 30 showed that the earnings for that period were greater than the earnings of any previous entire calendar year, amounting to nearly $150,000,000. Sales to dealers amounted to 990,221 vehicles, an increase of 63 per cent over the corresponding period of one year ago. General Motors' different models number no less than 165 automotive units.

Official figures for September production show that the record breaking pace continued through that month with a total output of 397,123 units, compared with 321,857 one year ago.

Passenger cars manufactured in the United States alone during the first nine months of this year totaled 3,118,461, compared with 2,695,057 during the corresponding period last year. Of this number 385,888 were trucks.

With but few exceptions motor plants are now running on reduced schedules. Buick, which has been operating at a high capacity at close to 1,300 cars daily, has cut production 200 cars. The Dodge plant is working on a 4,000 units a week schedule, which was started Oct. 1. This plant is working its regular five days a week.

Demand for the recently announced custom built Studebakers is keeping the South Bend and Detroit plants of that corporation operating on a schedule close to 650 cars a day, and this number is being steadily increased.

Ford of Canada is running at 50 per cent capacity, the result of increased importation of motors from the United States and the slack season throughout Ontario. Reduced tariffs resulted in the importation of completely built motors from the United States increasing 250 per cent during the last few months over the corresponding period of 1925.

The number of automobile workers in the Detroit automobile factories and accessories shops showed another decrease for the week, amounting to 4,439, according to the Employers' association announcement. The total number now employed is 220,367, a drop of 40,331 from the number at work one year ago.

Annual Motor Style Shows Draw Record List of Exhibitors

WITH a record list of exhibitors for the twenty-second annual New York Automobile salon, opening on Nov. 28 at the Commodore, arrangements have been made to display more cars than heretofore. A new doorway has been cut from the main ballroom, making available a suite of large reception rooms, and in addition there will be an overflow exhibit of a dozen or more cars downstairs in the main lobby.

The forthcoming salon will be the largest exclusive exhibition of de luxe motor cars held anywhere in the world. Well over 100 individual cars will be shown, each mounting a specially designed and built custom body.

It is distinctly international in character, there being six nations, France, Italy, Belgium, England, Germany and the United States, represented. Cars being exhibited by their makers or importers are Cunningham, Isotta-Fraschini, Mercedes, Minerva, Panhard, Renault, and Rolls Royce. Cars to be shown by coachmakers are Cadillac, Duesenberg, Franklin, Hispano-Suiza, Imperial Chrysler, Lincoln, Marmon, Packard, Pierce Arrow, and Stutz. Special custom coachwork exhibits will be made by Brewster, Brunn, De Causse, Derham, Dietrich, Fisher, Fleetwood, Holbrook, Hume, Judkins, Le Baron, Locke, Rollston, Weyman and Willoughby.

Of barely secondary interest will be the equally complete showing of the latest developments in body finishes, upholstery, equipment and accessories which are suitable for use on de luxe motor, cars. An outstanding feature will be the improvements in chassis engineering as found in the latest models of the world's leading makers of high priced motor cars. The salon will be duplicated in Chicago on Jan. 29, and in Los Angeles on Feb. 12.

Motor Accessories to Brighten Big Automobile Shows

PARTS, service equipment, and accessories designed for shops, garages, and other plants having the automotive industry as their background will be a new and vital feature of the coming national automobile shows in New York and Chicago under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, with the cooperation of the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' association. The inclusion of shop equipment sections in the two big exhibitions has met with an immediate response from a large number of manufacturers, the list already including many of the most representative concerns in the industry.

The shop equipment sections will be open to the trade only until 3 p. m.—except on opening day. This will afford factory service managers, wholesale distributors, dealers, and service station operators an opportunity to inspect in comfort the latest developments in service machinery and tools. In the late afternoon and evening the exhibits will be open for inspection for both the trade and the public.

The new sections in the national shows take the place of the annual shop equipment show, which has been held in Detroit in recent years. Taken in connection with the display of the new models of motor cars and representative showings of motor delivery trucks and taxicabs, they will go far toward making the annual presentations representative of the entire industry. The sponsors of the shows have been aiming at this point for several years.

Machine and electric tools, cranes, compressors, pneumatic devices, motors, vulcanizers, towing and welding equipment, and a great variety of machines and tools for maintenance will be among the products exhibited.

Wheels Wobble.

Worn or loosely adjusted parts are not always to blame for front wheel wobble. Loose front spring clips, excessively sagging rear springs, worn shackles or broken leaves may be the cause of the trouble.

Canadian Plants Set New Record in Car Output

A WAVE of automobile buying in Canada swept production in the industry beyond all previous records in the first eight months of 1926, according to a bulletin compiled by the dominion bureau of statistics.

"Output of cars from Canadian factories totaled 155,347 in eight months ending Sept. 1, compared with 114,650 cars in the same period last year, a gain of 35 per cent." says the bulletin. "Sales of automobiles in the dominion totaled 121,935 in the first eight months, compared with 80,607 in 1925, an increase of 51,372 cars, or 60 per cent.

"Value of automobile production registered a gain of $22,000,000 during the period. Unprecedented sale of cars in the dominion so far this year is attributable to prosperous economic conditions and a bumper grain crop. Automobile buying was reported heaviest in the prairie provinces of western Canada, where agriculture is booming with the rapid settlement of farm lands. Factories will pass the 200,000 car mark before the end of 1926.

"Production included 121,059 passenger cars, 20,090 trucks, and 14,198 chassis. Output during August was 15,281 automobiles, a gain of 73 per cent over August, 1925. Export of cars during the month amounted to 3,080, while imports from the United States reached 3,053."

First Aid.

W. J. Berichon, Muskegon county traffic officer, wants motorists to get out and push rather than become idle spectators in time of accidents.

"When an accident takes place on a highway other motorists should first push the cars off the road," says Mr. Berichon.

"Records show that many accidents have resulted at night as a result of cars being left on the highway after accidents. There is no reason why other motorists cannot do a little pushing and keep traffic going."

HEAT IMPORTANT.

A correctly heated carburetor runs on less gasoline and runs smoother than an unheated one. With cooler weather it is advisable to close the shutter on the hot air pipe between the carburetor and the exhaust manifold.

Unfailing Performance in Winter Driving

Cold weather serves only to enhance your enjoyment of Hupmobile Six performance. For, engineered into this car, are features which promote comfort and economy in winter driving.

A thermostat, for example, checks the passage of water from the cylinder block to the radiator until the water in the cylinder block has reached a temperature of 170 degrees—the highest point of efficiency.

Thus the motor comes quickly to operating temperature and excessive use of the choke is eliminated.

Costly dilution of oil is kept down—gasoline consumption kept very close to mid-summer average. In addition, an efficient gas filter completely cleanses gasoline of all impurities.

You will enjoy also, the snug comfort of the clear-vision closed bodies—the silence and smooth power of the famous Hupmobile Six engine

Drive the Hupmobile Six of your choice today. Note the absence of rumble in the handsomely appointed closed cars. We will gladly arrange a demonstration at your convenience.

Sunshine Fans to Find Easy Route on Trips South

Four Nights on Road, and No Woes, Mark Schedule.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — [Special Correspondence.]—Four nights on the road from Chicago to Florida by automobile is now a comfortable schedule for the average driver and, with a town-to-town route laid out in advance, the traveler has little to do excepting to steer, brake and accelerate for something over 1,000 miles of comparatively good roads, characterized by freedom from speed cops in the open and officious traffic officers in the cities.

A log of the trip via Cincinnati and Chattanooga just completed offers directions so simple that a child could accomplish the journey. Aside from the routing, however, there are a few points which might interest seasoned motorists. One point is gas consumption. It required 68 gallons of gasoline and 18 quarts of oil to make this journey, and the average mileage was about 17 per gallon. The total mileage from South Park way and 26th street, Chicago, to Lake City, Fla., showed on the speedometer as 1,154. The 18 quarts of oil left a margin of 350 miles for Florida travel after arrival. No tire puncture or trouble occurred on the trip.

There are six detours between Chicago and Tifton, Ga., which increase the normal mileage about fifteen miles, on the route taken. Three of the most irritating ones will be eliminated within thirty days. The worst, which is over a deeply pitted, narrow mountain trail south of Beres, Ky., for about seven miles, is scheduled for the discard this month.

Travel to Florida has begun to move in major volume, and while the Nashville route is heavily traveled to Chattanooga, the Cincinnati-Lexington highway begins to resemble a southbound one-way street. At Lexington, Ky., on Oct. 27, the motor bureau had 416 registered southbound tourists, and officials estimated that figure as about 25 per cent of the actual travel.

The details of this trip can be stated briefly. Starting at Western avenue and Garfield boulevard, route 1 was followed to Watseka, proceeding eastward on route 8, a mile east of the city, to the Indiana state line, on concrete. Thence on gravel through Kentland, Goodland, Wolcott, Lafayette, Frankfort, Lebanon to Indianapolis, and out of that city to Shelbyville, Greensburg, Versailles, Aurora, and by detour into Cincinnati.

From town to town the marking is clear and unmistakable. Crossing to Covington the LLL trail leads straight out through Falmouth, Cynthiana, and Paris into the blue grass region. Although shorter, the line through Winchester to Richmond is exceedingly rough driving, while, by way of and through Lexington, it is new and smooth highway. Then comes the present Berea irritation into Mount Vernon and, after a short stretch of concrete, about ten miles of washboard dirt road which must be taken at low speed, as it winds down the mountain paralleling a deep bedded stream on the right. A detour around Corbin leads to the Barbourville concrete sector and one can drive fifty miles an hour safely to Middleboro. The gravel road is good to the Virginia state highway going to Cumberland Gap, but the ascent to the pass on Tennessee road is execrable.

Once over the Cumberland's summit, the southern slope is taken over narrow gravel roads down to Knoxville, with momentary irritations at two villages which the state improvements passed by. The Lee highway from Knoxville to Chattanooga offers forty to fifty miles an hour safely, to make up for loss of time at Loudon ferry; the roads widen out and, while part gravel, part concrete, and part macadam, is easily negotiated.

In and out of Chattanooga the going is excellent, with wide concrete and asphalt roadways to Fort Oglethorpe, where the red clay surface takes up the traffic burden into Dalton and Zebulin, Ga., where one is detoured to the left into Barnesville and onto a new concrete highway to Macon. A few patches of this are still unscraped, though finished, and there is no speed limit into that city.

Out of Macon for Cordele, a detour of 28 miles substitutes for the 26 mile straight line, but when dry is in wonderful shape. The paved section is to open within two weeks, it was stated. Another short detour—perhaps three miles—anticipates Tifton, after which, by turning left to Sylvester and through Moultrie, Quitman, and Madison, all construction spots are avoided to Lake City. There is still a bad section between Valdosta and Lake City, which this route eliminates.

For the 1,154 mile route the average going compares well with 1926 travel in northern and eastern states. Whether northern tourists are to be as plentiful as last year cannot be foretold, but the counts by the Florida state road department thus far show a volume of traffic equal to last September and October. Newly finished roads and wider highways on the old trails, however, facilitate traffic movement, and state officials conclude that up to the present time the caravan is as large as last year, but is moving about twice as fast.

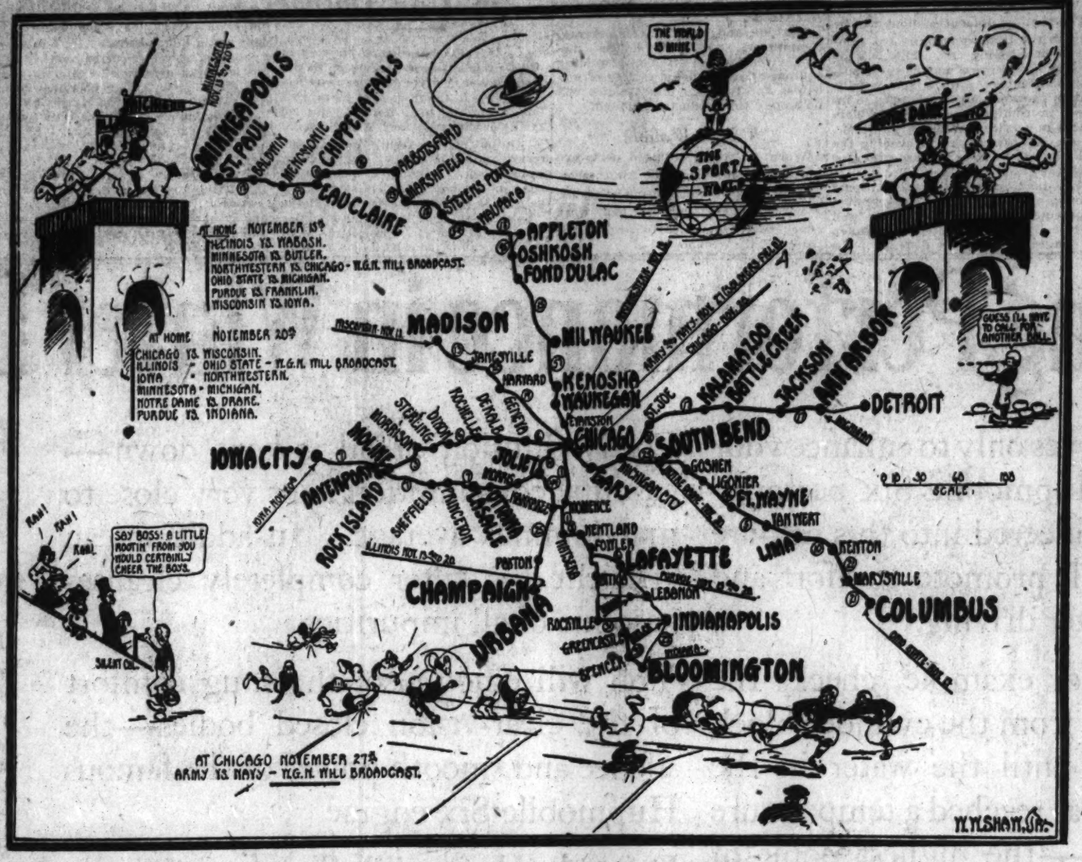
Finest Road.

Virginia, on November 17, will celebrate the opening of her first completely hard-surfaced through state highway, leading from the Virginia line at Martinsburg, W. Va., south for more than 500 miles to Cumberland Gap. The celebration will take place at Christianburg, on the sesquicentennial anniversary celebration of the founding of Montgomery county.

Not only will the new highway connect north and south to the advantage of thousands of tourists, but it will furnish a highway between the great Shenandoah National park in Virginia and the new national park in the Smoky Mountain region.

TRIBUNE TOURS

XXXI.—ROUTES TO FOOTBALL CENTERS



EXCELLENT pavements or all-weather highways now lead from Chicago to all football capitals of the middle west with the exception of Iowa City, where some remaining stretches of earth roads make travel for the motor fan a ticklish adventure in November.

Two good routes are open to Champaign and Urbana, via either Western avenue and Kankakee or Joliet and Kankakee. To Lafayette and Bloomington, Illinois concrete and Indiana gravel and stone roads will carry the motorists safely and without difficult detours and to South Bend and Columbus new pavement and highway improvements have shortened the trip by hours. This week's tour map shows the best and shortest routes to be used by motorists during the remainder of the season.

Sticky Valves.

Any opening in the valve tappet compartment where warm air can blow in is likely to result in drying the valve stems and making them stick. Such an opening, when found, can be plugged with felt.

Motors Welcome.

Information as to how American travelers can arrange to take their cars with them into the various countries of Europe and adjacent Mediterranean aeras without being subject to tedious customs formalities is detailed in a department of commerce publication.

Generally speaking, the bulletin explains, automobiles may be taken for a limited time into most of these countries for touring purposes free of duty by making a cash deposit [to be refunded later] or by giving bond [to be canceled later] for the amount of import duties, or by using the triptique privilege.

OIL IN GAS.

When breaking in a new engine it is advisable to put cylinder oil in the gasoline to provide extra lubrication to the pistons and rings. The oil should be put in just before starting on a run so that it will mix thoroughly with the gasoline. Otherwise it will be too heavy to vaporize when passed into the engine and hard starting on a stalled engine will be the result.

Stop Auto Thefts and Cut Insurance Costs, Says Reeves

STATING that the motorist's bill for insurance is too high, Alfred Reeves of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce advocated a central theft detection bureau and greater caution in issuing policies yesterday.

Insurance rates are too high because too little effort is made to investigate the personal integrity of the policy holder, and because no central agency exists for apprehending the thief, Reeves contended.

Carelessness of the motorist in failing to lock his car and the fact that only twenty-four of the states have certificate of title laws were other points cited by the speaker as rolling up the insurance bill.

"Sixty million dollars was lost by motorists last year in stolen cars," he pointed out. "There were $300,000,000 worth of automobiles stolen last year, of which 20 per cent remained unrecovered.

"One car out of every thirty registered in Detroit was stolen last year.

"This situation is an open challenge on the part of the underworld to insurance companies.

"It is a mockery of justice that millions of dollars in motor thefts can go unpunished every year.

"United action can go far toward removing this reflection on American law enforcement.

"At the present time there is no central detective bureau embracing all the insurance companies. There is one strong bureau and another recently organized, but it is important for the policy holder to be sure that in any reputable company he has as good protection as can be secured."

Trackless Cars.

Trackless street cars having become a reality, attention now turns to the development of the roadless motor vehicles. The introduction of balloon tires is believed to be the beginning of this form of travel. Cars now can negotiate with comfort roads that formerly were impossible. Traction is greatly improved and power saved. New methods of spring suspension, being experienced with, so it may be possible for the body of a car to remain virtually level while the four wheels adjust themselves to all manner of conditions.

Roads in Middle West Fair for Late Fall Tours

Illinois Detours Fall as Crews Rush Construction.

LOW temperatures, with occasional precipitation, have continued through the north central states, and as a result unimproved highways are only in fair condition, according to the weekly road bulletin of the Chicago Motor club. Improved highways and trails, however, remain in good dependable condition for travel.

Throughout the southern states light rains were reported, except in one section in Arkansas, where heavy rainfall occurred. Most southern routes are in good condition, with fair detours.

Heavy rainfall is reported in eastern Pennsylvania, the New England states and in southeastern Canada. Eastern trails have improved and are in good condition at all times; detours are good.

Light precipitation over practically all the central plains states and also through the northwestern states. Improved roads in these sections, however, remain in fair condition for travel. Southwestern trails have been reported in excellent condition.

Illinois roads line up as follows:

Belleville—Heavy rainfall in this section has put dirt roads in bad condition for travel.

Ill.-1—Motorists still using bridge run-around at Milford.

Ill.-2—Short gap is being paved in south edge of Decatur. A three mile detour has been marked over city and township pavement, gravel and oil, and is being maintained by the state highway department. A five ton restriction is being enforced on the bridge along the detour; detour will remain in effect about six weeks. Paving is complete from north city limits of Clinton to Wapella and will be open in about a month. A one mile stretch is to be completed south of Clinton this season if weather conditions are favorable; work to start immediately. The detour for this stretch is 1.5 miles long and is in poor condition in wet weather.

Ill.-3—Bridge now open for travel at Beardstown.

Ill.-4—Short detours for bridge construction remain in effect just north of Springfield and south of Lincoln. Both detours are cindered and in good condition.

Ill.-5—Route closed between Cherry Valley and Rockford because of construction work. Detour for four miles on Newberg road, which is mostly gravel; under state maintenance. East bound traffic should turn off on Newberg road at "Five Points" or the "Log Cabin."

THE INQUIRING REPORTER.

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question W. L. Lowry, Lacon, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

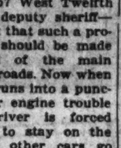
Should the state build paved spaces here and there along the main highways to allow cars in trouble to pull off the concrete roadway?

Where Asked.

State and Madison streets.

The Answers:

Charles J. Dorf, 3457 West Twelfth place, deputy sheriff—I think that such a provision should be made on all of the main paved roads. Now when a car runs into a puncture or engine trouble the driver is forced either to stay on the pavement and make other cars go around him or pull off on soft dirt shoulders where a jack will not take hold.



Samuel Gassberg, 1215 North Rockwell street, chauffeur—By building a run-out every mile or so our main roads in Illinois would be more safe. I do not think that these run-outs would have to be paved, but they could be made with cinders, gravel or some other hard surfacing that would hold a car.

Russell Curry, 447 North Cicero avenue, chauffeur—This provision for getting cars in trouble off the main pavement is one of the important things that engineers have overlooked. I have seen cases where one car stalled in the roadway has tied up traffic for miles. Run-outs should be built about every mile, particularly on roads leading out of Chicago.

Matt J. Vogel, 1965 West Twenty-first place, court clerk—Building some sort of hard platforms or places where a driver could pull out of traffic would be a big help on the country roads. Now there are signs all along forbidding cars to stop on the pavement, but in wet weather a man with a puncture has to stop there in order to change a tire.

Joseph Spenlla, 733 North Ridgeway avenue, manager—On many roads in the east there are such run-outs built for cars in trouble and they are built close enough together to make it possible for a man to push his car off the road when it stalls or a tire pops. This is a good idea for Illinois roads.

Smooth Start.

The proper way to start a car is to shift to low, give the engine a little gas and then, while observing the car, let the clutch in very slowly, until the car just begins to move, when the clutch must be held, the "letting in" stopping althogether, until the car has moved a few feet. Then, and while the car is in motion, the clutch can slowly be let in the rest of the way. It is this stopping of the raising the clutch pedal, or "holding the clutch," which is the secret of a smooth start.

HIGH RATES.

Automobile insurance rates in New York City, particularly those affecting buses, have been advanced in some cases as much as 40 per cent. In New York City the public liability rates for buses are increased 40 per cent and property damage rates 26 per cent.

WHEAT MARKET ERRATIC WITHIN NARROW RANGE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The wheat market was decidedly unsettled within a range of 1¼@1½c breaking ¾c on December early on scattered selling, only to rally sharply on reports of heavy rains in northern Argentina and very cold weather in the southern sections of that country. Prices, however, eased off toward the last and the close was unchanged to ⅝c lower with December $1.40¾ to $1.40⅞; May, $1.45⅝ to $1.45½, and July $1.37½ to $1.37⅝.

Liquidation was on again in corn, with all deliveries at a new low on the crop, and the finish was at the bottom, with net losses of ½@¾c, with December 70@70⅛c, or 9c under May, the widest spread of the season. July closed at 81⅛c. Oats lost ¼@⅜c, with December 47⅛c and May 47⅝c. Rye was off ⅝@⅝c, with December 96⅛c and May $1.04.

While the meat market was decidedly unsettled last week, there was a good class of buying on the breaks, and the change in the tenor of the news from Argentina assisted in making a strong rally, and the nearby deliveries finished ½@¾c higher than a week ago, with the July off ½c. Corn was on the downgrade from start to finish and closed at the inside figures of the week and the season, with net losses of 3¾@4¼c, with December leading. Oats gained ½@¾c, and rye was 1@1⅛c lower. Lard declined 43¾@50c and ribs 37½c, while bellies were 20c higher as compared with a week ago.

Heavy Rain in Argentina.

Dry weather is now needed for harvesting in northern Argentina, and reports of heavy rains in that section were instrumental in bringing in local and outside buying in wheat. At Winnipeg there was buying credited to European account. The rally from the inside figures was easily attained with profit taking and week-end evening up making the closing recession. Taken as a whole, trade was light.

No improvement was shown in the export demand for wheat, and foreign buyers were said to be holding off in anticipation of a settlement of the coal strike within the next few days. Liverpool closed 1@1½d lower, with short covering a factor.

Big Charters for Corn.

In an effort to create more room for grain at Chicago, charters have been made for 1,000,000 bu of corn for winter storage in boats at Georgian Bay ports and Buffalo at 4¼c at the Bay and 4½c at Buffalo. Futures showed fair strength early, but broke sharply toward the last on a resumption of liquidation and on a break in the cash market, with some sales in the latter showing a decline of 3c. Buying against bids was a factor in checking the break. Weather over the belt was favorable for field work, with the forecast for unsettled conditions. Country offerings to arrive were smaller, with purchases of 65,000 bu.

Commission houses were fair buyers of oats on the breaks, and with buying of May here against sales at Winnipeg the market failed to reflect the extreme weakness which prevailed in corn. Outside interest, however, remains small. There was selling of December rye by spreaders at 44c difference, but the action of the market was largely a rejection of that in wheat.

To Spend $150,000,000 for New Oil Refineries

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey will spend about $150,000,000 in the next two years on one of the most ambitious refinery expansion programs in its history. Appropriations are understood to have been made.

New plants in foreign countries will consume a large part of the appropriation. One will be a complete refinery in England to cost $25,000,000, to be built by the Anglo-American Oil company. A similar outlay is planned at the mouth of the Magdalena river in Colombia. The company plans to enlarge the plant at Talara, Peru, and also the Montreal plant of the Imperial Oil company, Ltd. It is proposed to enlarge the itnerior plants in Canada as well.

The capacity of the Bay Town refinery on the Texas gulf coast will be enlarged by the Humble Oil and Refining company, which also plans to build in the new Panhandle field of Texas a plant which will have an initial capacity of 10,000 barrels daily.

Postal Receipts at 50 U. S. Cities Show 2.06% Gain

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—With only twenty-six business days in October, 1926, compared with twenty-seven for the same month last year, postal receipts at fifty industrial cities throughout the country for last month showed an increase of 2.06 per cent over those for the corresponding period in 1925, according to figures made public today by Postmaster General New.

The total receipts for the fifty cities amounted to $3,420,923.50 for October, 1926, as against $3,351,972.48 for October a year ago, an increase of $68,951.02 in last month's receipts over those for October, 1925.

Boise, Idaho, with an increase of 34.70 per cent, led all the cities in the percentage of increase. Reno, Nev., with 22.44 per rent increase, was second, while Springfield, Ill., with an increase of 15.66 per cent, ranked third.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A disposition to await developments in the British coal strike situation was generally the reason given by seaboard exporters for the lack of export inquiry for cash wheat at the seaboard. No sales of consequence were reported during the day, business being confined to a few scattered loads.

Chicago handlers sold 3,000 bu wheat; 61,000 bu corn; 24,000 bu oats, and 8,000 bu barley to the domestic trade. Charters were for 1,000,000 bu corn at 4¼@4¾c for winter storage at eastern ports, and for 75,000 bu corn at 10c to Montreal.

Spot wheat premiums here were unchanged with No. 2 red December to ½c over and No. 3 red 1¼@3c under with No. 2 hard 3@3c over and No. 3 hard December to 3c under. Basis in outside winter wheat markets was little changed with springs at Minneapolis unchanged to 1c higher.

Offerings of cash corn were liberal and the basis 1@3c lower with No. 2 grades, ¾c under to 1¼c over the future; No. 3 grades, December to 2c under, and No. 4 grades, 3@7c under. Outside markets were ½@1½c lower.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 44 cars; corn, 471 cars; oats, 85 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 17 cars.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

It is difficult for the average trader to see any good on the buying side of grain on bulges, but prices are down to a level where a few of the most successful traders admitted at the close that it was not wise to press the bear side too strongly on breaks from now on, especially with corn down to the lowest of the season, although the situation was regarded as depressed.

An evening up of wheat trades between Chicago and Winnipeg was a feature as there has been a large open line of spreads between the two markets. Chicago closed lower, while Winnipeg made small gains. The traders are disposed to give special attention to Argentine crop and weather news as the main feature for the time being. Indications are for an early adjustment of the English coal strike, which should create a better supply of ocean tonnage and eventually a lowering of ocean rates, enabling North American exporters to do more business.

Speculators and grain receivers generally were unanimous in expressing the opinion that it would be best for country holders of corn to keep their grain on the farms and country elevators unless they are willing to accept lower prices. The movement is too large for the demand and elevator capacity here is being taxed to the limit. In an effort to relieve the latter, arrangements have been made to ship 1,000,000 bu of corn from Chicago to Georgian Bay and Buffalo ports for winter storage.

Mills grinding soft winter wheat in Pennsylvania and New Jersey are said to be doing a good business and under selling those in Ohio and Indiana by about 75c a barrel. They are getting wheat from farmers, as are also those in Ohio, who have advanced their basis as compared with the price of December wheat around 4c a bushel of late. A cash wheat handler who has been over the territory estimates that not more than 65 per cent of the intended winter wheat acreage has been seeded and the season is so well advanced that he believes that little showing will be on hereafter, so that there will be a big shortage in acreage in the middle west.

A corn trader who has been active in the market for some time past discussing the corn situation says: "Hog cholera has been verified by extra heavy shipments of hogs to market. Cotton seed meal for cattle is cutting big inroads into corn feeding. New cash corn is too far under December to be able to maintain anywhere near this level of prices."

LARD PRICES DECLINE

Lard prices were on the down grade and closed around the inside, with the distant deliveries 7½ to 12½c lower. May leading. Near deliveries lost 7½ to 12½c, and are down to around the lowest of the season. Scattered liquidation was on, with the main support coming from shorts who are taking profits and awaiting an opportunity to put them out again, but bulges are limited. Liverpool lard was weak and 6d to 1s 3d lower. Exports from New York were 346,000 lbs, and bacon 187,500 lbs. There were deliveries on November contracts here of 1,000,000 lbs of lard and 50 000 lbs of short ribs. The latter closed 25c higher, while bellies were off 15c.

Hogs were 10c lower to around the lowest of the year, with receipts larger than a week ago, and smaller than last year. Estimated receipts at Chicago for Monday are 45,000, and for the week 180,000. Prices follow:

NEW YORKERS BID FOR SHIPS, LEVIATHAN, TOO

[Copyright: 1926: By The New York Times.]

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—A financial group headed by Gibbs Brothers, Inc., marine engineers of 1 Broadway, was reported today to have submitted a bid to the United States shipping board for the entire fleet now operated by the United States Lines and the American Merchants Lines. Bids for the ships will be opened Monday in Washington, D. C. Among the ships involved are the Leviathan, George Washington, Republic, President Harding, President Roosevelt, American Merchant, American Banker, and Shipper Farmer.

It is understood the Gibbs Brothers bid provides for a down payment of $200,000 for the ships and operation of the vessels until half the price is paid, with a division of profits with the government. It also is said to provide for the building of two new ships like the Leviathan by Gibbs Brothers.

BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS

The following bankruptcy petitions were filed yesterday in the federal court here

ARE PROMOTERS BORN OR MADE BY THE SCHOOLS?

BY HARPER LEECH.

A New Jersey public utilities information bureau puts out an informative summary of the spread of public utility management courses in the great universities. Pennsylvania, Harvard, Illinois, Iowa, Northwestern, Indiana, and Pittsburgh are among those offering such instruction. Extension classes are on the increase.

At the recent packers' convention in Chicago the reports of educational activities noted that last year 18 young men completed full university courses in meat packing and most of them immediately were signed up as minor executives.

Nobody need be told of the invaluable work of the Harvard business school in gathering the facts and interpreting their meaning for many lines of business. That work has opened a new era for the retailer who is willing to study. Every now and then there comes to this desk from Ohio State university a set of trade reviews which show how things really are going with the wholesaler and the jobber.

The worth of Prof. Ely's courses in utility and land economics is attested by the war being waged on his institute by groups chronically hostile to business.

However, in reading all the catalogs and prospectuses of the new business education, the unregenerate low-brow feels that there is a note missing—a lost chord, a missing link, or something.

The technical education of our engineering executives we have long had in abundance. In Sam Lewishon's book on the new industrial leadership some note is made of not unusual failings of the engineering viewpoint when it is confronted by a problem of human relations within an industry or in its public contacts.

As Mr. Lewishon is himself a leading enterpriser as well as a financier, his criticisms cannot be dismissed as amateurish.

The new industrial education certainly is going to produce a lot of able young men whose apprenticeship period in actual business will be shortened just as schools of journalism lessen the probationary period of reporters, but what about promoters? Nobody apparently is teaching men how to start new enterprises. It is all very well to have accomplished executives of established businesses, but if our industrial system is to grow, we must have new industries.

Can promoters be made, or must they be born? Some psychologists insist that society must depend yet for its main progress on the accidental and sporadic genius. That view may be found in "The Nature of the World and the Nature of Man," the fine volume of authentic popular science recently issued by the University of Chicago—a most valuable antidote, by the way, to the present epidemic of pseudo-science, which, according to some book salesmen, has produced a new kind of literary addict.

This writer has a hunch that promoters can be trained. The number of politicians and newspaper men who have come into important industrial executive positions by the side door of mastering human relations suggests it. The old time railroad promoter was a politician par excellence.

The growing importance of the merchandising side of all industry calls for a sort of talent which has often been prominent in the mental makeup of successful promoters.

STOCKS SEESAW AS WEEK ENDS; NEWS IS MIXED

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Price movement in today's stock market lacked uniformity, with opposing speculative forces still struggling for control. Trading was almost entirely professional in character. Despite the efforts of bull pools to attract a following by bidding up special stocks and the attempts of bears to force general liquidation by attacking motors and supposedly vulnerable specialties.

Two overnight developments, particularly encouraging to bullish forces, were the announcement that President Coolidge favored a rebate on 1925 income taxes and the publication of a compilation of railroad earnings for the first nine months, indicating that class 1 carriers would break all records for both gross and net this year.

Steel Strong, Motors Weak.

Offsetting these were the surprisingly small reduction in stock exchange member loans last month and the drop of 5 per cent in October bank clearings, compared with the samp month last year.

United States Steel common received strong buying support in anticipation of an unusually favorable tonnage report next Wednesday, closing fractionally higher at 144¼. On the other hand, General Motors, which has frequently shared market leadership with Steel, was hammered down over 2 points to around 150 because of the uncertainty regarding dividend action at the next Thursday's meeting.

The brisk demand for coppers reflected the improved statistical position of the industry and the prospect of higher dividends by a few companies before the end of the year. Kennecott. Greene Cananea, Nevada, and Ray touched new high levels for the year.

Several Specialties Advance.

Several specialties also were under accumulation on reports of special developments. Vick Chemical was bid up over 1 points on reported negotiations for its acquisition by one of the largest household remedy companies. Warner Pictures A spurted from 47½ to 51¾ at the expense of an overcrowded short interest. Substantial gains also were recorded by American Safety Razor, Federal Mining and Smelting common and preferred, Foundation company, Great Northern ore certificates, and Woolworth.

Speculative enthusiasm for the rails was dampened somewhat by unconfirmed reports of another change in Nickel Plate merger plans involving the substitution of the Chesapeake and Ohio for the Nickel Plate as the parent company. Van Sweringen issues lost ground on the report. Good gains were recorded by Atchison, Wabash, and Chicago and Northwestern.

Curb and Bond Markets Firm.

On the curb exchange there was continued strength in most favored issues at the start and new high figures were again reported in Estey Welte and American Seating. St. Regis Paper moved to a new high for the movement. Glen Alden rose 6 points to 185, another new high. In the public utility division American Gas preferred scored an early gain of 1¾ points, while others were irregular. Moderate advances resulted in some of the more prominent oil shares.

The bond market closed the week with prices holding not far from the highest levels of the year. Trading was unusually active for the two hour session and advancing tendencies were maintained in nearly all sections of the list. French and Belgian obligations demonstrated their ability to resist selling pressure, although a rather general disposition to take profits was evident. These sales, particularly in the case of the Belgian 6s and 7s and the French 7s, were easily absorbed and several of the French municipals and rails scored fractional gains.

Foreign Exchange Rates Variable.

In the foreign exchange market demand sterling improved moderately by advancing to $4.84⅝ and French francs were firm around 3.30 cents. Italian lire sold off about 5 points to just below 4¼ cents, and Norwegian krone dropped 10 points to 24.92 cents. Japanese yen touched 49 3-16 cents, the highest rate since the earthquake in 1923.

The weekly New York clearing house statement showed excess reserve of $12,696,210, a dcrease of $5,060,030 below the week before. Aggregate reserve totaled $193,705,000. The detailed statement of actual condition this day showed mixed changes. Loans, discounts, and investments dropped $38,299,000; reserve in the federal reserve bank of member banks, $15,625,000, and net demand deposits, $75,642,000. Cash in own vaults increased $745,000, and time deposits, $16,840,000.

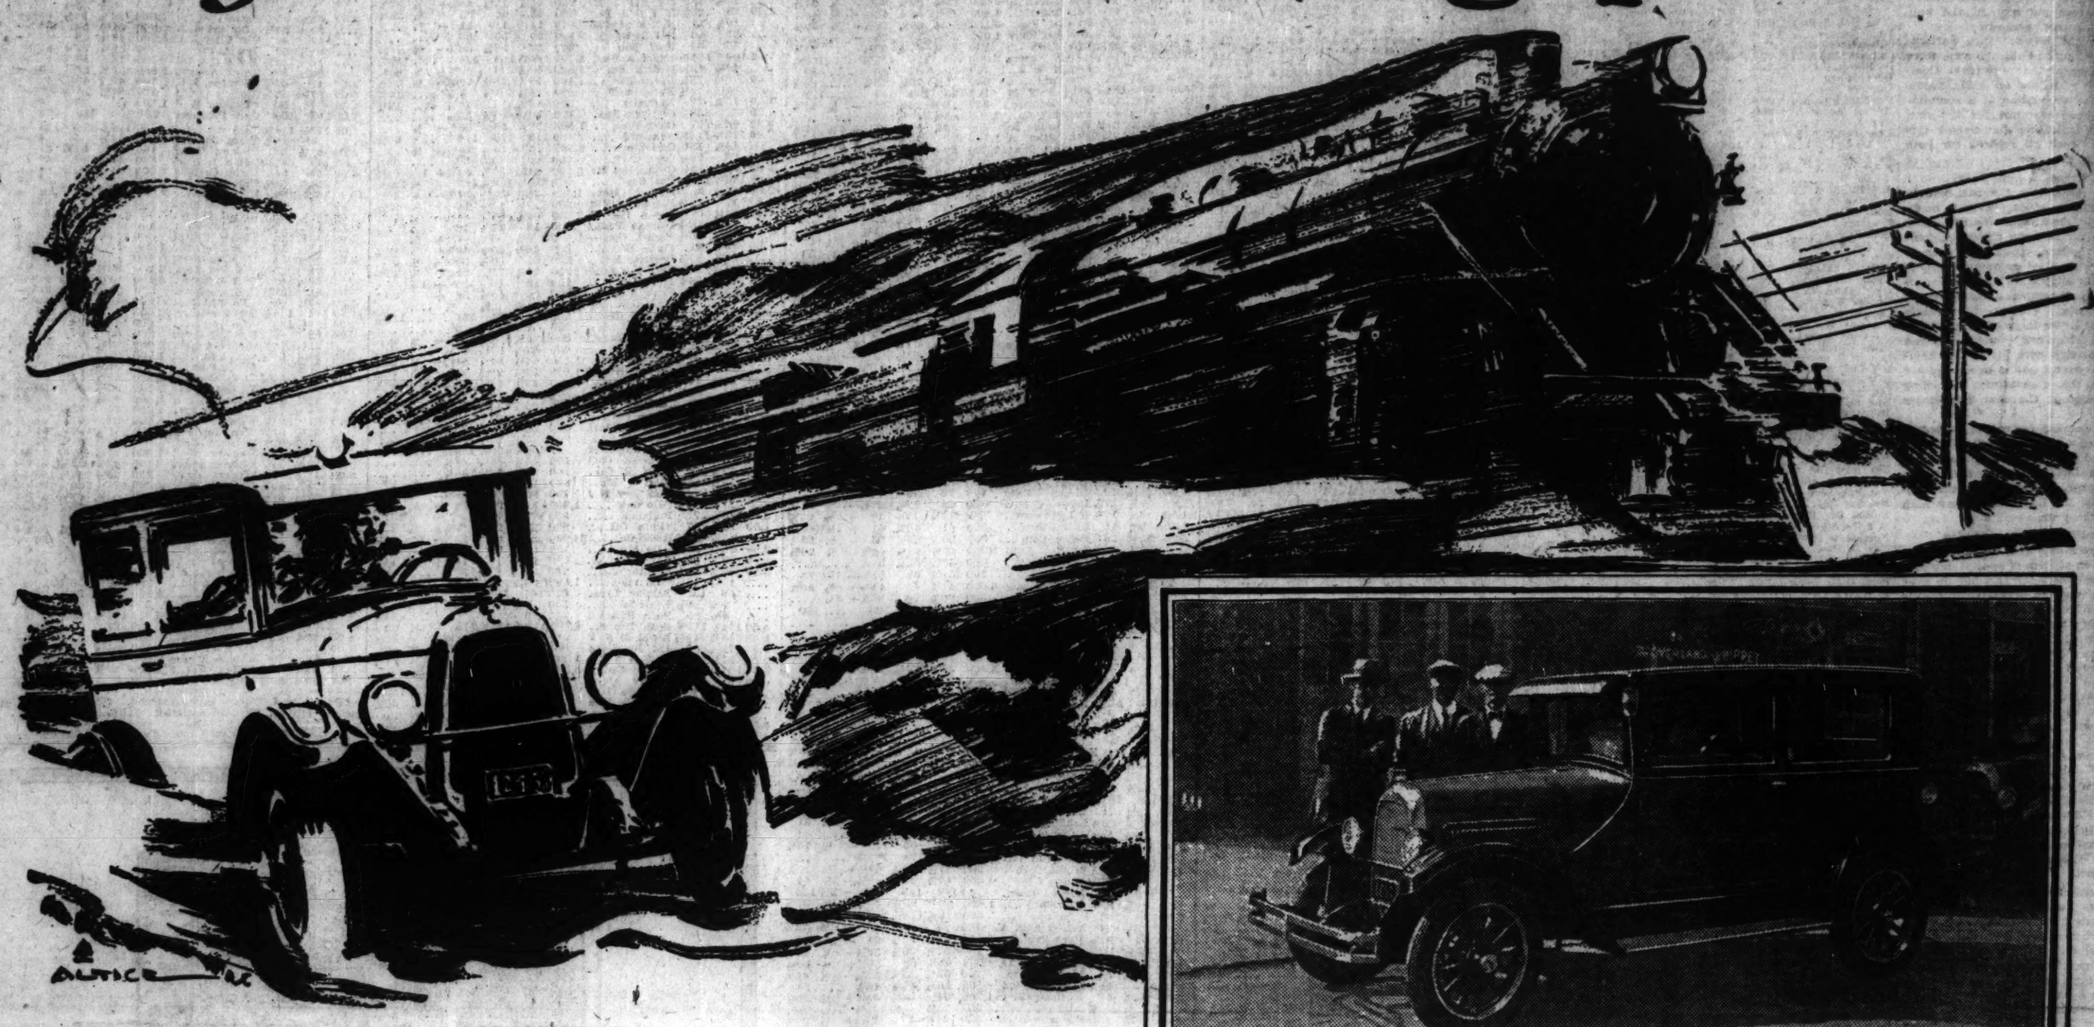
Whippet Wins!

over fast mail train in long speed run



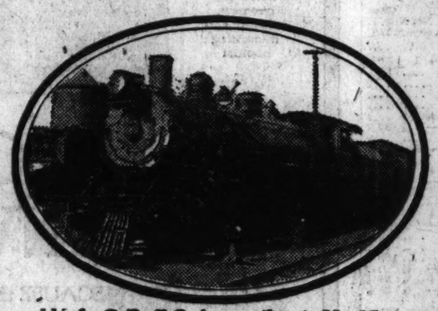
... performed perfectly throughout the gruelling test

Leaves with Fast Mail at Galesburg—Puts mail on train at Burlington—completing the 47½-mile run in 52 minutes . . .

ONE more laurel is added to Whippet's amply filled crown of records. Such speed and endurance have never been expected before in a small car.

The new European-type Whippet is small only in size and upkeep—in all other features and details it is a large car.

The speed run between Galesburg and Burlington proves Whippet's ability to travel at high speed and sustain that speed for miles and miles.



... the C. B. & Q. fast mail train No. 15

At 12:14 in the morning, the C. B. & Q. fast mail train No. 15 and a stock Overland Whippet left Galesburg, Illinois. 52 minutes later the Whippet pulled into Burlington, Iowa, just ahead of the fast mail and in time to mail a letter on the train.

The 47½ miles included rough roads and a detour, making the trip 3 miles farther by road than by rail.

In spite of obstacles the Whippet kept its speed above 45 miles per hour and in many stretches attained a speed of 65 miles per hour.

The average speed for the trip was 54.7 miles per hour. The Whippet performed perfectly throughout the gruelling test. There were no signs of overheating—when the car pulled up in Burlington the engine was cool enough to place the hand on the radiator without feeling discomfort. At the end of the speed run the car was placed in an economy test with 107 Whippet contestants. Its performance in this economy run was an average of 47.2 miles per gallon of gas.

It took three years to build

For over three years, Willys-Overland engineers in Europe and America have been developing the Whippet. Over 360,000 miles of road tests proved the practical advantages of this car before it was released for production.

You can drive the Whippet as fast as you like with the utmost ease of control . . . for no light car ever hugged the road like this before.

In traffic it gets away with lightning pickup . . . stop-watch tests show that it accelerates up to 40 miles an hour, 18% faster than other light four-cylinder cars.

. . . new principles

The new standards of design in the Overland Whippet are bound to change your whole idea of light car mechanical features.

Its engine actually develops more horsepower per cubic inch of piston displacement and pound of car weight than any other light-4-cylinder engine.

The 4-wheel brakes of the Whippet are 11 inches in diameter, of the mechanical internal type. They provide 192 square inches of braking surface—far more per pound of car weight than any other American light car built today.

. . . now reduced prices

With sweeping reduction in prices of the Overland Whippet, sales are increasing daily. You owe it to yourself to see this remarkable new-type car.

Whippet Touring $645; Coupe $685; Sedan $695, f. o. b. factory. Prices and specifications are subject to change without notice. The new Willys Finance Plan offers unusually attractive credit terms.

NOVEMBER 7, 1926.

Plan $200,000,000 "Streeterville" Project for Hyde Park

BIG AMUSEMENT CENTER TO RISE ON IVORY COAST

Project Will Cost $2,900,000.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Here's announcing one of the most ambitious amusement and shop developments to be put under way in the city for some time. And what gives it more than unusual interest is the fact that it's for Chicago's Darktown which, in view of other projects, ought soon to rival New York's Harlem for gayety.

The business today concerns a structure to contain, a 3,500 seat movie, a dance hall with a capacity of 4,500 steppers, an arcade about a block long, fifty shops and 100 offices. It will be located at the southeast corner of South Park way, formerly Grand boulevard, and 47th street, four blocks east of another huge movie for colored people which will be located at the northwest corner of 47th and Michigan.

It is stated that the building alone will cost $2,500,000 while the site cost $400,000, making practically a $3,000,000 affair, a tidy sum even for the haughty folk of the gold coast.

Spanish and Moorish Design.

The development is to be known as the South Center Amusement and Business enterprise. The site it will occupy measures 500 feet on South Park way and 300 feet on 47th street.

The design of the structure is to be Spanish and Moorish, both on the exterior and the interior, and the arcade is planned to resemble a street in some Moorish city. The architects are Alexander Levy and William J. Klein, who designed the Granada and Diversey theaters on the north side.

The main entrance to the theater will be on South Park way, with minor ones on 47th street and off the arcade. The auditorium will have a main floor, mezzanine balcony, and thirty loges. The stage is to have a width of sixty feet, with a depth of thirty-two, making possible the most elaborate productions.

100 Orchestra Players.

The orchestra pit will be able to seat 100, and if 100 dusky players are ten times as good as the usual colored orchestra of ten then the music coming out of that pit ought to be able to make a statue step the Black Bottom. The ceiling over the auditorium is designed to resemble a tent.

The seats will be arranged so that there will be clear vision for all, with no pillars obstructing the view of the stage. And of course there will be one of the most "magnificent organs" in the world. The main entrance will open on a foyer rising fifty feet to the roof and having space for 1,500 people. At one end of the foyer there will be a grand staircase of imported marble.

The entrance to the ballroom will be on South Park way. The dance floor will be oval in shape and will have an area of 30,000 square feet. The design will be Moorish and Spanish in conformity with the theater. Parlors and refreshment rooms will adjoin the ballroom.

An Elaborate Arcade.

The arcade running through the structure will have entrances on South Park way and 47th street and will contain approximately 60,000 square feet. The street sides of the building will be lined with stores, some of which will also have entrances on the arcade. There will be stores selling every kind of ware as well as a number of markets.

The building will be three stories in height, with the upper floors reserved for some 100 offices for professional men. The basement will house billiard parlors, and bowling rooms will have provision for other sports, which may or may not include African golf.

Wreckers are now at work clearing the site and when they have finished their task the foundation will be put in. The building will be of steel and concrete construction, with a facing of terra cotta of various colors.

The South Center project is being backed by a syndicate headed by Harry M. and Louis Englestein, south side real estate developers, and Louis Kahn, formerly connected with Becker, Ryan & Co.

This project was originally announced Aug. 29.

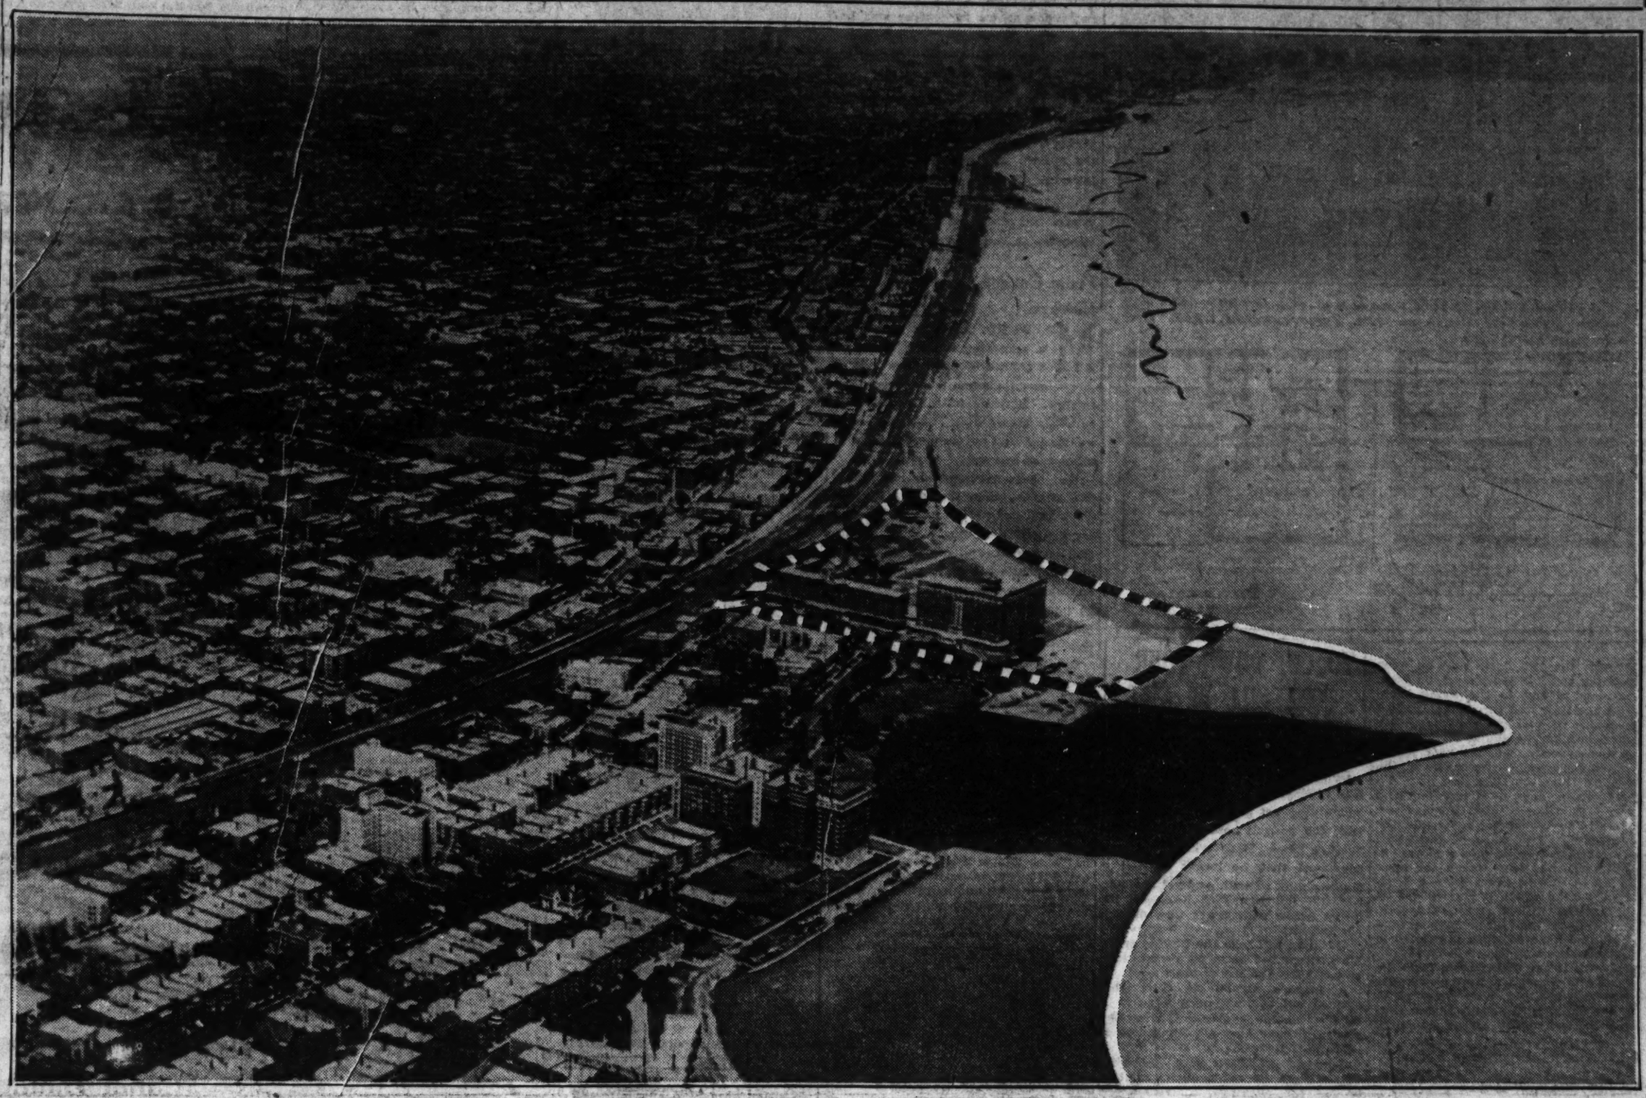
HALSEY PORONTO MADE TRUSTEE OF FACTORY AREA

Halsey E. Poronto has been made a trustee of the Central Manufacturing District to fill the place made vacant by the death of John A. Spoor. Mr. Poronto came to Chicago in 1899 and for the last eighteen years has been industrial agent for the district. He has been actively in charge of the development and operations of the district during that period. During that time 300 industries have located there. The investment of the trustees in land and buildings is said to be in excess of $20,000,000.

EDWARD A. DATO BUYS 17 ACRE TRACT IN NILES

Edward A. Dato of the firm of Krenn & Dato, Inc., has purchased a seventeen acre tract near Howard and Cicero avenues in Niles Township from Heinrich Schafges. The purchase price was not given but the property is subject to a trust deed of $112,500. Krenn & Dato will subdivide the tract.

AIRPLANE VIEW OF BIG SOUTH SIDE DEVELOPMENT SITE



Here's an airplane view of the south side lake front, with Hyde Park's proposed "Streeterville" district indicated above by a white dotted line. The view, of course, is looking north, with the smoky downtown district so hazy it'll probably not be visible at all in the above reproduction. Details of this $200,000,000 project are given in the adjoining column. The above photograph is by the Chicago Aerial Survey company.

On Chicago Beach Hotel Land.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

One of Chicago's most impressive real estate projects, the development of a $200,000,000 "Streeterville" on the south side, in the Hyde Park district, was announced last night by Ronald F. Brunswick and John E. O'Connell of Bunswick, O'Connell & Co., investment bankers, who control the Chicago Beach hotel and the Chicago Beach properties.

Plans call for the intensive development of the 25½ acres of land now owned and occupied in part by the Chicago Beach hotel, into one of the most attractive and strategically located apartment and hotel districts in the world.

Hotel Expansion Plan Changed.

This means that instead of the erection of another enormous addition to the Chicago Beach hotel on the site of the original old structure, as originally planned, the present new section is to remain as the main hotel building and the balance of the hotel grounds, with the exception of four acres, is to be converted into a second "Streeterville."

The four acres mentioned will continue to be devoted to the hotel tennis courts, open air swimming pools, etc.

The remaining 21½ acres are to be crossed by two new wide north and south thoroughfares, linking Cornell avenue and Hyde Park boulevard with the new shore boulevard and an east and west drive. This will cut the proposed Hyde Park "Streeterville" into eight irregularly shaped blocks.

Two Miles of Skyscrapers.

Tentative plans call for approximately a mile of streets, or two miles of frontage. On this frontage it is expected that one of the most imposing architectural developments in the world will take place.

Chicago's original "Streeterville" is still somewhat of an architectural puzzle. A twenty-four story modern apartment towers side by side with a three story old fashioned flat building. Set backs are practically unknown in Cap Streeter's famous "Deestrict." For some reason this modern architectural feature, although probably needed more in Streeterville, with its narrow streets and tall buildings, than in any other part of the city, has been overlooked.

Everything New.

The new south side "Streeterville" will start with its first tall building of a 1927 design. That means that it'll undoubtedly not be a square packing case with a varied assortment of penthouses on the roof. It is understood that the development of the new district will be supervised architecturally so that it promises to be one of the most imposing and beautiful hotel and apartment districts of any great world city.

It is pointed out that although about five miles from downtown the new Illinois Central electric trains whisk one from Hyde Park boulevard to Van Buren quicker than one ordinarily can get from the original Streeterville to the loop.

When the inside lake shore boulevard, connecting Jackson and Grant parks, is completed, as it will be within two or three years, motorists will be able to whiz from the new "Streeterville" to the loop in probably the same time, or even less, that it takes to drive from the Drake to the downtown district. There'll probably be no "stop" signs between the Chicago Beach hotel and Monroe and Michigan.

Murray Wolbach in Charge.

Murray Wolbach is to have sole charge of the real estate development and Brunswick, O'Connell & Co., in connection with a powerful banking group, will finance all projects.

"This will be good news for the real estate brokers," said Mr. Brunswick, "for Mr. Wolbach enjoys a wide acquaintance with them and has announced that in negotiating deals he expects to do business only through the help of brokers. This means that, being the owners' representative, the procuring broker will not have to share brokerage fees with him."

Hub Leases Gary Store; 2d Branch

Henry C. Lytton & Sons, owners of the Hub, have leased from the Phillips Building corporation, the entire two story and basement building at the northwest corner of Broadway and Fifth avenue, Gary, Ind., where they will open their second branch store for the sale of men's merchandise.

George Lytton, vice president of the company, stated that his firm will take possession of the building on Dec. 1 when extensive alterations requiring several months for completion will be started. It is hoped to have the store open for business on March 1, 1927.

The lease is for fifteen years beginning Dec. 1, with a rental of $472,917 for the period. The building contains 46,875 square feet of selling space. The improvements include the installation of 250 feet of show windows, so the new store ought to rival its State street parent.

The Hub's other branch is located in the Orrington hotel in Evanston. The main store was founded in March, 1887, at the northwest corner of State and Jackson boulevard in a store measuring 60x100 feet on which a rental of $9,000 a year was paid.

Mark Levy & Bro. and Albert H. Wetten & Co. represented all parties in the Gary lease. K. L. Knapp of Knapp & Campbell represented the Phillips Building corporation and Harry M. Wolf of Judah, Willard, Wolf & Reichman represented the Hub in the legal details.

REAL ESTATORS MAKE PLANS FOR ANNUAL BANQUET

Arrangements are being completed for the annual banquet of the Cook County Real Estate board, according to President J. F. Hecht. The banquet will be held on Dec. 2. The speakers and the detailed program will be announced later. Mr. Hecht states that one of the drawing cards for the speakers' table will be a man who is to cut a big figure in Washington during the coming winter, but he is not yet able to give the name. The banquet committee consists of William D. Rogers, chairman, C. T. A. Anderson, Robert E. L. Brooks, John P. Carney, Richard W. Wolfe, Jesse T. Wilson, and Paul Schwarzkopf.

MAKING LIFE MORE PLEASANT FOR COLORED FOLK

The above pictured building illustrates one of the most ambitious amusement projects for the city. It will stand at the southeast corner of South Park way and 47th street, in the city's colored section. The structure will house a 3,500 seat theater, a ball room with a capacity of 4,500, a large arcade, fifty stores and 100 offices. It was designed by Alexander Levy and William J. Klein. A syndicate headed by Harry M. and Louis Englestein and Louis Kahn are behind the project on which work has started.

Violet Ray Window Panes for Ambassador Twin Hotel

Further details regarding the annex to the Ambassador hotel, the first story concerning which appeared in THE TRIBUNE on Oct. 1, reveal that there will be a number of interesting features. These include gay colored bedrooms, a house on the roof, and the use of a window glass which will permit the residents to get the benefit of the well known health giving ultra violet rays given away free by the sun.

The structure will be located at the northeast corner of State and Goethe streets, opposite the original Ambassador, with which it will be connected by tunnel. It's to be called the Hotel Ambassador East.

With its fellow hotel, the Ambassador East will be owned and operated by the Hotel Sherman company. The Hotel Sherman company yesterday took title to the site from the 1301 North State Building corporation, which had proposed erecting an apartment building there.

Robert S. De Golyer & Co. are the architects. The design of the structure, which is to be fifteen stories high, will be Georgian, with exterior details reminiscent of a London town house.

The Ambassador East is to be a residential hotel, so its furnishings will be the last word in elegance. In this case English antiques or the reproduction of antiques will provide the dominant feature. The design for the dining room, lobby, and lounge has been taken from the American wing of the Metropolitan museum at New York.

Lawrence Stern & Co. have underwritten a bond issue of $1,500,000 on the project.

LUMBER CONCERN INSTALLS FLAT TO SHOW WARES

Something new in the way of lumber yard development is announced by John Brennan & Co., with offices and yard at 59th and Ogden avenues, in that sprightly little suburb known as Cicero. The firm has just erected a showroom and office building which will contain a completely furnished apartment. The apartment is for the purpose of showing materials sold by the firm to the best advantage. And, further, the building was designed with the idea of presenting an attractive bit of architecture to travelers along Ogden avenue. The architect was Thomas M. Filas.

EVAN EVANS NOW ASSOCIATED WITH CLEVELAND FIRM

Evan Evans, who retired recently from the Hegeman-Harris company, of which he was vice president, and is now vice president of the Lundoff-Bicknell company of Cleveland, O. He will maintain headquarters in Chicago, as the Lundoff - Bicknell company will shortly occupy offices in the new Lake - Michigan building, now nearing completion. Mr. Evans is about to build a country home in the Barrington Hills Country club district. He has been president of the Ohio Building Safety Vault company for eighteen years.

The Evanshire hotel, it is reported, is to have a ten story addition, to cost $1,000,000, designed by John Nyden.

Oversea Firms to Have Shops on Boul Mich

Two foreign firms yesterday signed leases for shops in the new "900 Michigan Avenue North" building, now nearing completion.

Lewis & Simmons, art dealers, with shops in London, Paris, and New York, have leased the store at No. 908 for ten years.

Nachemsohn of London, Stockholm, and Copenhagen, dealer in antiques and works of art, will open his first American store at No. 910. This is a Danish concern. Ross & Browne negotiated both leases.

With the demolition of the wooden pedestrian canopy the unusual first floor treatment of the building by Jarvis Hunt is disclosed. It's of red onyx, with bronze trim.

FRIDSTEIN & CO. ENLARGES FIRM; GOTTSCHALK RETIRES

Meyer Fridstein, for eight years secretary of the G. H. Gottschalk company, builders, has severed his connection with that firm and announces the reorganization of his own corporation, Fridstein & Co.

The new organization has discontinued the plan making department and will specialize in the building and financing of large commercial projects.

G. H. Gottschalk has retired from active business. He will continue to maintain a private office in the same suite he has occupied for years in the Conway building, and will look after his private interests.

Mr. Fridstein has been identified with a large number of big building projects, among them being the Shoreland, Belden-Stratford, Webster, and Parkway hotels and several theaters.

A. L. Fridstein and H. G. Coutts are vice presidents of the new firm and D. M. Finder is secretary.

Bowes & Co. the purchaser.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

COMMON BRICK PLEASING TO EYE IN THIS HOUSE

Spanish Colonial Design; Cost About $12,500.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

A house like this can be counted on to stay "in style," for its design, Spanish colonial, is worked out with maximum of simplicity and at the same time it achieves an individuality which is usually attained at a much higher price.

LOUISE BARGELT.

Its six rooms and two baths, with inclosed sun porch and full basement, cost approximately $12,500 to build.

It is located in Hinsdale. The owners are Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Maxwell, and the architects, Dyer & Nadherney, 1547 First National Bank building, Chicago.

There are a number of definite features which must be reckoned into the selection of a house site and into the construction of the house if the home is to possess those attributes of permanence and effectiveness so necessary to the satisfaction of the owners.

It is obvious enough that a house should be built in a community which gives every evidence of improvement and where the transportation to the owner's business is sufficiently easy of access that the task of getting to and from work is not too burdensome. Yet often one finds some one who has built in a community which has come to a "dead stop," where improvements, started flourishingly, have ceased. Or, again, the house is too far from the station, so half the joy of life is taken out of it by long hikes in inclement weather.

Sufficient Ground.

If possible the area of ground should be three times that of the house. This is not a necessity, but it adds to the attractiveness of the place and to the rental or resale value.

Nor should the cost of the house exceed a due proportionateness to the cost of the lot. For instance, if a man is building a $6,000 house his lot ought not to cost him more than $1,200 or $1,500. Or if he is putting up a $10,000 residence the lot ought not to cost more than between $3,000 and $4,000.

These figures, while merely approximate, convey the idea that a too expensive house on a cheap lot is not sensible. It is hard to sell, and, furthermore, if the lot is an inexpensive one the chances are that the average grade of the houses built in the immediate neighborhood will be inexpensive also.

Good planning by a competent architect, with all the modern conveniences one can afford, is the best policy. The house will stay up to date longer, and prove satisfying. Good materials in the construction, a full basement, adequate heating and insulation; all these are necessities. If one is not building but buying a house already built, some competent architect or builder should be called into consultation, some one capable of rating the house and its essential features.

Common Brick Walls.

This home shown today ranks high as far as all these essentials are concerned.

The main walls are of twelve inch common brick, laid up in uncolored mortar in a skintled effect, and there is thorough insulation, with full basement under the entire house.

The common brick on the exterior facing has been set roughly in the wall at different angles, projected and recessed beyond the wall line with mortar squeezed out and allowed to remain in place. This has resulted in a strong, striking and rustic effect. The brick was laid up in common bond, with one full header bonding courses to five courses of stretchers. The openings are arranged with rowlock arched heads and sills of red face brick.

The front and south sides of the house have been terraced and at the front entrance there is a raised brick platform with brick steps leading to it finished off with a stone coping. The door is arched and over the entrance a simple wrought iron fixture is placed.

One enters through a vestibule to the stair hall which has a high ceiling through the two floors and an open stairway continues to the second floor.

Access is had to the living room from the stair hall through an arched opening. On one end there is a fireplace, treated in a simple manner, and on the opposite end the wall has a built-in bookcase on each side of the opening from the stair hall.

The living room is 20 feet long and 13½ feet wide. Cased openings are provided to the dining room and the sun porch. Two walls of the porch are arranged with glass doors to swing out, and also screen for open air effect. These doors have a semicircular head which is carried out on the exterior with a series of arches. The walls of the porch have a sand finish and the woodwork is painted in bright colors.

Service to the dining room from the kitchen is through a pantry equipped with wall cabinets, a set of drawers at the sink and a dropleaf table with spice cabinet above placed adjoining the sink and range.

Second Floor Master Chamber.

The second floor is laid out with a master chamber with a connecting bath. Off the hall there is a maid's chamber or guest room and another bathroom. A great deal of attention has been directed to the numerous closets and linen cases, resulting in considerable storage for a home of this size.

In the living room cornice molds have been provided at the window heads of special design to receive the curtain rods and draperies.

Heating is by means of a hot air system operated by a fuel oil burner.

The lighting fixtures throughout the house are of selected design which add to the individual character of the interior furnishing and decorating. Especially the crystal fixtures in the dining room, which consist of a ceiling fixture and two wall brackets, placed on each side of the buffet.

$28 PER CAPITA SPENT ON HOMES IN SIX MONTHS

Twenty-eight dollars per capita was spent for homes during the first six months of 1926, says the homes division of the Indiana Limestone company.

"More than 200,000 houses were built in seventy-eight cities of more than 100,000 population surveyed by the department of labor," it is stated. "It is estimated that this volume of construction would house in new dwellings close to sixty-six families out of each 10,000 of population.

"Greatest activity in home building was recorded in Los Angeles where 177.9 families out of each 10,000 population are in new houses. This is considerably above the average for the rest of the United States. San Diego followed with a ratio of 157.1. Yonkers, N. Y., showed 144.8; Houston, 125.1; Detroit, 116.9; New York City, 114.7; Dallas, 108.4; Portland, Ore., 102.7, and Oakland, Cal., 101.2.

TO CUT DOWN YOUR COAL BILL BE KIND TO HEATING PLANT

Cutting down the coal bills is a problem which arises every fall and one which does not grow any less serious with the present cost of heating the average home. Many a home owner is convinced that he hasn't wasted a single chunk of coal, and yet a neighbor will tell him that he heats his larger house with fewer tons of coal per annum.

If a man will take the time to study his furnace and learn its peculiarities he won't have to buy so much coal.

A furnace should be thoroughly cleaned out at least once a year. A plumber should overhaul the heating plant, to make sure air circulation is not obstructed.

Sufficient radiation is a necessity; for, if there are not enough radiators or hot air openings, a tremendous amount of coal can be consumed and the house is improperly heated, after all. With a hot air furnace the cold air intake must also be the correct size.

Banking the fire at night—and doing it successfully—saves a good many dollars on a coal bill at the end of the year. Some people use a special small coal for banking purposes. Others combine the regular coal with ashes, throwing the coal on first and then covering it lightly with a bed of ashes, which can be shaken down in the morning.

Don't wait until your house gets cold before you start firing up. Stale air never heats well, and better results will be obtained if once a day at least the house is well aired.

Keep the air moist; for hot, dry air, besides being extremely unhealthful, is a bad conductor of heat.

TO CLEAN STUCCO RESIDENCE, USE WATER AND ACID

A stucco house does not need to be painted but every so often it requires a vigorous cleaning.

For stains which sometimes are found below the windows, diluted sulphuric acid can be applied. The stucco must first be scrubbed well and then rinsed thoroughly.

To clean stucco a strong flow of water through a hose with the nozzle set to throw a small stream will be found effective. Begin at the top of the wall under the roof and work down. Naturally the closer you can get to the stucco surface the more satisfactory will be the result.

Letters Tell How Homes Are Financed

Experiences of home owners, told in their own fashion, will do much to encourage others to achieve this important independence. To encourage prospective home builders The Tribune will print such experiences—letters telling how the home was financed, how the initial payment was gathered, how the mortgage were paid off, how the upkeep was managed. For each letter printed The Tribune will pay $10. Letters should not exceed 500 words. Address them to Small Homes Department, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

From Garage to English Cottage.

MAYWOOD, Ill.—Our experience in acquiring a home began on a capital of $200. The tide of circumstances had reduced us to that. A trunk full of clothes was our only asset, when, five years ago, we decided that we simply had to have a home of our own.

We chose a backwoods site, forty-five minutes from the white lights—price $635, ten per cent down. It was country, sure enough, but transportation was good, and cheap. We were on a concrete highway, electric lights and phone were available, water could be pumped on the spot, the site was high and dry, the city was moving our way.

The local lumber dealer proved that he liked our "gumption" by furnishing us material for a 12x18 garage home on an installment basis of $50 down and monthly payments.

The garage was an object of pride when completed by the work of our hands. It was strong, neat, and weather-tight, and the inside was as cozy and cheerful as ingenuity, assisted by bright paint and gay calico, could make it. With winter the larkish aspect of our adventure began to wane. There were hardships and sacrifices. But we tided it over on the bark of our dreams and buried our loneliness in books of plans.

In the spring the cement block foundation of our new home began to rise, block on block, and from then on grew, by slow degrees, into a charming little colonial cottage, white, with green blinds and window boxes. It was a picture book house. And the cost of everything, including the land, did not exceed $2,000. At the end of the second year $800 remained of this. We took out a mortgage for this amount and paid off the bills.

At the end of the fourth year we tacked a "For Sale" sign on Petunia cottage and sold it on the spot for $6,500. With the $1,500 down payment we bought another site farther out, built another artistic, small five room cottage, and sold it at the end of the year for $6,000.

We sold these two contracts at a discount, for cash, and now we are poring over plans again. This time it is to be a $15,000 English cottage, erected for us by a reliable contractor.

L. B. S.

No More Rent to Pay.

CHICAGO.—We lived in a rented flat for ten years, always with the expectation of some day having our own home, but we both lacked courage, thinking we had to have a big sum to start with, and working for a salary and raising a family, it was impossible to put much away for a home.

Finally our landlord wanted our flat for himself, which gave us our opportunity. We thought it useless to look for another flat, as so many places refuse children.

We found a real estate man who accepted $1,000 down on a new five room modern bungalow, worth $7,000, at $50 per month, including all interest. We thought it about as much as we could gradually pay. It was a new neighborhood, the streets were not paved. But now, after living here two years, the streets have been paved and we have already paid two installments and put up a two car garage, getting a little income from that.

We have had no trouble meeting the special assessments that come in and the year's taxes, because the monthly payments have been less than we would have been paying on an inferior place. Of course, it means sacrifice and hard work, but we have the satisfaction of gradually making ourselves independent, and I think the first step to real independence means home ownership.

A great many things that seem difficult can be done through perseverance. Dad is a handy man and does not have to hire anything done, but is always improving and making home the most attractive place on earth. We have a large yard with plenty of trees and flowers and lawn where the children and their playmates can play and have greater freedom and peace than could be secured in a flat.

Buying a home is not nearly the problem we thought it was, and we are only sorry now that we did not start sooner. We see the main thing is not to obligate yourself for more than you can afford to pay. Our home has increased in value, owing to the improved neighborhood and school nearby, so we feel we are starting on the road to prosperity and independence.

CONCEALED BEDS ADD EFFICIENCY TO SMALL HOUSE

With Less Rooms Building Cost Is Reduced.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Any feature today which can honestly be said to contribute to space saving and extra room efficiency in the home is worthy of consideration.

The problem of economy in building construction is a vital one. Every foot of space in the house runs into many dollars and every home owner naturally wants to get the maximum of service out of every room, to make that room cater to as many family needs as possible, and even on occasions to play a dual rôle.

The many types of built-in furniture available to the home owner at moderate cost serve three distinct purposes. They are decorative in the first place, because, regarded as a part of the whole, they have a consequent architectural relation to the room.

They are economical from a durability standpoint, since they are permanent and cannot be dragged around by indifferent hands. With care they should last as long as the house itself.

Economy Is Asset.

But their greatest asset from the standpoint of the small home owner is their space saving qualities. They adhere to their place as a part of the wall and consequently definitely increase the floor space.

Built-in furniture for the living room includes bookcases, window seats, and mantels; for the dining room, china cases and corner cases; for the kitchen, wall case ironing boards, work tables, broom closets, combination kitchen cabinets, and refrigeration; for the bathroom, medicine cases in a wide range of types and sizes.

It is in the bedroom, however, that the space contributing features of built-in furniture are beginning to be most keenly realized. Dressing tables and beds occupy so much space that often in the small bungalow bedroom there is no space left for anything but sleeping and dressing, and this under difficulty.

For Small Home Owner.

Furthermore, in a small home a bedroom often has to be utilized for sewing purposes, nursery accommodation, and extra guest provision.

Naturally, it is the small home owner, the man and woman who have a four or five or six room house, to whom this need of thoughtful space economy is most vital. In the larger home, extra bedrooms are included as a matter of course, their cost no matter of consideration.

Not so in the small house. An extra bedroom over and above the actual needs of the family is a luxury costing from $1,200 to $1,500, with $200 in addition to furnish. Nor does this initial cost include the expense of lighting, and heating, and the effort of cleaning over a ten year period of time.

It is here that the built-in bed, or the closet bed, installed when the house is built, or added at a later time, is coming to be appreciated for the simple way in which it offers extra room accommodation at a moderate price. Through its service, a woman can convert her five room home into sleeping accommodations equal to the six or even the seven room house.

Used in West.

These built-in beds are already being considerably used in the bungalow home throughout the west. They have been used for a long time through the entire country in hotels, apartments and apartment hotels.

It is obvious that any space saving device, so much an asset in the small apartment, would be equally an asset in the small home. Space is quite as valuable to the housewife for her comfort and convenience as to the apartment owner for the increased rental values it gives him. And where it saves space for the hotel apartment dweller, it saves space also for the home owner with small children and their many needs to accommodate.

Assuming that the average bedroom costs $1,200, with furnishings bringing it up to $1,500; then if this room can also be utilized for a sewing room in the daytime, a guest room in emergencies, or a playroom and nursery for the children during their play hours, then none of this investment is lost.

Gives Needed Space.

A bedroom in a small house, after the large double bed is placed in it, or two sizeable small twin beds, has little space left for anything except sleeping. Take an average family of four, two adults and two children. It is needless to say that every inch of floor overall is quite as valuable to the housewife as to the apartment dweller, and she could use to advantage that space employed by the beds in the daytime.

One built-in bed, completely concealed in the daytime, would give much extra needed space to the master bedroom, so that all hours of the day as well as of the night, it could be used for different family purposes.

Two built-in beds in the second room would make it large enough for a play room for the children, if they were young, or a study room for the son or daughter if older. Or if there was only one child, they would provide extra sleeping space for the occasional guest.

Sometimes where there is a sleeping porch or a sun porch opening off from a bedroom, a concealed bed can be placed in the wall between the two, so that it can open either in the bedroom or on the porch.

When a house is under process of construction one or two of these beds can be installed through the advice of the architect or the builder at a very moderate cost. Improvements in them have been many in the last few years, and now they come in the same quality of springs and mattress as the best set up beds, any standard mattress can be used, and they can be so completely concealed that no one can tell where they are located in the room.

It is possible, too, for the small home owner who finds his demands for space are increasing more rapidly than he anticipated to have closet beds which may be swung out and rolled into the closet during the day. Again if there is no room for closet space, drapes and curtains may be hung from rods which run from the wall to the bed or to the wall and, harmonizing with the furnishings of the room, conceals the bed effectively.

These beds come now with head and foot ends, finished in various kinds of wood, mahogany, walnut, etc. They are even to be had in period furniture design, and wood finish, of course, have a certain warmth and beauty many people prefer.

In Various Ways.

The average small house does not have both a sleeping porch and a sun porch besides. The choice may be between a sleeping porch open at night, or a sun porch you may use in day time. It is plain that a concealed bed built into the sun porch would get from this room the maximum of service, day and night, winter and summer.

Another use for these beds is in the summer home. No one builds elaborate summer homes any more, except the very rich, and the extra bed provision concealed beds offer is evident.

PHILADELPHIAN LAUDS SMALL HOME CONTEST AS BOON TO NATION

Only a few weeks are left before THE TRIBUNE Small Homes competition closes. And yet each week words of approbation continue to be sent in, together with many hundreds of requests for the complete program of the competition.

From Fred W. Whittlesey, architect, West Philadelphia, comes this letter:

"Please send me all data necessary regarding this competition so I can start immediately on the winning project.

"Encouraging the idea of better design in small homes means a great deal to the American people. It will, we all hope, in time give to us that which we lack sorrowfully at the present moment. Let me congratulate you on starting such a competition."

The contest closes Dec. 1. Architects and architectural draftsmen may receive the complete program by addressing THE TRIBUNE Small Homes Competition Bureau, Tribune Tower, Tribune Square, Chicago.

Announcement of prizes will be made on Jan. 1.

TELLS GOOD FROM STUDENT WORK IN BUILDING TRADES

Meyne Urges Colleges to Adopt Plan.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Universities and colleges of engineering should encourage their students to seek employment in the various branches of building construction during their vacation periods, according to Gerhardt F. Meyne, a Chicago builder, who devotes considerable time to finding a solution of the apprenticeship problem.

GERHARDT F. MEYNE.

"I read recently with interest the plan conceived by Samuel P. Luzzo, president of the Hod-carriers and Building Laborers' district council, to give college students employment during the summer months in the local building industry," Mr. Meyne said. "Such a plan as Mr. Luzzo outlines should be encouraged.

"The budding structural engineer by this plan would have an opportunity to make a practical study of design and how structural steel should be put together. He can observe the building of forms and placing of concrete and the practical methods of spacing reinforcing rods and can scrutinize their reaction.

Would Benefit All.

"In fact, the benefits that budding engineers, contractors, or architects may acquire by having opportunity to apply their vacation time to working in the building industry will be of great benefit to them in the later years of their life. Employment of college students could be regulated so it would not interfere with the employment of the regular union artisans and laborers on construction. I'm sure that benefit would accrue to the contractors, building trades, and the building public with equal share."

In discussing the long standing jurisdictional dispute between the journeymen plumbers and steamfitters, Chas. Mulcahy, business agent of the Plumbers' union, avers:

"The plumbers at all times strive for the retention of peace and harmony in the ranks of the building trades. There never has been a dispute of a jurisdictional nature which couldn't have been ironed out if both parties put their feet under the table and met on a 50-50 basis. The trouble with some people is their eyes are much too large for their stomachs. Our fair business dealings are bringing some people off their arbitrary perches."

Steamfitters' Side.

The steamfitters' angle of the controversy is partially explained in Charles Rau's news bulletin:

"After many weeks of negotiations an agreement known as the 1913 agreement was reached and signed on Jan. 25, 1913, a pact under which all worked in peace and harmony until 1919 and 1920. Then a political campaign developed in the plumbers' organization. Those seeking office attacked the administration in control by appealing to the membership and arousing their prejudices, claiming that the steamfitter was in possession of work which should belong to the plumber. We, the Steamfitters' Protective association, reiterate that the work covered in the 1913 agreement will never be surrendered."

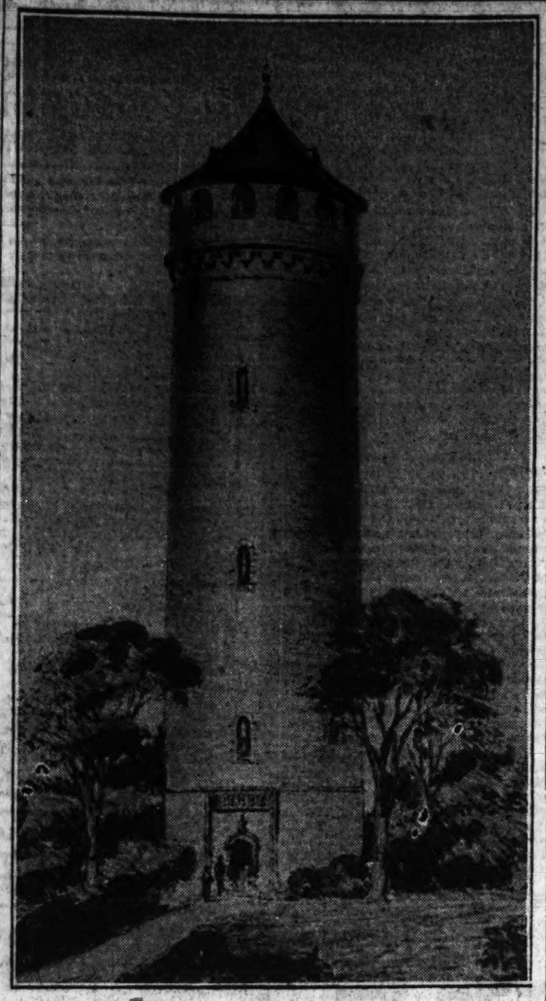
Building Permits Drop.

The valuation of building permits in twenty of the leading cities of the country for the first nine months of this year is approximately $100,000,000 less than for the same period in 1925, according to information compiled by the American Contractor. Of these cities only six report a greater valuation for the first three-quarters of 1926 than for 1925. These are New York, San Francisco, Atlanta, Detroit, Seattle and Milwaukee.

The following cities report a falling off in the valuation of permits issued during the first nine months of this year as compared with the same period in 1925:

Chicago, Los Angeles, Indianapolis, New Orleans, Baltimore, Boston, Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Buffalo, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Dallas.

SUBURBAN STRATEGY



Above is the attractive camouflage of brick, stone, and terra cotta proposed for the new Glen Ellyn water tank, designed by Chatten & Hammond, Chicago architects. Details are given in another column.

THE WHITFIELD APARTMENTS

Thomas R. Bishop designed the Whitfield apartment building, which is under construction at 5330-36 Harper avenue. The structure is to be seven stories high and will contain seventy-five apartments of two and three rooms, all furnished. Gerard & Co. are underwriting a bond issue on the project. It is stated the building will represent an investment of $650,000. Charles Morgan made the above rendering.

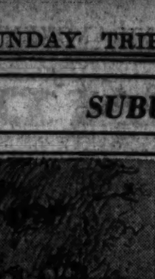
SUBURBAN PARISH HOUSE

The above illustration shows the attractive parish house which the Episcopal Church of the Mediator will erect at the corner of 110th street and South Hoyne avenue, Morgan Park. Rowe, Dillard & Rowe are the architects. It is stated that the structure will cost about $40,000.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To Nov. 7, 1916; 10 Years Ago Today

The feature of the week in north shore residence property was the sale of the George P. Everhart residence on the lake at Highland Park, one of the most attractive homes in that city, to William M. Wright, president of the Calumet Baking Powder company. The house is a twelve room structure in the Spanish style of architecture, while the grounds contain three acres.



WILLIAM M. WRIGHT.

Several loans of more than ordinary interest were reported or made matter of record during the week. The most notable of these was the one by the Chicago Title and Trust company to the Moir Hotel company on the property at the southwest corner of Madison and Clark streets. It is subject to a prior incumbrance of $2,000,000, matures in 1930 and bears six per cent interest.

To Nov. 7, 1906; 20 Years Ago Today

The William Ganschow company has bought from Frederick A. Henry and Walter Schaaf for $31,000 the southwest corner of Washington boulevard and Morgan street, 125x125 feet, on which is located the old home of Joseph Medill. The company will erect a modern five story machinery building. Messrs. Henry and Schaaf were represented in the deal by Edgar M. Snow & Co.

JOSEPH MEDILL.

E. B. Woolf & Co. have sold for Hammel Strauss and others to the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Cook county 211 feet at Ogden avenue and Leavitt street. The purchasers have in contemplation the erection of a building on this property to cost $100,000, to contain stores, offices and halls.

To Nov. 7, 1896; 30 Years Ago Today

R. R. Donnelley & Sons have leased from William Kent ground in Plymouth place having a west front of ninety-eight feet, forty-six feet north of Polk street, running back to an alley. The lease runs for ten years at an annual rental of between $6,000 and $7,000. The lessees will begin at once the construction of a new building on the property after plans made by Howard Van Doren Shaw and S. A. Treat. The new structure will be strictly fireproof and will cost $100,000. It will be seven stories high.

HOWARD VAN DOREN SHAW.

J. B. Waller has begun the construction of a large apartment house on the south side of Schiller street, between Lake Shore drive and Astor street. Plans for the building were made by Jenney & Mundie. The exterior will be of light pressed brick and terra cotta.

SPANISH DESIGN APARTMENTS FOR HYDE PARK AREA

Work is under way on a seven story apartment building at 5030-36 Harper avenue, in the Hyde Park district. It's to be called the Whitfield, but despite its more or less Anglo-Saxon name its design and all its trapping will be Spanish.

The architect is Thomas R. Bishop. To emphasize the Spanish motif of the front elevation, he has planned a landscaped patio a la Spain or Mexico for the rear. The patio is to be graced with a babbling fountain.

So, provided our Chicago winds are able to sweep away the clouds, when the moon peeps over the south side the only properties necessary to complete the Spanish atmosphere will be a couple of gents thrumming guitars, a lady chasing her sweetheart about with a dagger with which to carress him and another gentleman sharpening up a pike while singing the Toreador song.

But anyhow the Whitfield is to occupy a site measuring 72x150 feet and it's to have seventy-five apartments of two and three rooms each.

The owner is the Friedman Construction company. Garard & Co. are underwriting a bond issue on the project, which, it is stated, will represent an investment of $650,000.

News of the Architects

Edward H. Bennett, chairman of the Wacker drive committee, will discuss the proposed architectural treatment of Wacker drive development at the monthly meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects Tuesday evening at the Architects' club house, 1801 Prairie avenue.

Prof. Rexford Newcomb, professor of history of architecture, will give an illustrated lecture on the use of color in architecture, and also speak on the plan of the Wacker drive committee to control the color scheme of buildings along that thoroughfare.

To Erect Flat Building at Crawford and Waveland

Schwartz Brothers contemplate erecting a building to contain sixteen apartments, three stores, and two offices on the vacant property at the southwest corner of Crawford and Waveland, 58x125 feet, which they recently purchased from Barbara Flook for an undisclosed consideration. C. R. Kaleth represented both parties as broker.

WOODLAWN CORNER SOLD.

The Woodlawn Improvement association has sold the triangular 41x211 at the southeast corner of 64th and Dorchester to Raymond A. Cavanaugh for a stated $10,500. Mr. Cavanaugh then transferred title to Anthony J. Gorman.

Pullman Flat Building Purchased by Syndicate

John W. Heller has sold the twenty-five flats at 10717 South Park, lot 105x125, to the Calumet National bank, as trustees for an undisclosed syndicate, through Louis A. Snitzer, Peden, Kahn & Murphy were attorneys.

FLATS FOR PHILLIPS AVENUE.

Israel Cohen has bought sixty feet of vacant on Phillips adjoining the southeast corner of 77th and is erecting a six flat building. A. T. Curry of the South Shore Investment company was broker.

Glen Ellyn to Hide Its Water Tank in Tower

Believing that a huge water tank, mounted on steel legs, and erected as high that it can be seen for miles, is a disfigurement to any suburb, James H. Slawson, president of Glen Ellyn, announces that his home town contemplates hiding its proposed new tank in an attractive tower. Chatten & Hammond have submitted the sketch shown in another column in this section.

"We're now taking bids for a 200,000 gallon tank," said Mr. Slawson, "which should be completed by Feb. 1. We'll then have a daily capacity of 1,750,000 gallons, as compared with our present 750,000 gallons. We're now sinking a 2,000 foot well which will give us three wells. The present old tank will be torn down as soon as the new one is ready for use.

"We hope next year to build a tower around the new tank. It'll be of light colored brick, stone, and terra cotta, with a red tile roof. Not only will the usual unsightly tank be hidden from view, but Glen Ellyn will have a distinctive architectural asset which will dominate the town and one that can be seen for miles."

Pays $57,000 for Six Flat Building on Jackson Boul.

The six apartments at 3947 West Jackson were sold by Paul Tamulion to Nathan Meyer for a reported $57,000. N. George Brenner of the E. M. Nagle Jr. organization was broker.

Physician Buys Tract of Seventeen Acres in Bloom

Loeb & Hammel report the sale of seventeen acres on the east side of Torrence avenue, about half a mile south of Lansing, to Dr. M. F. Bozinch at an undisclosed consideration.

WORK TO START ON PARISH HOUSE AT MORGAN PARK

Church of Mediator Plans Improvement.

A new parish house is to be erected for the Episcopal Church of the Mediator at the corner of 110th street and South Hoyne avenue, Morgan Park, while the main church building is to be remodeled, according to an announcement made by officials of the parish.

REV. FRANK R. MYERS.

The new parish house, to supplant one now in use at 11053 South Hoyne avenue, is to cost $40,000. The architects are Rowe, Dillard & Rowe. The parish house is to be constructed of stone and stucco and will be two stories high.

It will contain an auditorium, kitchen, recreation center, Sunday school rooms, and similar accommodations. Work is to start at once.

The tower of the church proper is to be remodeled, and a rector's study will be installed in the structure.

The church was organized in 1873. Its present rector is the Rev. Frank R. Myers, a fighting parson, for he served in the ranks of the army during the late lamented war. Following his discharge he retained the military bee in his bonnet, becoming headmaster of St. John's Military academy, at Salina, Kas.

He came to Chicago in 1920 and served as assistant rector of St. James' church. He also served on the staff of the Western Theological seminary. The Rev. Mr. Myers is active in National Guard work, serving as chaplain of the 131st infantry.

HOPE RAISED TO END RIVETING DIN ON SKYSCRAPERS

Experiments in Welding Meet Success.

The din raised by the riveting of the frame of the steel skyscraper, that sounds like a cross between a battle in the late lamented war and the interior of a boiler factory, seems headed for the same locale as has gone the brown derby and other relics of our noisy past.

An interesting article in the Buildings and Building Management Magazine tells of a public demonstration of arc welding of structural steel which was conducted at Pittsburgh recently by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. And welding would eliminate riveting, with its accompanying noise.

George R. Bailey, research engineer for the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, witnessed the tests. He expressed his belief that the new method will result in saving of weight, saving in cost through reduction of shop labor, and in relatively quiet construction.

Prove Welded Strength.

In every instance in the breaking tests, made on the Olson machine in Machinery hall at Carnegie institute, arc welded specimens proved their strength over riveted specimens. Ultimate failure in the arc welded specimens often occurred at loads 20 per cent greater than were required in the case of riveted specimens.

This subject is of considerable importance to owners and managers of skyscrapers who of recent years have been making an especially intensive study of construction in order to get the maximum returns from the investment.

Bailey Gives Views.

Some of Mr. Bailey's remarks on the experiments, as recorded in the Building and Building Management Magazine, follow:

"Several developments may be expected to result from these tests. Since in no case did a failure occur entirely within a weld, it is evident that the amount of arc welding may be cut down and still allow the structural members to develop full strength. Due to the much greater rigidity of arc welded joints, much strain is diverted from members under a moment load, and the weight from these members may be reduced to supply the same requirements as the present day riveted sections.

"Since web plates may be welded in between the column flanges, in line with the flanges of an I beam welded to the face of the column, a continuous beam effect is produced which overcomes the advantage which concrete has always held over steel in this respect. This should further reduce the weight of structural members. The use of arc welding eliminates the tremendous number of clips, liners, fish plates and angles now needed.

Joints More Rigid.

"The greater rigidity of joints should require less wind bracing, thus eliminating weight in this respect as well as the awkward situations often encountered where large gussets interfere with other construction.

"Figures are already available from several sources showing that arc-welded buildings are being built cheaper than riveted buildings, due mostly to a saving on shop labor. One of the large railroad corporations has found that not only is there a saving on shop labor, but there is a great time saving and a possibility of salvaging old material."

Secrets of City Milk War Reveal Astonishing Facts

George W. Putnam Lists Pasteurization Plant Defects.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

FARMERS in the Chicago territory in their pure milk fight in cooperation with the city's health authorities, distributors, and consumers believe they have found a practical and fair solution of their jumbled marketing situation. The campaign for wholesome milk already has increased the consumption of milk to a million and a half quarts a day, an increase of nearly a third since the intensive drive was started several years ago. Perhaps no other farm product can show such an enormous increase in sales on the Chicago market.

Leaders began with the cow on the farm, and after a bitter fight succeeded in eliminating the diseased cattle in herds that produce milk for Chicago. For more than seven months milk coming to the city has been produced by cows known to be free from tuberculosis.

Testing cattle for tuberculosis is only one of the steps in the production and distribution of wholesome milk which passes through a complicated distributing machine. It is a gigantic task to put pure bottled milk on the doorstep of 3,000,000 people each day when the milk is produced by more than 300,000 cows, handled by 100,000 persons on 25,000 farms in four different states. But every morning that stream of milk comes from all these farms. More trouble comes because the milk passes through the hands of about 500 dealers, is put through 397 pasteurization plants, and is hauled to homes in approximately 4,000 wagons.

Views of Test Opponents.

Opponents of the tuberculin test tenaciously held to the theory that Chicagoans were being protected because all the milk, excepting certified milk, was pasteurized. It is true that milk properly pasteurized is free from disease producing germs, but much of Chicago's milk had never been properly pasteurized until the war on impure milk was started here, experts claim.

A special survey made under the direction of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, in July and August of 1923, showed that out of 624 samples of milk gathered in various parts of the city 39 per cent contained more than 100,000 bacteria per cubic centimefer, the minimum requirement of the city ordinance. Ten and a half per cent of the samples contained more than 500,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. The test clearly indicated that the entire batch of raw milk was not pasteurized properly and that there was danger of tuberculosis and other diseases being carried by the milk that had not been heated to a temperature of 145 degrees Fahrenheit and held for thirty minutes—the pasteurization requirements.

Health department officials with a limited force of eight inspectors tried to make distributors live up to the ordinance. Most distributors tried to, but it was impossible, as was revealed a few months ago. The trouble was too deep to be solved in a day. New things about commercial pasteurization had to be learned and it took months to do it.

Fighting for Safe Milk.

Bitter opposition faced Dr. Bundesen when he attempted to go to the bottom of the pasteurization trouble. He said, "I'm not condemning pasteurization. It is one of the greatest life saving health measures ever devised, but it was never intended to take the place of sanitation. Citizens of Chicago do not want cleaned milk made marketable by pasteurization; they want clean milk made safe by pasteurization and that is what they are getting."

Realizing the seriousness of the situation Dr. Bundesen began to check on pasteurization so that everything possible could be done to protect consumers while cattle were being tested. He also knew that efficient pasteurization would be necessary to protect people against other diseases that might be carried by milk. Last spring he reinforced his efforts by organizing in coöperation with Leslie C. Frank, sanitary engineer of the United States Public Health service, a plan to eliminate the defects in the pasteurization equipment used in handling the city's milk supply.

A preliminary survey made for the health department by R. C. Archebald, a sanitary engineer from the Minnesota state health department, revealed that many distributors in Chicago and other cities had for years been accepting pasteurization equipment rejected in Minnesota.

Discovers Defects.

George W. Putnam, an outstanding sanitary engineer from the Missouri state health department, was put to work as a civil service employé last March to find and correct the defects in the city's pasteurization plants.

As head of the dairy products bureau of the health department, he made this statement this last summer at the conclusion of his detailed investigation of the 247 pasteurization plants in Chicago and 150 country pasteurization plants used in handling the city's milk:

"There is not a single pasteurization plant used in handling Chicago's milk supply where raw milk can be properly pasteurized. Every plant has some defect which must be corrected in order to pasteurize raw milk properly.

"Health officials will agree that pasteurization has been the greatest single safeguard in protecting the public from milk borne diseases. It has safeguarded thousands of lives and prevented tens of thousands of cases of sickness which would have otherwise resulted from epidemics caused by the use of infested raw milk.

An Imperfect Barrier.

"We have recently come to a realization that commercial pasteurization, which we have so blindly accepted as a perfect barrier against milk borne diseases, is in reality a barrier with many defects. The process often permits a certain amount of unpasteurized milk to go through, which contaminates, to a degree, the entire volume of the pasteurized product," said Mr. Putnam.

Putnam's finding was in keeping with the tests made three years ago when it was found that thirty-nine per cent of the samples taken were not measuring up to the city's requirement. He found dead ends in pipes leading from the pasteurization vats. These dead ends often held from a few pints to several gallons of milk that was not pasteurized. He also found leaky valves that permitted raw unpasteurized milk to recontaminate pasteurized milk. Unpasteurized foam was found on top of the vats; 222 of the 247 coolers in city plants were of the open type, exposing the milk to dust and germs after it had been pasteurized.

So he listed the defects under the headings of dead ends, leaky valves, unpasteurized foam and the human element, all loop holes through which tuberculosis and other disease producing germs could get through in the handling of milk.

Correcting Evils.

Working in coöperation with the distributors and equipment manufacturers, Mr. Putnam set to work to correct the various defects by designing special valves, eliminating dead ends and foam, and educating pasteurization plant operators. Orders were issued by the health department requiring that all defects in pasteurization must be corrected at once.

Major defects were corrected immediately. In some cases plants were closed. Minor defects are being eliminated as rapidly as possible. The effects of the plan to correct and perfect, as far as possible, the pasteurization defects began to show up favorably even as early as last July and August, when 671 milk samples gathered from all parts of the city showed that more than 75 per cent of them were fully measuring up to the city ordinance, while only 61 per cent of a similar number met the requirement three years ago. Recent tests have shown that great improvements have been made since August. By continuing the work of correcting the minor defects even greater improvement is expected within a few weeks, making it possible for pasteurization operators to turn out milk with a bacterial count even below the minimum requirement of 100,000 per cubic centimeter in summer and 50,000 per cubic centimeter in winter.

Setting a Standard.

The pure milk campaign means the elimination of careless, incompetent distributors and dairymen who cannot meet the high standards set by the health department. When pasteurization was first started in Chicago there were more than 1,400 dealers. This number has been gradually reduced until there were only 511 when the recent pure milk campaign was started, and within the last seven or eight months sixty-one of these have been consolidated with other companies or forced out of business because they could not meet the new stringent regulations required by Chicago, which is now being regarded as a standard by other large, as well as small, cities throughout the United States.

The United States public health service officials have their experiment station established here and will treat Chicago as a laboratory for working out high standards to be adopted in other parts of the country.

Health officials of New York and other cities are expected to adopt the standards and plans of Chicago in their campaign to clean up their milk supply. Seventy-five new inspectors have been recently added to New York City's force for the purpose of finding the weak spots in the system of producing and handling milk, following the initiative taken by Chicago.

The Present System.

Chicago has added to its force more than thirty new inspectors, who have been schooled in the latest information on pasteurization and the handling of milk in the country and in distributors' plants. The human element, recognized by Putnam in his survey, is at present being taken care of by the inspectors who visit the plants and farms regularly. A school for operators of pasteurization plants is being organized by the health department. Courses will be given this winter. The desirability of eventually licensing milk plant operators, requiring them to have a thorough knowledge of the various phases of clean, safe, high quality milk production and pasteurization, is being considered.

Farmers in the Chicago dairy belt of Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan realize more than ever before that the way to increase their returns is to produce a clean product with healthy cows and then take an interest in the distribution to see that their city customers get a clean, wholesome bottle of milk.

Chicago's pure milk campaign has been put through without an increase in the price of milk.

For years, consumers have been asking for a richer milk and many progressive farmers have come to the conclusion that it would put more money in the dairyman's pocket if distributors would deliver milk with a higher butterfat percentage. The city health ordinance today requires that whole milk sold in Chicago contain not less than three per cent butterfat. Many consumers are asking for three and a half per cent butterfat.

Farmers see this as a means of increasing the consumption of butterfat and thereby boost the demand for milk. They have come to the conclusion that for years they have been kidded by experts. They have been paid on the basis of three and a half per cent butterfat while customers in the city buy the milk on a three per cent butterfat basis and therein lies the rough deal. By arithmetic when the farmer does figure out how much he gets of the 15 cents paid for a quart of milk by the Chicago consumers. The Milk association, the organization of farmers with tested herds who have been in a quality production program working with the aim of coöperating more closely with distributors and consumers on a fair marketing program.

CANADA SELLS DAIRY PRODUCTS ACROSS BORDER

Despite the great dairy herds in this country today the United States is buying dairy products from Canada at the rate of $7,500,000 a year, principally cream and milk.

Twenty-four other countries are spreading their bread with Canadian butter, according to information sent out by the dominion department of agriculture.

"Production of creamery butter averages nearly 180,000,000 pounds a year, with a value of $66,000,000," say the department officials. "Output is increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 pounds annually. Total value of Canada's dairy production last year was $141,133,000.

"Canadian butter and cheese have established a ready market in the British isles. Production of Canadian cheese increased 20,000,000 pounds last year, most of which was absorbed by the United Kingdom. Total cheese output was 178,350,346 pounds, with a value of $36,781,343.

"Growth of dairying in the prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta in recent years has stimulated the industry. This area, famous as a great grain producing region, is now one of the most important contributors to the dominion's dairy output. Establishment of coöperative creameries, development of local markets, and spread of the doctrine of mixed farming have helped put dairying on the map in western Canada."

KEWANEE

A Gilt-edged Security

A heating-boiler that wastes heat, is about as good as a counterfeit banknote—it looks genuine, but sooner or later its worthlessness is discovered. To carry the comparison further, as soon as the bad money finds its way into the bank, it strikes a snag, fails to meet the requirements of the genuine note and is, therefore, condemned.

A similar situation is found in the case of the heatless or unreliable boiler. When it is placed in the basement of a new building, it fails to perform the duties expected of it—the duties accomplished by the Kewanee All-Steel (Riveted) Firebox Boiler. Our comparison is now complete, when we say that the Kewanee Boiler is a gilt-edged security, and able to meet the most exacting requirements of the wise builder.

Kewanee All-Steel (Riveted) Firebox Boilers are constructed to give honest heat and not a cheap imitation of it. Your snap judgment in the selection of a boiler may cause you grief as well as a loss of your good nature, and, if you are a landlord, the loss of your tenants.

Take a little time off, if you are a flat-dweller and inspect the boiler before you sign the lease. Insure yourself against Winter discomfort and LOOK IN THE BASEMENT FIRST.

72 BUNGALOWS TO BE BUILT ON FAR SOUTH SIDE

Builds, Sells Forty-two in Sixty Days.

One might be tempted to think in strolling about the city that the only thing going up is the skyscraping apartment building. But listen to this, or at any rate those who are interested in a bungalow for two with additions later.

Out south on Throop street, between 93d and 95th streets, a few months ago there was a prairie. Sixty days later there were completed and sold forty-two bungalows.

And now we are informed that Herman Seiger of the Chicago Trust company has just arranged a group loan amounting to $401,000 which will turn a second bit of prairie land into a bungalow center. The gentleman doing all this bungalow building is William Whitman, who stepped out of the army after the late war to win fame as a furnisher of homes for grooms with the necessary persuasive power to furnish the brides.

To Build 72 More.

This second group is to consist of seventy-two bungalows. Ground is to be broken on the first of November, with completion of the first residence set for Jan. 1. Thereafter they will be finished at the rate of one a day until April 15.

They will be erected on both sides of Elizabeth and Ada streets, between 93d and 95th streets, not far from the Brainard station of the Rock Island.

All of Brick.

Edward McClellan is the architect and he has made a separate design for each. All will be of brick, with face brick fronts and sixteen foot face brick returns. The corner homes will have face brick on three sides.

The lots will front from thirty to thirty-six feet, with a depth of 126 feet. Inside bungalows will sell for $9,200 and corner ones for $13,200. It is interesting to note that a majority of the homes in the first group were sold to loop workers.

Reliance Realty Company Acquires Manning Estate

The property is served by the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin electric railway.

Standardized, renewable working unit—removed as easily as a light bulb

One skyscraper tells another the good news about Chicago Faucets

"BACK fence gossip" is just as prevalent among the big buildings downtown as it is out where the little homes are. The fame of Chicago Faucets is being broadcast daily along Chicago's skyline, and building managers and engineers all along the line are delighted to tune in on complete faucet satisfaction.

The office building, apartment building, hotel, club or factory that starts out new with Chicago Faucets is exceptionally fortunate. For where Chicago Faucets go in, they go in to stay. The trouble and expense of continuous repairs and replacements is thereby avoided from the start.

Buildings equipped at the outset with ordinary-type faucets, soon find themselves faced with the problem of costly upkeep and, within a year or so, replacement of fixture after fixture. The labor cost, plus the cost of new fixtures, makes quite a big item in building maintenance.

Every building manager and engineer has faced this problem, and that is why they are now replacing old fixtures, as rapidly as they wear out, with Chicago Faucets. Chicago Faucets have a standardized, renewable working unit that prevents any wear on the main body casting. No wear means no replacements will ever be necessary.

The sole wearing parts in a Chicago Faucet (and this includes every type of fixture) are (1) the washer and (2) the "seat." Both are replaceable for a few cents.

One standardized working unit fits every Chicago Faucet and can be changed as easily and quickly as a burned-out electric bulb.

A few spare units, a handful of washers and seats and a little flat wrench that costs twenty cents make a complete repair kit for the largest building.

If you are interested in any type of building from a skyscraper to a bungalow, you can save yourself considerable time, trouble and expense by putting in Chicago Faucets to guard every water outlet.

If your plumber can't supply you with Chicago Faucets, let us recommend one who will. Call, write or telephone—

On Chicago Avenue, North of Davis Street.

Evanston is to have what is claimed will be the finest and largest garage building in the Chicago metropolitan area, with the exception of the loop. Work is now under way on the structure at 1612-16 Chicago avenue, just north of Davis street. It's to be three stories, with foundations capable of carrying two more floors later on if business warrants it.

The present building will have a capacity of 300 automobiles. When the contemplated two additional floors are constructed, the garage will accommodate 500 cars.

Maurice L. Bein is architect of the structure, which is to be known as the University Garage building, owned and operated by the Evanston Garage Building corporation. Jacob Hoffman is president and Charles H. Vihon is vice president of the corporation. Both are with the Realty Investment company. Isidore Goodman is secretary.

The Standard Trust and Savings bank has underwritten a $290,000 first mortgage bond issue at 6½ per cent on the project.

BIG SUBURBAN GARAGE

Evanston's newest and largest garage is shown above, now building on Chicago avenue, just north of Davis street, from plans by Maurice L. Bein. It'll have room for 300 cars and also will have four stores and eight shops. Details are given elsewhere. Edgar L. Bloomster made the above rendering.

MAKING MORE HOMES

Alexander & Brandt are the architects for the forty-four apartment building which a syndicate is erecting at 310-12 North Menard avenue. It is stated the project will represent an investment of $300,000. L. B. Sugarman made the above rendering.

BEFORE YOU BUY—

for repairs—remodeling and new construction fireproof!

Plaster wall boards, like other things, have progressed. The last few years have seen marked improvements. That is why you cannot allow any buying custom or habit of thought to lead you astray. At least you ought to shop and find out by actual tests and comparisons, just what progress has been made.

You will find, for example, that a surprising number of experienced builders and home owners are turning to Beaver Bestwall because of very important advantages.

Why is Bestwall preferred?

Plaster wall board gets its strength and serviceability from two sources: (1) The quality of the plaster core or center. (2) The toughness and strength of the facing or binder.

In Beaver Bestwall the plaster or the core is made of pure gypsum rock from Beaver mines. It is an extra fine, extra well set rock plaster.

In addition, every panel of Beaver Bestwall is finished with a new, improved fibre facing of remarkable toughness.

This greatly increases the strength of the rock plaster center, thus adding to the serviceability of Beaver Bestwall.

Other desirable advantages

Another advantage of the improved fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall is its susceptibility to artistic decoration. This smooth, hard, fibre surface promotes charming effects.

Paint or tinting colors dry smoothly—give richest color effects.

Another thing—the hard, sized and calendered fibre surface of Beaver Bestwall does not "drink up" paint. A little goes a long, long way. On any job there is a noticeable saving in both labor cost and materials.

Wall paper adheres tightly yet may be removed at any time without damaging the surface for redecorating.

At no greater cost

These are some of the specific advantages offered by this improved plaster wall board. But, being a completely Beaver-made product it can be sold at no higher cost than other plaster wall boards.

All you need do is to specify "Beaver Bestwall" instead of merely "plaster wall board"—to insist upon it—and see for yourself that each sheet bears the distinctive cream-colored fibre surface and the familiar Beaver trade-mark.

In every locality there is a representative building supply or lumber dealer, selling Genuine Beaver Bestwall. If you do not quickly locate one, write us.

A Simple Comparison

The tough cover enables the golf ball or baseball to withstand terrific impacts of club and bat. The same thing applies to plaster wall board. The extra tough fibre facing—permanently bonded to the rock plaster center—gives Beaver Bestwall its remarkable strength.

The "Water Glass" and "Paint" Test

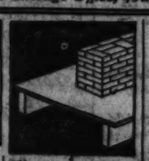
Place a sample of Beaver Bestwall over a glass of water. Invert the glass so sample is underneath the water. Also apply paint to a sample. Note how little is absorbed in each case. Very economical.

The "Fire" Test

Every panel of Beaver Bestwall—the superior plaster wall board is approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and manufactured under their laboratory supervision.

The "Surface" Test

Swiftly rub your finger tips over the fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall. Note that it does not scuff up and become woolly—a feature of the fibre facing which is sized and calendered.



The "Strength" Test

Lay a piece of Beaver Bestwall across two piles of bricks or between two chairs. Pile heavy weights on the center. Note the surprising weight it will hold without breaking.

Easy to Apply

Saws and nails like lumber. Quickly applied to studding over old walls or ceilings. Will not warp, buckle, crack, crumble or fail. Is fire-proof, moisture-proof. Produces smooth, clean, permanent walls and ceilings.

Many Uses

Use it for durable, fire-proof walls and ceilings in new dwellings and buildings of every kind. For quick, permanent, economical repairs for remodeling at low cost—reclaiming wasted attic space; lining porches or summer cottages; adding needed rooms, or walls in the cellar; making partitions in stores, factories—and for 101 other uses.

BORROWED GLORY

A Smashing Serial of Love and War

By Carey Orr

CAREY ORR'S ability as a cartoonist has been recognized for years. This serial proves he can tell as powerful a story in words as he can in pictures. And in this great feature he uses both!

As he drew the blade from its sheath a mass of fine engraving was disclosed to view. He handed it to Josiah. "Look at it," he said.

INSTALLMENT I.

The Mortimer Sword.

GENERAL MORTIMER smoked reflectively as he sat by the window of the old brick mansion that bore the name of Mortimer Hall. From where he was sitting he could see the swiftly flowing waters of the Hudson.

Some pre-revolutionary Mortimer had built the house on a knoll commanding this superb view; succeeding generations had seen fit to leave the site of the house unchanged, merely adding, from time to time, some of the fertile acres of the valley below.

The house was substantial, yet grim. Every brick, every stone, every oak panel seemed to be redolent of the spirit of the long line of Mortimers gazing down on the corridors of Mortimer Hall from their canvas retreats.

There were Mortimers in lace and ruffles, others in cocked hats and knee breeches of Washington's time. Here was the uniform of 1812, there the uniform of the army of Grant. All soldiers, all Mortimers; and the general was not the least of them.

The most recent portrait was of a young man, a captain. For his services in the Philippines he had been awarded the medal of honor. The award was posthumous, for he had paid the supreme sacrifice.

The general was thinking of this last, his son. He studied the face intently. Then his glance wandered from it to a nearby table where sat his grandson, Richard Mortimer.

"How much Richard is like his father," he mused. "Richard is a fine boy, too. . . . he'll make a good soldier. . . . and be a credit to the army."

With Richard was his friend, John Smith, son of the local postmaster. John was his playmate in childhood; his comrade now. Though socially unequal, Richard had not permitted this to affect their friendship.

In appearance, each was the antithesis of the other. Richard had finely molded features, displaying great refinement in the sensitive cut of his nostrils. Yet any suggestion of over-refinement or weakness was dispelled by the firm set of his jaw and the steady gaze of his eyes. John Smith, on the other hand, was rugged of features, gaunt of body, impressively honest looking. He was Rover, the faithful retriever, in human form.

In sanctioning the boys' friendship the general had found a point of contact with John's father, Josiah Smith, postmaster, grocer, dry goods merchant, and—an avowed pacifist.

ONE day Josiah had called on the general. Josiah had been occasioned a great deal of discomfort to discover that John had become saturated with a desire to enter West Point with Richard Mortimer. The latter had prevailed upon the general to promote John's appointment. To the postmaster's vehement remonstrations the general had replied gently. He had found out that Josiah was a chess player, and their arguments trailed off into nothingness before the onslaught of the all absorbing pastime. Josiah was an adept, too. He delighted in defeating the general. Routing the latter's forces completely, he would cry, "Checkmate!" malevolently, triumphantly, flashing a defiant glance at the gray towers of Grant hall as they reared themselves on the plateau at West Point.

Every evening thereafter, Josiah would close the store—thoughts of butter, cheese, muslin and postage stamps were thrust aside. Old Josiah—in his threadbare suit—cheap spectacles—worn shoes, trudged up the hill to Mortimer hall. He could beat the general—not in argument, perhaps, but at chess. On his way he mused over John's seemingly strange behavior: "I can understand a Mortimer wanting to go to West Point—but John—a soldier—a killer. What would his mother say, if she were alive?"

Yet John's military yearnings were not so hard to explain. He and Richard, since boyhood, had spent hours poring over the books in the general's library. Books about wars, and about tactics. Books full of stirring pictures of bygone battles. Soldiers in blue and red uniforms advancing in line of platoon to meet each other with flashing bayonets over a smoke laden battle field. They were hypnotized by the glamour thrown around the old military heroes—Caesar, Napoleon, Grant. Sheridan was among their favorites. With broomsticks for horses they had, as boys, often imitated his famous ride down the Shenandoah. They would circle the house at top speed, urging their mounts forward, shrilly giving commands, snorting, shouting, booming; until the general, the sole sufferer, would urge a truce. Later in life the boys centered their interests on the technical side of warfare.

EVENTUALLY the general had overcome Josiah's opposition. Now it was settled that the two would enter the United States Military academy in June, year 1909. John was nominated from his congressional district. Richard was appointed from the state at large.

Josiah's opposition had been overcome, not by strategy, but by accident. This accident centered round the incident of the sword. Through the long, dark evenings, Josiah and the general would play chess in the library, surrounded by the grim Mortimer portraits and—facing the sword. The sword, in its scabbard, was suspended between the portrait of the general and that of Richard's father. Deep down in his heart Josiah hated the old sword. This feeling of revulsion was heightened whenever the general broached the subject of John's going to West Point. One day they reached the climax.

"The army! Militarism!" snorted Josiah. "I hate war and those who make it. Hanged if I want John to be a soldier."

"Well," the general was restrained in his manner, "he can't, if you won't give your consent; but still——"

"No," broke in the old postmaster. "Let him learn something useful. He can work in the store and learn the business. I need his help."

"There are plenty of lads who could help you with the store," the general pointed out, "lads not so well fitted for a fine career such as the army offers."

"A fine career!" sneered Josiah. "Learning to butcher people."

"There are other things to learn besides that." The general spoke in even tones, apparently unruffled. "No one likes to kill people, but, at times, it's a question of 'kill or be killed.' Lots of nations, envying our prosperity, would fall on us tomorrow if we had no army or navy."

"Pooh!" Josiah was finely contemptuous. "A case like that would take care of itself. If we were attacked a million men would spring to arms overnight!"

"A million men—yes," said the general, steadily. "A million untrained men, floundering, without knowledge, without discipline. Even if they could achieve victory, think at what appalling cost! A million men, each for himself, without a leader! A blind elephant, without a brain! A hundred thousand well trained men among them could make the mass act like one man. Think of the lives that would be saved!"

"A professional soldier in the rôle of life saver," jeered Josiah. "How many lives have been saved by that sword up there?"

"Would you like to know?" the general asked, quietly. He reached up, and took down the sword from its resting place. As he drew the blade from its sheath, a mass of fine engraving was disclosed to view. He handed it to Josiah. "Look at it," he said.

And on the blade Josiah saw, "Presented to Captain John Mortimer, whose intrepidity and devotion to duty saved the lives of his grateful brother officers and men of B company, 15th New York Regiment, Brandywine, September 11, 1777."

Farther on Josiah saw more dates, 1812, 1848. The general's name was recorded in a deed of rescue during the civil war. And Richard's father, in the war with Spain, had upheld the Mortimer tradition.

"The Mortimers have no reason to be ashamed of that sword," said the general.

Josiah felt the shaft go home. He had spoken hastily. What if the general were right, after all? Professional soldiers saved lives? It was a new thought to Josiah.

Abruptly he held out his hand to the general. "Have it your own way," he said, gruffly. Then he turned his back, looking out the window. He saw Richard, a boy made fatherless for the nation's sake. For a moment he stood silent. Then the general observed that Josiah took off his spectacles and began to wipe them. Being a gentleman, the general walked across the library and became absorbed in one of his pictures. He had, more than once, himself, been overcome with emotion, and—he understood.

June saw Cadet Mortimer and Cadet Smith entering upon a new phase of life at West Point.

MARRIAGE FAIRS

by Doris Blake

It's Quite Permissible to Advertise for a Husband or a Wife in Paris, Where Matchmaking Societies Are Heavily Patronized

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—In France, recently, cupid took it into his sensible Gallic head to use his ingenuity for promoting friendships among lovelorn youths and maidens, encouraging their marriage and thereby aiding the eternal campaign of France for the preservation of her race.

The Marriage Fair, or Market of Sweethearts, is the romantic agency which the little fellow employs. And how successful the results are may be guessed from the record of 300 marriages from a single afternoon festivity conducted by the "Amicale de la Jeunesse Parisienne," which holds its "market" twice a year in a commodious hall in the working quarter on the east side of Paris. Another such society called the "Trait d'Union," working through a semi-weekly magazine called Marriage, gives out the proud statistics that in the nine years of its existence it has brought together 12 000 young couples who otherwise would be enduring forelorn celibacy.

The Green Ribbon society, with the distinguished journalist, Clement Vautel, as its president, holds its numerous soirees and dances (its clientèle would shudder at the word "market") at the fashionable Hotel Majestic in the Etoile section of Paris. A fairly large entrance fee is demanded, but veterans of the world war are admitted half price and numerous are the ones that have found happy homes and thriving families under its auspices, it is reported.

The little town of Fontenay, which married off twenty-five of its thirty-six spinsters by the simple expedient of a Marriage Fair, sponsored by the mayor and the whole community, is another famous example of the success of this curious but practical method of keeping the home fires burning.

Advertising for a Mate.

Other small provincial towns have followed the example of Fontenay. The little magazine, Marriage, with its standard cover design of a dimpling young bride in full wedding regalia, including veil and orange blossoms, has attracted boys and girls, middle aged widows and elderly bachelors from all over France and in other European countries to send in such advertisements as:

"A kind hearted brunette, aged 31, graduate of a normal school, dot 10,000 francs, prospects of 200,000 francs, apartment with a salon richly furnished, would like to marry a man between the ages of 35 and 40 years, in good circumstances."

Or, the less ambitious, though temperamental: "Virtuose pianist, 31 years, would like to marry an orphan or a young woman without a family."

Like the Green Ribbon society, the Trait d'Union, which publishes Marriage, holds monthly parties, dances and "fairs" to which all its subscribers are invited. A kindly anonymity hides the identity of the correspondents making their matrimonial hopes known through the magazine. Each advertisement bears only a number, instead of a name. And the sponsors of the society, including senators, internationally known writers, artists, social uplifters and humanitarian actresses, advise all subscribers and advertisers to maintain this incognito until correspondence has been carried on with several eligibles. But when No. 42,648, advertised as "very pretty, 34, but looks only 28, with 6,000 francs yearly, and would marry a gentleman who is intellectual and artistic," discovers all she hopes for in the letters of No. 54,975, "a Parisian, very artistic, independent, cultivated, appears about 35, gay, affectionate, and would like to marry young woman of simple tastes," it is arranged that they meet at one of the parties. Those in charge of these social functions strongly urge each young lady to be accompanied by some member of her family and to have her prospective suitor thoroughly investigated before marriage is discussed. They take all possible precautions to eliminate those whose intentions are not "honorable and serious," but disclaim responsibility if the course of true love does not run with the hoped-for smoothness.

At the Fontenay and other provincial fairs, however, the powerful Federation of Ward Committees of Fêtes, with headquarters in Paris, safeguarded the affairs. Applicants for husbands and wives went through a discreet but rigorous investigation. They met each other only as numbers at first. Names and addresses, as at the Paris functions, were kept secret until later.

The Most Picturesque Fair.

Probably the most picturesque of all the markets is the semi-annual affair of the "Amicale de la Jeunesse Parisienne." A tiny advertisement, almost invisible among others for second hand automobiles and second hand baby carriages, usually appears in all the Saturday newspapers preceding the event, which occurs in the spring and again in the fall. But the waiting line of hundreds, which can be found the following Sunday afternoon before the doors of the hall are opened, shows how many have been on the lookout for this information.

Pretty stenographers, blonde and otherwise, salesladies free for the day from their shops on the Rue de la Paix and the Rue de Rivoli, pathetic, thin faced girls in widow's crêpe and timid, blushing maidens who furtively slip into line watched over by their anxious mothers—all hope to draw the grand prize in the lottery of desirable prospective husbands.

The doors are finally opened about two o'clock by M. Gastienne, proprietor of the "Fair" for the day, and responsible for the immediate gayety and future importance of the occasion. In the café, which is always the antechamber of these working quarter dance halls, sit the young men—and older ones—on the lookout for their life companion.

The prospective brides pass on into the inner shrine—Cupid's private business office. Here behind long counters sit the smiling attendants. They ask you to "Please sign here, mademoiselle or monsieur." The business is all conducted under the supervision of sympathetic M. Gastienne, who twirls the huge cameo attached to his heavy gold watch chain while the romantic applicants fill in the blanks.

Both girls and boys write on the slip handed them name, age, profession, personal tastes, and the type of husband or wife desired. Two-thirds of the home seekers write: "Prefer young man [young woman] who is honest and likes a home." One may prefer a brunette and underscore the word, while another seeks a "tall blonde athlete." An occasional one insists that her future husband "must have an auto and be fond of travel." But it is the home that is uppermost in every mind.

With the Aid of Music.

Every slip is numbered and the corresponding number pinned to the blouse or lapel of the girl or boy, as the case may be. Then the jazz orchestra "symphonique" breaks into a lively fox trot and the applicants begin to circulate.

Arm in arm the young women walk up and down the dance hall looking for the not impossible He. And on the side lines stand the young men who may have come to scoff, but who usually remain to pay—for an engagement ring. And if the dapper young man in the pinchback gray suit handsomely set off by a green batik necktie likes the looks of the sweet little thing in modest black taffeta nervously twisting her gold locket, he asks her to dance. He carefully notes the number pinned to her dress, goes to the assistant behind the counter after the dance and eagerly reads what she has to say for herself and her prospects.

She is doing the same at the counter reserved for men. Perhaps the young soldier in the horizon blue uniform who has had his eyes on this same girl since she entered, with a daring born of his soldier ancestry, gulps out an invitation for the next dance. And under the beaming smile of her approving mother sitting nearby, she bashfully accepts. They whirl off while the dapper one of the batik tie looks on morosely.

It is all much like a high school party in a small American middle western town—but with "postoffice," of course, eliminated in these conservative working quarter circles.

The Purpose Is Serious.

Never for a moment does the management allow the gay participants to forget that this is more or less a serious affair with object—MATRIMONY. Late in the afternoon when the affections of the younger couples have been warmed with riper acquaintanceship and sandwiches, and the more elderly homeseekers are drinking their beer together in the café, there is a blare of drums and M. Gastienne requests silence. The announcement of the number of marriages resulting from the last soirée—300 was the record of one festival—and the number of babies born as the result of earlier unions contracted under the auspices of the Societé Amicale is then read.

In spite of the festive atmosphere of these fairs, the sad reason for such expediency can never be forgotten. During the world war three million Frenchmen between the ages of 25 and 40 were killed or disabled. Millions of young women who otherwise would be happy wives and mothers are without mates. France cannot afford to sit by while the strong, sound young men remaining sit about waiting for luck or chance to find them suitable mates.

Choosing the Right Background

by Gabrielle Bonney

The Clever Woman Lives in a Setting That Serves to Enhance Her Own Individual Type of Beauty.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—Clothes and the woman have a lot to do with personality and well defined individuality. But often the American woman forgets a salient factor in all that contributes to her charm, while the French woman is forever conscious of it. That is the background—in short, the setting in which she places herself.

The French interior decorators have fostered the idea and many of them design a room in keeping with the personality of the woman who lives there. At the exposition of decorative artists held in Paris, this feature was repeated again and again. The apple cheeked girl in gingham singing over the dish-pan or stirring a big copper kettleful of apple sauce [a mythical miss in our country, wouldn't you say?] would find her special background in the lovely red and white kitchen which was designed in the exposition by Maurice Dufresne.

Or, go to the other extreme. Haven't you seen ravishing women at a formal ball who were as much a part of the picture as the brilliant lights, the polished floor, the inviting music? Haven't you seen other women in the most select restaurants where the service was but a detail compared with the creatures who sat before it, and to whom head waiters and footmen catered—to whom eyes turned to admire eloquent beauty?

Don't you ever try to picture the setting of a home in which these types would live? The French decorator does, and he expresses the individuality of the regal, as well as the demure. J. Ruhlman, famous in Paris, does it when he decorates a high ceilinged drawing room with soft, subtle tones on the walls, relieved by an exotic tapestry and places regal modern furniture, flat in design, in the spacious room. French decorators and French women know their best setting and the latter, at least, gives it as much importance in the accomplishment of beauty as she does to every fine detail of costume and cosmetics.

The Flattery of Lights.

The dining room of the home is often our most "trying room," so far as the becomingness of lights is concerned. When I was last out in Hollywood I noted the popular taste ran to candle lighting of the table. I was told it was the most flattering light for women, upon which I could not concur, for the unshaded flame often threw the most tantalizing shadows. The French decorators tell you that the French woman prefers the soft shaded lights, and so a detail in the setting is the lights on the table, often of bowls of soft tinted glass flowers or fruits placed on a huge mirror. I have seen the most exquisite little trees made of the finest spun glass, the tiny leaves tinted heavenly pastel shades, which are in high favor. A clever electric contrivance provides illumination through the glass leaves and I cannot imagine a more flattering light upon the face of a fair diner.

Strikingly French, and strikingly flattering to most types of women, is the use of ground glass lamp shades or bands of this glass placed over the lights around the ceiling of the room. Again, this idea is interpreted in a three shelved table lamp in a boudoir, as Louis Sognot does it when he wishes to give subtle light that is kind to the woman in the intimate compartments of her home.

In the beautiful salons of Nicolé Groult, the famous couturiere, there are beetle shaded sconces in glass and mother of pearl, designed by her husband, André Groult, a famous interior decorator. These two, in working together, show repeatedly the effect of the woman and her setting in the very salons where the lovely frocks and wraps are shown.

One of the greatest compliments a French woman can pay another is: "This room looks like you." In so short a sentence, the remark says: "You have taken the trouble to study yourself as ruthlessly as an enemy. You know your characteristics. You know the coloring of yourself and have influenced your decorator to carry you into the setting. You have found your essential points of difference as measured against other women. You have not permitted the room to submerge your personality or to distract attention from it. On the contrary, you have made the room serve to individualise you."

With Regard to Skin Tones.

Decorator and the woman alike study the woman's coloring and if it should happen to be of the wishy-washy character, despite the use of cosmetics, together they guard against the choosing of a wall covering that will accentuate this. Cold gray is immediately eliminated from the list. Or, where a woman requires just a little bit of color, the gray is combined with tints of pink.

Quite common to all the French interior decorators is the use of degradé toned wall papers and wall coverings. Geometrical lines, to express the influence of modernism, are often traced through the shaded colors of the wall, particularly in bedroom and drawing room. Plain surfaces are the alternative for women of glorious, rich coloring. Beige suede is often used, and beige gray is favored for the true Latin types with wide, appealing eyes and olive skins.

For the pink and white girl the French decorator nearly always chooses a pink and white setting. And for the baby blue girl, these settings are sponsored with lots of lace or fur trimmings, subtle brocades, and taffetas in changeable colors. The pictures on the walls of the sweet girl graduate type are never the modern things that belong in the worldly woman's setting.

When It's Fun to Be Ill.

The invalid type, whose counterpart in our world has gone pretty much out of fashion, is not without her "prescribed" setting. One of my informants insists that were he a woman he'd have an invalid room and use it just for the fun of seeing how lovely a woman can be in a world of filmy negligees and luscious bed coverings of silk and satin and rich embroideries. For her the snow white curtains of dotted net would be ruffled and draped across in huge festoons beneath those of changeable taffeta with pinked edges and heavy silken cords. In the adjoining boudoir and bedroom which Louis Segnot designs and decorates everything is arranged for the comfort and convenience as well as to create an artistic background for the woman who is forced to spend many hours in her room.

White enameled shelves are set in pinky walls above a flat surfaced day bed with its worked fur spread. A low table with flowers and books stands near by. Deep satin seats in palest pink are in the luxurious boudoir and a parchment screen divides the two rooms.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

An Odd Expression.

While talking with my husband one day I mentioned that I must sponge some bread, meaning that I must start the yeast for bread.

Like a flash he retorted, "Why don't you earn your bread, instead of sponging it?" Mrs. M. W.

Nothing Now.

He—When I pass away I'll leave everything to you.

She—That's just what you've been doing ever since we were married. Mrs. G. J.

Too True.

Wifey (displaying birthday gift from her father): He always gives away such expensive things, doesn't he, dear?"

Hubby (sadly): So I discovered when he gave me you!" E. C. H.

Because of Bills.

We had company for dinner and I was being complimented upon my wonderful meal when hubby spoke up and said, "Yes, I think I'll run my wife for congress."

Highly flattered, I said, "Why?" and he replied, "O, because you're so good at introducing bills into the house." N. T.

Handling the Dough.

One evening while at dinner with a few friends at our house one of the guests commented on my home-made hot biscuits, saying how good they were and how tasty.

My husband replied, "O, yes, she knows how to handle the 'dough,' all right." Mrs. L. W.

Imperfect.

Wife—When I married you I thought you were a perfect gentleman.

Husband—Nonsense! I told you I had one toe missing. E. K.

Too True.

Wife: "You'll never do anything you should for me, unless I get mad at you."

Husband: "Didn't I do what you told me to do?"

Wife: "Yes, but I already had had my mad spell." C. B. K.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Allerton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that a "red top" in the pine forest should be a tree with its throat cut screaming for help?

People who know the woods are familiar with the phenomenon of the red top. It is a tree, standing there among its evergreen fellows, whose needles suddenly turn red. As a matter of fact it is a sick tree, hard on its way to death.

This tree has been foully and wastefully murdered. Big and strong as it is it has been sacrificed that an insect no larger than a grain of puffed rice should be provided with its daily ration. The tiny pine beetle has been at work in its vitals.

There are many kinds of beetles, June bugs, tiger beetles, click beetles, lady bugs, potatoe bugs, fire flies, boll weevils. They all have hard, bone like wings. They are therefore classified as sheath winged insects.

This little pine beetle goes flying about the forest in the spring. It alights on the trunk of some great tree and immediately begins boring into the bark. It takes no time to get through the soft, dry, outer covering. Just beneath this it finds a spongy mass with great tides of sweet and delicious sap coursing through it. This is the very life blood of the tree without which it cannot live. Under this is the solid trunk of the tree.

This sap zone is the promised land of the pine beetle. Here it will take up its abode and rear its family.

But this borer is an energetic sort of insect. It moves about, eating its way as it goes. It eats always through this inner bark. In driving its tunnel it cuts quite through this sap carrying zone.

If the beetle happens to work up or down the tree it does no great damage. If, however, it drives its tunnel crosswise, it completely cuts the channel through which the sap goes upward to nourish the tree. If it cuts but half way round, the tree will probably survive. If, however, it cuts all the way round, or if a number of beetles working in a single tree succeed in girding it, the red top appears and the tree dies.

This great monarch of the woods has given up its life that these wasteful insects should gorge themselves to the extent of only a thimbleful of food.

The wise forester, seeing the red tops appearing in the autumn, cuts them down, tears off the bark, and burns it. Thus does he destroy the beetle grubs asleep there that would repeat the tragedy in the spring.

Hippity Skip Puzzle

Snow Is Here and Out Comes the Sled

"IT snowed! It snowed! Look, Skip, it snowed last night. Now we can use our sled."

Goodness, what a racket Hippity can make when he is happy! You should see him, jumping up and down, and screaming with glee. No wonder his mother yanked his ear yesterday for tearing his stocking in trying to get it on.

"Let's don't wait to eat, Skip. I'm not hungry, are you?"

Skip gazed longingly at the bowl of milk and then flew out after Hippity. Of course, he was hungry, but what's a dog going to do when his master has hold of the rope around his neck?

In a few minutes Hippity was gliding over the fresh snow, pulled by Skip. Gee, but it was great to go sliding up and down over the hills, especially when some one was pulling you. Of course, when they went down a hill Skip could ride, too.

Finally the two decided to rest and stopped at the bottom of a hill, when suddenly:

"Look, what's that?"

Then, realizing danger, Skip moved. And, O, how he moved!

You see in the picture Hippity and Skip are not the only ones enjoying the first real snow. In fact, the danger Skip saw was a man on skis, and the man was out of practice.

Can you find another sportsman on skates, his club, and one of Skip's cousins?

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Doe, The Tribune, Chicago.

I just moved into the apartment and was not yet acquainted with any of the neighbors, except the little boy next door, whose name was Bobby. I came out on my little back porch to hang up some dish towels when I noticed that Bobby was on his porch playing with another boy.

I said, "Good morning, Bobby," and he said, "Good morning."

Then I said, "How are you this morning?" and he said, "I'm all right."

The other boy was looking me over and must have wondered why I didn't ask him how he was because he said, "We're both all right." M. B.

Grandma [after knocking for some time before gaining entrance]—"Why the delay, didn't you hear me knock?"

Evelyn, aged 2—"I heard you grandma, but I thought you was a 'pook.'" L. L.

The new baby brother had been named Theodore James.

"Do you like little brother's name?" asked mother of Roland, who was 5.

"Naw, it's too slow a name. I like a quick one like Bill or Dick." E. C.

MY GREATEST THRILL

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

The Unexpected.

I had sent in numerous letters during a contest conducted by a newspaper, lured by the first prize, a hundred dollars. Finally, deciding my efforts were in vain, I lost interest in the affair.

Several weeks later I was placing fresh papers on my pantry shelves. Perched atop of a stepladder, I was absently gazing on a newspaper I was tacking in place when suddenly I found my eyes focused on my own name and the words, "Wins One Hundred Dollars." The shock of that thrill almost caused me serious injury, for I lost my balance and over went the step ladder and myself. H. H.

Almost a Smashup.

One evening while visiting some relatives in a Missouri town, we went out to ride in our car. We drove quite a distance on the hard road and decided to turn around and return. The driver asked us to look each way and particularly to notice whether there was any one behind us. We looked and there didn't seem to be a car in sight anywhere.

We did not notice a little side road, seldom used. We were half turned around, straight across the road, when a little light car, speeding at about 75 miles an hour, shot past us, right in front of our front wheels.

Talk about frights! We sure had one then. L. B.

Out the Window.

I received my greatest thrill last February while living in a second story flat in Ottawa, Ill. My boys, aged 7 and 4, were playing in the hall with the children from across the way when suddenly I heard a crash of glass and screams from the children.

I stepped to the door of my kitchen just in time to see the feet of my oldest boy disappearing through the window. He had plunged toward another boy and, missing him, he went through the window, landing on a pile of cinders twenty feet below. He escaped with a bruised forehead and a broken wrist, but I received a thrill I hope never will be repeated. MRS. A. Z.

The Light Was On.

As we are usually careful about putting out all lights before going out, we got quite a scare when, the other Sunday evening, we came home and found the kitchen light burning. We tiptoed up the back way and looked in the window, and saw nothing; then we went around to the front again, and by this time I was thoroughly scared and my husband started up the front stairs, leaving me on the street to watch the kitchen window and call out to him if the light was put out as he opened the door. I waited what seemed ages to me, and my knees were shaking; finally he came down and said everything was O. K.

Then we made a thorough search of the house. That was my greatest thrill—or scare—and now we are more careful to see that all lights are out before we leave the house. MRS. P.

The best helps known are combined in one tablet. It does all that is needed. It checks the cold, stops the fever and headache, opens the bowels, eliminates the poisons and tones the entire system.

It acts quickly. The cold usually ends in a day. It rarely gets started, even, if one takes these tablets promptly.

This method is called HILL'S. Its use has grown and grown until millions now employ it. Don't rely on lesser help. A cold is too important. And don't delay. Things will be very different tomorrow if you start HILL'S now. You will keep them ever-ready after that.

DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleans the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

In the Evening, at the Theater, Fur Capes Are the Mode; in the Daytime, on the Champs, One Sees the Fur Jacquette.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The vogue for short hair—yes, even shaved hair—is unquestioned when it comes to furs. While women are retaining the bob for their heads, they are at the same time bobbing the hair of their fur coats. All kinds of fur pelts, shaved and treated, are used in Paris for fur coats and as trimmings, this winter. The furriers are also making use of another popular art of the coiffeur, and that is dyeing. Gray, middle aged looking, lamb and mole come out in youthful tints of henna, golden brown, rose and even raspberry. This treatment of cutting and dyeing is an excellent thing for inexpensive furs, for they become far more charming than in their natural state, and, in fact, take their place, at not too great a disadvantage, beside such a luxury fur as broadtail. Rabbit and squirrel are changed to golden and beige and are worn by smart women of the ermine class of wardrobe.

Short haired and shaved furs that I see in Paris are used in ways that are ordinarily confined to cloth. Short jacquettes of shirred and tucked fur are smart, and tailored hip length coats of shaved lamb or pony are worn with simple one or two piece cloth dresses. These accompanying dresses often have belts and bands of the fur which forms the coat, and sometimes even toques of the same fur.

Long haired fur, however, has also a distinct place in Paris fashions. It is used chiefly as trimming for short haired fur coats and capes, and for cloth and velvet coats and dresses. Fox fur or lynx is most highly favored by the fashion makers, an is usually presented in its natural colorings, although I have seen such oddities as purple fox on evening wraps.

One of the really important novelties of the Paris season is the fur shawl, which can be worn for either afternoon or evening, presented by Fourrures Max. Our artist has sketched one of these shawls for you, so you can get the idea more easily. The shawl is a large triangle of moleskin, bleached to a golden color, and fringed with golden chenille. The fur is trimmed by an applique of leaves also in the same color of mole, and the lining is brown velvet with an identical applique of velvet leaves. A more gorgeous wrap cannot be imagined, and Fourrures Max show these shawls in every tint of the rainbow. They are made of mole and also of squirrel.

I saw one of these shawls the other evening at the opening of Balieff's "Chaupe Souris" in the Theater de la Madeleine. It was all in dahlia red, and worn over a white frock embroidered in crystals, this shawl of semi-precious fur was the most distinguished wrap present, in spite of the fact that ermine, chinchilla and sables were not lacking representation in that smart crowd. The shawl of fur, in fact, seems about to bring back the vogue of this type of wrap, which has been singularly little worn since the great popularity of the Spanish shawl, some seasons ago.

The shawl is always a "personality" garment, and no woman can wear it exactly like any other woman. For this season the Parisienne loves to wear the shawl, and to arrange it in her own, personal way, which makes it distinctive no matter how many other women are wearing one of identical cut.

There are women, unfortunately, who have no knack of arrangement, and for them any other type of wrap is, therefore, preferable. A coat—or cape—already arranged by a furrier, is the best choice—perhaps a wrap like the one shown on our second figure, which is also one of the smartest fur garments of the Paris winter season. It is from Fourrures Max, too. In appearance, this cape-dolman produces the effect of being personally draped, as the shawl is, without the necessity of constant rearrangement. It is made of beige squirrel, and trimmed with deep bands of beige fox. The construction, which seems so intricate, is really quite simple when analyzed. First, there is a cutaway cape, which comes to the hemline in back, is fitted at the shoulders, and which rises in a curve to the neck at both sides of the front. All around the edges is the band of fox. To fill in the cutaway portion in front, Fourrures Max place a semi-circle of beige squirrel, edged in fox, and that produces the result seen in our illustration. Front and back are attached under the wrist only, which transforms the cape into a dolman. Such a wrap is, naturally, only for the more luxurious occasions of life, and when fur is worn in the morning one of its smartest forms is the jacquette, about which I have spoken before. Smart women prefer the jacquette of shaved fur, such as is shown on our third figure.

This is a jacquette of gray shaved lamb cut in an extremely smart line, and one which, while fashionable, is not at all common. There are two peplums of fur, deep squared revers and a fitted belt. The skirt of this ensemble is gray velveteen, plaited at the sides and with a center front and back panel curved at the bottom to give an uneven hemline, a diversion of the silhouette that many Paris couturiers favor. A straight jumper blouse of gray velveteen and a gilet of white shaved lamb with steel buttons complete this simple street ensemble of fur and cloth. Such a little jacquette of fur has the advantage of being practical for wear with a number of daytime dresses in different colors, since we have left off the exacting habit of matching shades this season.

Having spoken of the long and short of the fur garment, I come to the use of fur as trimming, and there is, in this also, a long and a short. The rule in Paris is simple—short haired or shaved furs generally for tailored clothes, and long haired furs for the more elaborate. Fashion is using fur sparingly as trimming and thus getting a better effect. If collar and cuffs of fur are used, bands are seldom employed on the same frock or coat, and if bands are used, then collar and cuffs are apt to be of cloth.

Shaved fur is frequently cut into decorative motifs and used to trim dresses and coats, but this can only be attempted by the expert. A simple band of fox fur, such as you see on our fourth model, is sufficient garniture for any frock. Long haired fur is most often seen in combination with velvet, either plain or façonné. Our model shows a frock of nasturtium crêpe de chine embossed with brown velvet bands, and trimmed with that lone circle of red fox that you see around the hips. It was the smartest frock I saw at Longchamps recently, and an ideal example of the union of embossed velvet and fur. The scarf collar and the deep cuffs of the bishop sleeves are furless, and the narrow belt is of brown suede with a gold buckle. The skirt is straight with three deep plaits in the front only.

The latest evening wrap is the shawl of mole fur, fringed with chenille and velvet lined, as sketched at the extreme left.

Both cape and dolman, this next wrap by Fourrures Max of beige squirrel and beige fox, presents the long and the short of the fur question.

A short jacquette of shaved lamb, with the new flaring hip line, worn with a plaited frock of gray velveteen, is the fashionable street ensemble for winter. It is pictured on the second figure from the extreme right.

A crêpe and velvet frock, in nasturtium and brown, is trimmed with a wide band of red fox and shown at the extreme right.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding or attended one? If upon all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are modern and casual in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their backward trend and reverse everything. The Tribune would like to hear the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $5 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

A Wedding on Skates.

The strangest wedding I ever saw took place in a roller skating rink. The instructor had fallen in love with one of his pupils and they decided to be married on roller skates.

They had some difficulty in obtaining a minister. The one who at last consented to officiate refused to put on skates. But the guests, all wearing them, formed a large circle around the room. Into the center the bridal party rolled, and the minister walked to the tune of a popular wedding march.

After the ceremony, with the bride and groom in the lead, they circled the room a dozen times or more, then rolled into the next room, where a wedding supper was served.

But I am sorry to relate that only a few months after he started out completely out of his life and she never saw him again. Miss E. M. G.

When 80 Marries 60.

I was stopping at a small country inn. The landlord announced to the guests that if they wanted to stay they could come into the parlor and see him married. All accepted the invitation. The bridegroom had only one eye and was 80 years old. The bride was his housekeeper, a woman of 60. The justice of the peace married them. The justice, a man 60 years old, was the adopted son of the bridegroom.

After the ceremony they had a fandango dance, the bride and the bridegroom leading the old-fashioned quadrille.

A roast pig and all that goes with it was the bill of fare. F. S. D.

A family supply of dependable cough medicine. Easily made and saves about $2.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold, soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up at night with a hoarse cough, and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

The Gamut of Nut Uses Makes a Most Entertaining Scale of Eatables Ancient and Modern, Animal and Human, National and International.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

IN a certain French novel, representing times a century or two back, there is this passage concerning what could be seen in humble dwellings on a cold night: "In one of them there was a group of young men and maidens gathered round the wood at nut burning, the lovers seeking each other's kiss as the kernels broke the shell." And yet earlier in this book, "Folle-Farine," there is this: "The children knelt in a circle round the fire, roasting chestnuts in the embers, with gay shouts of laughter."

In one of the most picturesque and most quoted chapters of the Old Testament, Ecclesiates XII., the almond tree is mentioned, and in Jacob's propitiary present to Joseph there were "nuts and almonds," and one Hebrew scholar says that the words translated "nuts" meant the pistachio nut.

From dyes to love tokens, from being a main food reliance to the use of a nut meat as a garnish, from an edible center for the gay games of children to the frisky squirrel's hoard and the monkey's plaything and larder, there is something about this comestible that is belovedly interesting.

A mighty volume could be written on the almond alone, tracing facts about it through almost all the literatures of the world, beginning with the Hebrew. If you go to Italy, you may get the broadest sort of ideas about the great value of the chestnut as a food. An old book says of it: "Roasted, it becomes farinaceous and resembles a mealy potato. The chestnut is, indeed, the most farinaceous and the least oily of all nuts, and therefore, though it may not be nutritious it is more easy of digestion."

The Filbert.

It is interesting to find in that old English book of a hundred years back that of our four nuts given attention the hazelnut gets the most, for if you have been in England in early autumn you have surely seen quantities of "cob nuts" in market stalls and had them also for dessert. The old book says: "The filberts, both the red and the white, and the cob nut are merely varieties of the common hasel. . . . The filbert is not thicker than the common nut, but it is at least double the length and has the kernel large in proportion. The cob nut is the largest of the species and it is round." In the county of Kent the filbert trees in old days were carefully cultivated and kept low, being trimmed in the form of a goblet with an open center with a diameter of six feet, "which is every season filled with filberts, both outside and inside."

And the account goes on to tell how a hazelnut tree grown in Constantinople furnishes the superior and best variety of that nut, and of famous gardeners who brought this tree to England and Leyden—in England—in 1666. A Spanish variety was also imported, and of the American nut it says: "The American nut is a beautiful species, extensively spread over North America, and which has been cultivated in the neighborhood of Paris."

A few years ago the filbert was about the cheapest nut we could buy, but now its price seems to have doubled. People have not taken the delight in cultivating it that those old gardeners had who trimmed it to goblet shape.

Strictly Against Nuts.

The pecan is perhaps the nut that we have the most reason to be proud of, and there is at least one town in our southern United States named for it. But, strangely enough, Downing did not write of it in 1845, perhaps because no one had then cultivated it, yet Dotty Dimple was treated to pecans in 1870 when she visited Indiana, where they had the unbelievable habit of cutting down the tree to get the nuts!

The most interesting things about the following list given by Downing as American is that he gives in the text the names of these nuts in other languages: "Chestnut, chinquepin, Cosford filbert, European walnut, filbert, frizzled filbert, hickory nut, Northamptonshire prolific filbert, red filbert, white filbert." This is the index list, but in the text our black walnut and the once well known old butternut are mentioned. Some change there has been, for then the English walnut had not been grown here, but was annually imported in great quantities, proving "the high estimation in which they are held for the table." But Downing preferred the flavor of our shellbark hickory and so do many people to this day.

Hot Nuts and Enthusiasm.

Somehow or other it does not seem to be easy to work up enthusiasm for nuts, perhaps because they are so taken for granted. At any rate, I have written year after year about them, sometimes being quite pleased with myself for what I have said—in fact, more pleased, by far, than usual, because sometimes I am not pleased at all—and yet these enthusiastic paragraphs have brought me less reaction than many another subject in which I did not feel any such delight. Yet people do get delight from nut candies, from roasted almonds, and also from the humble roasted chestnut, as from the chestnut puree and the epicurean marron, which when stale is an exceedingly common piece of candy.

Hot pecans for a Sunday night supper are something different prepared by covering washed pecans with cold water, bringing them to a boil, boiling for fifteen minutes after that, when they are "cooked," in a sense. After that rinse the nuts briefly in cold water, give the shell a slight whack, when you can peel it off as you would the shell of an egg, leaving the meat absolutely unbroken.

Hot roasted Brazil nuts are more appetizing than the cold nuts. It is best to roast them slowly and long, because with a hot fire the shell will char and the meat of the nut be undesirably browned all the way through, instead of nicely roasted.

Both salted and grilled almonds are most palatable if served before they are cold. They are crisper. Walnut meats fried a minute in deep fat are interesting and something a bit out of the usual.

The deviled chestnuts are somewhat less common and also less crude than plain roasted chestnuts. [Butter improves them.] To prepare deviled chestnuts, take cooked and blanched [skin removed] nuts, heat them in butter and sprinkle with a little salt and paprika.

Date and Nut Salad.

Wash the dates and remove the stones; stuff with pecan meats, cut each into three or four pieces, and serve on a lettuce leaf with French dressing. Nuts and fruits on a lettuce base constitute a "salad modern" and the practice of using this combination has been quite common for at least a dozen years. A variety of arrangements and combinations may be made. Perhaps the first of the nut salads—it is modern to use the fat nut in salads—was that of apple and nuts and celery, called the Waldorf, sometimes served in a hollowed-out red skinned apple.

Brazil Nut Salad.

Cut well washed and crisp stems of celery in several pieces lengthwise and then cut these across so as to make exceedingly small dice. Cut Brazil nut meats fine or each kernel in only four or five pieces. Mix these together and mix mayonnaise enough with them to bind. Serve on a lettuce leaf and garnish with the thinnest of shavings—as large as can be cut—of Brazil nuts. A way to lighten this salad is to add tiny dice of bread, which, of course, makes the more expensive parts and hardest to prepare go farther, while its presence when used with discretion is hidden.

Pistachio Nut and Banana Salad.

Take crisp celery hearts and allow for each heart one sound but rather small banana, ripe but not soft and dark. Slice the banana thin and add the celery, either sliced in the thinnest of possible slices or prepared as for Brazil nut salad. Some chopped Brazil nuts can be added to the mixture. Mix to a blend with a mayonnaise thinned with cream or with a cooked dressing, and in serving sprinkle with pistachio nuts. This can be served as a boat salad—filling banana skins in boat form.

Grilled Almonds.

Just what modifications one should make to have the grilled almond recipe "sure fire" it is a bit hard to say. The fact is that to get the almonds a nice brown and without being caked with too much hardened sugar is a bit difficult for the inexperienced. Though the recipe in "The Bethlehem Cook Book" has a word that cooks have agreed to discard as a sugar stage, yet there are merits in this which reads: "Blanch one cupful of almonds and dry thoroughly." [We have an idea that the drying thoroughly saves trouble.] "Boil one cupful of granulated sugar until it hairs, with one-fourth cup of water. Then throw in the almonds. Let them cook in this sirup, stirring them occasionally, until they become a delicate golden brown before the sugar changes. As soon as the sugar takes on a color quickly take the pan from the fire and stir the almonds rapidly until the sirup has turned back to sugar and clings irregularly to the nuts. Use instead of salted almonds, even so sugared."

Filbert Candy.

The unique flavor of filberts combined with carameled sugar gives something that is like the richest candies made. To prepare a small quantity, blanch half a cup of filberts, pouring boiling water over the nut meats and removing the skin with a knife. Then dry thoroughly. For this amount of nuts use three-fourths of a cup of granulated sugar with a pinch of salt or up to one-fourth teaspoon and melt it in a thick bottomed frying pan over a low fire. When the sugar has entirely melted add the nuts and cook them in the hot sirup for five minutes, stirring them so that they will be completely covered with the caramel. Remove from the fire and cool. When cool and brittle put through the fine disk of the food chopper. Put what is really a mixture aside until the brittleness has disappeared. Then make into a roll which can be sliced, or make it up in little balls to eat plain, or dipped in chocolate or melted fondant.

Before the mixture softens up it is fine for sprinkling over whipped creams, topping desserts, or over an icing that will harden quickly.

When Child Doesn't Laugh and Play,—Look at Tongue

Hurry, Mother! Give "California Fig Syrup" at once. It can't harm children and they love it

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

This Girl Won $11,000.00

Miss Flora Mae Hackett

In the $20,000.00 Beauty Contest Conducted by The Chicago Tribune 5 Years Ago

Pictured at the left is Miss Flora Mae Hackett of Monon, Indiana, then a 19 year old office girl, who was awarded the first Indiana State Prize of $1,000.00, and who also was declared winner of the Grand Prize of $10,000.00 in the Beauty Contest conducted by The Tribune five years ago. In all she won $11,000.00—simply by sending her photograph to The Tribune.

But that is not all. Further fortune and fame followed this attractive young beauty from the Hoosier State. Her photograph appeared in publications throughout the nation, and her loveliness so attracted Royal E. Christiansen of 1615 Farwell Avenue, Rogers Park, that he laid his heart and hand at her feet, and on July 15th, 1921, less than two months after she was declared winner of The Tribune's Grand Prize, they were married.

Miss Hackett was a splendid type of the quiet charm and radiant beauty which The Tribune sought through its offer. In awarding Miss Hackett the Grand Prize the judges stated they were influenced by "her youth, charm and obvious temperament."

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara Moore

DOMESTIC VAUDEVILLE.

The iceman's bawling out the cook—
His tickets are mislaid;
The cook berates the iceman, too,
For muddy tracks he made.
The twins have had a knockout fight
About some tennis shoes,
And Johnny wants five dollars changed—
He won't take any twos!
The laundress phones she cannot come—
Her husband's full of booze.

I'll drop the mending, get the car,
And drive dad to the train—
He cannot find his slicker and
There falls a soaking rain.
Returning—drive the bunch to school—
It's 'cross the railroad track—
And buy the groceries and meat,
As I am coming back.
(The maid has failed to make a list
Of things the pantries lack!)

The 'phone! Belle's coming out to lunch.
The toaster blew a fuse.
'Tis time to bathe the baby now,
But—is it any use?
They've sent young Johnny home from school
To clean off sticky tar—
Each puddle that he passed he swam—
Who smashed that Persian jar?
Where did they put the hammer last?
O, here the raincoats are!

The gas bill rebate's lost again—
I failed to send the check.
The spinach burned to cinders.
Damn!
At eighty cents a peck!
The one maid says she's feeling faint;
The bathtub overflows—
Our baby falls half down the stairs
And bloodies up his nose.
I'd take him to the doctor, but—
The radiator's froze.

L'ENVOI.

The pater said it gave him pain
That I lacked system-sense.
My automatic drilled him through;
The verdict: Self-defense.

A NEW LEAF.

In Miss Mamie Hickey's Shorthand Diary.

Just one more dance—it's a swell affair—and I am through with men;
I'll throw this Johnnie so hard and far he can't come back again.
Boy friends are bores when once you've learned—they're all alike as pins—
The Stuyvesants and the Gilderbergs, the Cabots and the Quinns.

The casual beau is a waste of time for one who earns her way—
The firm can't use the things she learns in supper-cabaret;
I've taken a tumble it's my own job to make a success of me—
So here is the frosted glove for Smith and Pabst and Weatherby.

It's not that I have grown cynical—I'm all for a big career;
Men are but men and a salary is anything but mere;
In time I may wed, should there come a chap whose one love I would be. . . .
But I have learned much of fickleness—from Casey, Greene, McFee.

THE LINGERIE ENGINEERS.

(Imagine undergarments so cobweb sheer, so perfectly cut, that they cannot add even a thirty-second of an inch to your measurement.)—From a current advertisement.

The silhouette one pares and pinches
Right down to fractioned parts of inches,
And well groomed woman ne'er indulges
In even decimal pointed bulges.
Precision measurements — (Ah, me!)
By engineers of lingerie
The old time union suits have reckoned
Out to a minus thirty-second.

MORAL:

And chic is gauged, the ad infers, by measurement with calipers.

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune.

2741—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 40 inch material with 1½ yards of 20 inch contrasting.

2798—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 8 requires 3⅛ yards of 36 inch material.

2855—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 40 inch material with ⅛ yard of 40 inch contrasting.

How to Use the Patterns

WOMEN who like clothes simply designed and decidedly smart will want to use pattern No. 2741 for one of their winter dresses. The front and back are each in one piece, and extend out at the sides below the hips to allow for inverted plaits. These plaits are laid in such a manner that they do not detract at all from the straight line appearance, but allow a graceful fullness at the bottom when walking. The dress is cut down in an unusually deep "V" in the front, and this opening filled in part way with a vestee. Around the neck is a collar that extends into soft tie ends.

The pattern provides for long or short sleeves, but no doubt the preference will be given to the long ones. These are plain and are made close fitting by means of a dart up the outside from the wrist to just below the elbow.

Satin, one of the heavier crepes, kasha, wool jersey or broadcloth would be suitable materials; and, of course, the collar, vest, and cuffs if you use them, should be of contrasting color or material. The long lines of this dress make it an especially good one for full figures. At the bottom, for size 36, this dress measures about 1¾ yards.

Pattern No. 2798 is a dear little design for a child's dress. There are bloomers, to be made of the dress material, and the dress itself is cut in two pieces—front and back—and as it reaches the bottom it flares prettily. The sleeves extend to the neck, and give a good shoulder line. They may be short or long as one prefers. In the middle front at the neck the dress is slashed down to a given perforation, and the slashed edges bound. Then a round collar finishes the neck. The dress may be left open at the neck, or closed as the picture shows. It is an excellent design for school wear; and made of jungle green wool jersey with the contrasting material, or rather color, used for collar and cuffs will be certain to please the wearer. The bloomers are cut in two pieces, the lower edges finished with leg bands and the upper edge turned for a hem and an elastic inserted. This design is also suitable for challis, or any of the usual wash materials.

Pattern No. 2855 is an attractive design for girls a little older than the other. It will make a pretty school dress, or one for afternoon or street wear. It is a slip-on dress, slashed down from the neck in the center front, bound and finished for closing under an attached collar. The dress at the sides has well pressed plaits and these are finished at the top with pointed belts. The long sleeves are close fitting and are finished with turned back cuffs.

Challis, wool rep, English broadcloth, linen, velveteen, and plaid woolens are suitable materials.

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes broken engagements, and generally plays havoc with its victims. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealousy Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Because of a Picture.

The graduating class was posing for a group picture and we finally coaxed our principal, of whom we were all very fond, to have his picture taken among us. I stood as near him as possible and when the proofs were submitted to us it appeared that I had my arm tightly around him, due to the fact that a mischievous boy directly in back of the principal had placed his hand on his shoulder.

The wife of the principal, who was also a teacher, demanded an explanation. H. A. H.

She's Sorry Now.

I have a girl friend who has been married two years. One day she found a photo of her husband and another girl. The picture had been taken before he even knew his wife, but she did not wait for him to explain. She deliberately tore all of his pictures into bits. She said, "His pictures belong to some one else, anyway."

In two weeks her husband was instantly killed, and she hasn't as much as a snapshot to remember him by. I hope no one else who reads this lets jealousy get away with them like that. Z. W.

Making a Girl Out of Him.

The most jealous person I ever knew was a woman who was our next door neighbor. Her little boy and my girl were both 6. My girl had beautiful golden curls, while her boy had perfectly straight hair.

She was so jealous she made him wear his hair long and curled it every morning.

One day I put a pink bow on my daughter's hair and, lo and behold, if she didn't put a pink bow on her boy's head! MRS. G. Z.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is known as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound and can be obtained at all drug stores for only 75 cents a bottle.

While gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Question of Chaperons - - - - - BY PERSIS STANDISH

CONVERSATION overheard at a tea:

Mother: "Yes, I know it's the twentieth century—I know all about this generation, but I simply won't have it!"

Daughter: "But, mother, all the other girls and boys are going. You don't want me to be the only flop, do you?"

Mother: "What, pray, is a flop?"

Daughter: "A failure—a miserable social failure."

Mother: "O, a wall flower?"

Daughter: "Heavens, mother, you're not old enough for that word!"

Mother: "Stop flattering me. Anyhow, you can't go—not without a chaperon."

Daughter: "But, mother, no chaperons are provided for this party, and I can't ask them to have chicken sandwiches and a chaperon simply because you and I like them."

Mother: "Then, my dear, I am afraid I will have to provide the 'flop.'"

Dispensing with Chaperons.

Now, it seems, this was all about the football game at a nearby college, or rather a nearby university, to which a party of young folk were going by train the following Saturday.

There was a to be no chaperon, either at this end or the other, and no chaperon on the journey, but the young people, thinking there was safety in numbers, had decided they did not need one. Mother, on the other hand, was a stickler for the old conventions and she could not bring herself to allow daughter to take any kind of railway journey in company with young men without a chaperon.

There are things to be said on both sides. One of the most potent of these daughter uttered when she said in effect, "everybody is doing it." After all, except in matters of personal conscience, everybody doing it makes a thing more or less correct. A half century ago any one who wore her skirts ten inches from the ground would have been severely criticized. But now even a visiting member of royalty offers an alluring glimpse of what were then called "the nether limbs" to public—or had one not better say popular view? Three centuries ago a silver tooth pick and a silver earspoon were hung in the girdles of elegant Venetian nobles and used with freedom and dispatch.

One sees many parties of nice young people unchaperoned going each Saturday hither and yon in train and flivver to the various games. There isn't room for the chaperon—tickets are too scarce, and what woman not of their generation could stand the strenuosity of such a journey—carrying coats and rugs, bumping along dusty roads with bad springs, eating hot dogs in lieu of luncheon, waiting in the cold for an hour while the crowd floods them in, sitting down and jumping up fifty times each quarter. O, who would be a chaperon?

From Mother's Point of View.

On the mother's side there is also much to say. She should, of course, know her daughter's companions, both male and female. For sometimes, nay always, the influence of one flighty girl is worse than that of three flighty boys on the other girls present. It's the competitive thing, of course. A girl does not have to compete in wildness with the boys present, but she doesn't want to be outdone in "pep" by another of her own sex.

If she knows her girl's companions and is sure they are nice boys and girls, a mother may let her daughter take a short railway journey just as she would allow her to take a car ride or a ride in a motorbus, or better still, just as she would allow her to come on the train with some of her companions to her own summer place. A football game is just as good a destination as the summer place, and as long as the daughter can get back the same day she should be allowed to go without a chaperon if—I say IF—there are two or more other couples in the party.

She should not go even a short railway journey with a young man alone, because that just looks as though he didn't know how to take care of her. Surely if he were the right sort he would be popular enough to have some friends going in the same direction, and could arrange to make it a foursome so that the girl would have another girl to look to in any emergency.

Two girls can leave their male companions without the least embarrassment—one cannot.

Short Trips Are Permissible.

It is perfectly correct now for two girls to go from here to Ann Arbor, Mich., for instance, in a party with young men on the noon train, if they are invited to a properly chaperoned house party after they arrive there. If they are invited to a fraternity house of standing the mother has nothing to worry about because proper chaperonage is always provided on these occasions by the chapter. Now, it seems that many of the fraternities have also a house mother who is resident there and amply equipped to look after all such situations. If I had a daughter I should much prefer that she go by train on all such junketings than in a motor car. A train is as public and safe a place as one can find—and travel by train is many times safer than by motor, especially with all the wild driving attendant on such occasions as football games.

Now, daughters, there are some things you must remember, provided mother allows you to go short journeys unchaperoned to the ball games. First of all, pay your own railroad fare. Second, never go in drawing room. The parlor car is the place for you. If you don't want to go in the parlor car, the day coach is all right, but not drawing rooms or compartments, even with four of you in them. It is not done.

On the Way.

The boys may pay for your luncheon and dinner, too, if you should pass the dinner hour, and you may go into the dining car two at a time to hold your seats, if you like.

Third, you must not be boisterous in any way. A game of bridge is permissible, but crap shooting is not—not on trains. Not because it is wicked, but because it doesn't look well, and it is apt to be noisy.

Even if your best boy friend is there and the temptation is great, do not monopolize him, nor allow him to monopolize you. That also doesn't look well. Remember you are in public and that it is everybody's party. Be nice to everybody.

After you get back to town go straight home if it is later than ten o'clock. Not because ten o'clock is such a late hour, but because it has been such a long day and you need rest.

Right Attitude Is Everything.

My advice to mothers about the football season is, know your daughter's companions as well as your daughter before it begins, teach her to have the holy horror of being in bad taste that every woman should have and then trust her to judge of many things for herself.

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

To avoid imitations always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. Fine, almost invisible skin particles are flecked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde

This Sock and Stocking Knit in One Will Keep the Baby's Feet and Legs Warm.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a shirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these and other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

HERE are directions for making a sock and stocking combined—and they will be fine for winter babies—and are easy and quick in the making.

One ball of Saxony yarn and 4 No. 8½ needles are required.

LEG: Use two needles and cast on 6 stitches. Knit across once. Increase 1 stitch at the end of each row by knitting back of the first stitch, until 48 stitches are on the needle. Then knit 13 ridges. Narrow first stitch at each side, then knit 3 ridges. Narrow first stitch at each side and repeat until there are 40 stitches only on the needle.

FOOT: Use 4 needles. Fourteen stitches are on the first needle, 12 on the second, 14 on the third.

Knit 14 ridges on the middle needle, having 12 stitches on, then break off the yarn. Tie the yarn at the corner between the foot and leg. Knit 14 stitches, turn and pick up the stitches on the side of the foot and the middle of the toe on one needle, knit the rest on the second needle, picking up the stitches on the other side of the foot to match. Knit 4 ridges plain. Narrow on the wrong side of the next 3 ridges at the heel and toe needle. Bind off loosely on the seventh ridge.

TOP: Pick up stitches around the top, adding one occasionally to make 52 stitches.

With the right side toward you knit 3 ridges plain. Knit 3 stitches—knit 2 together—thread over the needle twice, and repeat to last 3 stitches. Knit these plain.

Bind off loosely on the back of the sixth row. Sew up and run baby ribbon through the beading at the top.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

FROM A CHEERFUL GIVER.

IF you wonder, sometimes, what it means to the giver helping others, this letter will tell you: "Dear Miss Brown: You may remember I became interested in your work about two years ago, when we first came to Chicago. I didn't know what to do with a lot of winter clothes belonging to our boy, 14, and girl, 10, because they had outgrown them. Then I saw your column and began by giving clothes to one of the families you mentioned.

"Now we are leaving Chicago, I can't help thinking what good these and other gifts have done. We gave the first box of clothing to a widow's family with a boy 13, a girl 10, and an 8 year old girl. The mother was earning barely enough for food and rent and they were facing winter without warm clothes or sufficient bedding.

"How happy they were when our first box arrived! It got them through the winter splendidly. At Christmas that year we gave them books and toys, and added groceries and a dress for the mother. Last year we gave about the same. Now the boy is starting to work; they have a really comfortable home, and I think the widow's fight is won.

"There was another family, too, where my husband's clothes helped out. The man had been a salesman in a store, but had been doing outside work for a year for his health. It would have been all right if worry over his small wages hadn't kept him down. My husband's suits [two that we had renovated], some shoes, and linen enabled this man to get back to his regular work—and after helping them a year I think they are well on their own and need no further assistance.

"Now, Miss Brown, while we're away I know we'll always be happy to think that we had a hand in making life happy for these families. And when I recall we gave things never missed you can be certain that never again will we discard anything, knowing the great services there is just waiting to be done if only we stop a minute and think to do it.

"Thank you for the happiness we've had through you in contributing our small share."

Doesn't this letter point the way for many of us, who have something to give and just need to make up our minds? Almost all of us have clothes, at least, that we can pass along—and now that last weeks snow flurries warned us that winter is here, warm clothing is badly needed by many families. Won't you look over your outgrown wearing apparel, see what you have and join the others who are going to get happiness this week by helping those in need?

Eight Children to Care For.

"Has any of your readers some rugs or carpets they would be willing to send Mrs. P.? Her husband is an unskilled workman and they have eight children whom they are trying to send to school. The family lives on the first floor of a frame building with no basement beneath and the floors are drafty and cold. A rug and a piece of linoleum would be greatly appreciated. F. N."

A number of you fall movers will have rugs and pieces of linoleum which do not fit in the new apartment. This would be a splendid opportunity to dispose of them.

For a Piano Student.

"I have a piano technicon to give to some one who has no piano to practice on. I also have some sheet music to give. Mrs. G. B."

Students of the piano will be interested in this offer. If you'd like either the instrument or the sheet music, write in for it.

Miscellaneous Offer.

"I have a pair of ballet slippers, size 6½, which were used only a few times; a bathrobe, size 14, and a pair of skates, slightly worn, which I will gladly give to any one wanting them. "E. G."

If you're a dancer and in need of ballets, write in for these. Or perhaps you'd like this bathrobe. It'll be quite comfortable on cold mornings.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

Send in a short, to the point, true account of the cheekiest person you ever met. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

A Believer in Hints.

Our apartment house neighbor, seeing a small basket of fine apples on our back porch, inquired, "What are you going to do with all those apples?"

"Take, one," invited my husband, taking the hint.

"Well, I couldn't take one without taking two," asserted the neighbor. "My wife likes apples, too, you see!"

So he helped himself. J. R. B.

Pretty Small.

One day I asked my girl friend if she would give me one of her snapshots, as I would like to put it in my album. She told me they were too expensive to give away, but that she would give me the negative and I could have the picture developed myself and return the negative to her. G. O.

Ungrateful.

Just around vacation time a friend of mine asked if she could borrow my bathrobe for a week. As she was a good friend I readily consented. As I was going on my vacation I told her to return it in about a week. When a week was past I wrote to her and asked her to return it. She did not like the idea of my asking her, as she thought I could wait another couple of days.

I wrote her again and asked her to return it. She wrote me a letter and told me what she thought of me. The next day the robe came C. O. D.

If that isn't cheeky, what is? I never heard from her again. A. S.

Taking Possession.

The cheekiest person I ever met was on the suburban train one day. A friend and I got on and as the train had just pulled into the station, the seats were all turned the wrong way. She turned a seat and before we could sit down, a man calmly took possession of it, completely oblivious of our amazed and rather indignant stares. J. L. A.

Once Too Often.

The cheekiest person I knew was one who spent week-ends at my home. She always came without baggage, borrowing a night gown, of course, and house apron, as her dress would be too good except for dressup moments. She would come for three or four days, even, without powder and would lose the only hanky she had with her.

Then she divided a week between us and other friends, spending the first part with us. She came with a suit case filled with about everything she owned, all in excellent order, but made a request for the usual loans. She explained that she wished to keep her suit case of clothes clean and in good condition to make a good impression on the people she was visiting at the end of her week's vacation.

This was the final straw. A. S.

Helping Herself.

We have a new neighbor next door. Going out early one morning, I saw her picking plums from my lone plum tree.

Looking at me as unconcerned as you please, she said: "My, these are nice plums. I am taking enough to make a couple of quarts of plum jelly."

I call that cheek. F. S. R.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine, and no grease! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Ask Your Druggist

Get a bottle of Danderine and start its benefits today. Every drug-store in America has it, for only 35c. For the finest dressing you could find, and the best aid to hair health yet discovered, just try—

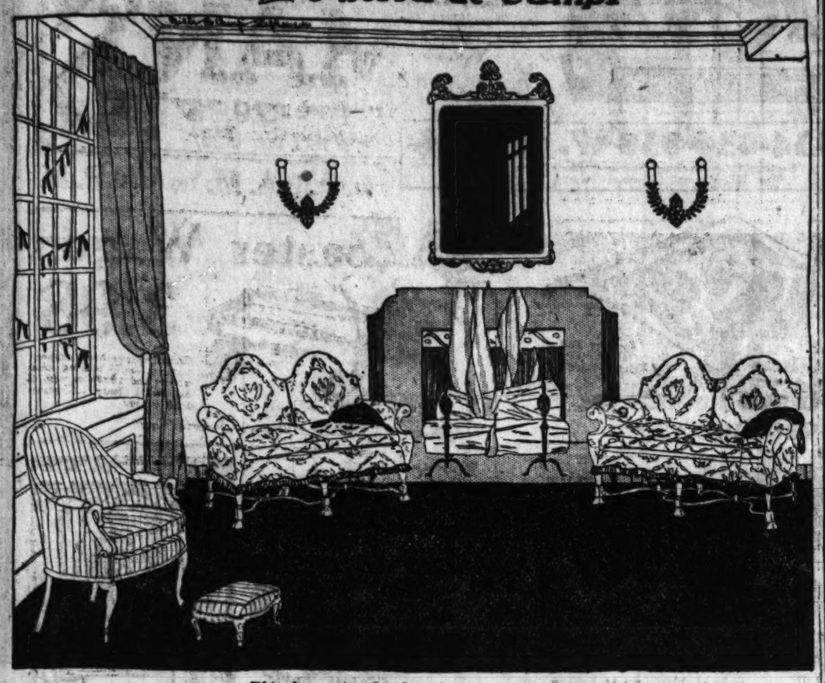
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



This decorative fireplace has no overmantel.

More than 2,500 architects and draftsmen, representing every state in the Union, have now entered The Tribune's Small Homes competition. This project has been launched to interest the best of architects in the beautifying of small homes. Rich prizes will be awarded for the best designs, and the prize efforts will be available for Tribune readers who wish to incorporate the best architectural ideas in homes of modest price. The competition will close on Dec. 1. Prize winners will be announced on Jan. 2. The complete program of the competition will be sent to any architect or architectural draftsman upon application to The Tribune Small Homes Competition, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

Instead of Neutral Tones, Colors, Subtle or Pronounced, Are Being Used in the Newer Homes.

COLOR, color, color—and more color! Every day this one particular element of interior decoration is being emphasized in a greater degree. There was a time, not far past, when we relied almost entirely upon balanced groupings to make our rooms successful. Balanced grouping we still use, of course, to good advantage, but the present mode offers us so much more to add to the interest of our homes—a wealth of color in pleasing harmonies and intriguing contrasts. Gone are the plain putty colored walls which were sluggishly chosen the year before last. In their place are lovely patterned papers, paneled effects and subtle color tones. These take more time to select, it is true, but what more gratifying investment of time than the charmingly colorful results? Gone, too, is the rage for the invariable drab taupe rugs which "floored" so many rooms and threatened to dull our personalities in a dismal way. They are replaced by deep rich colors, blending beautifully with the other embellishments used, and by fascinating two toned and restfully patterned effects.

Everywhere color is importantly apparent. In a lovely house which has just been completed, colors are used freely, with delightful results. The floor of the entrance hall is done in large squares of black and dull yellow linoleum in a marble pattern, and the woodwork is marbleized black. Trowel-finished plaster walls are tinted deep yellow, to match the yellow squares. A lighting fixture, hanging from the center ceiling, is of wrought iron, with amber drops and amber frosted bulbs.

Opposite the entrance door is an arched opening leading into the drawing room. This is flanked by a pair of green lacquered cabinets, decorated in gold and black, the only furnishings in this formal hall. The stairway, with wrought iron rail, rises at the right.

Directly across from the entrance door, and through the arched opening from the hall, is a lovely open fireplace, as shown in today's illustration. There is no overmantel. A large mirror in a beautifully proportioned frame hangs in the space above the fireplace.

At each side are wrought iron side lights with amber frosted bulbs. The walls in this room are a light, blue-green plaster, and woodwork is painted a deeper tone of the same. Love seats, at each side of the fireplace are done in deep mulberry and gold brocatelle. A little arm chair, with a foot stool to match, is upholstered in a heavy, mauve silk, marked into stripes by hairlines of jade. A divan, against the wall space at one side of the arched entrance, is done in a lustrous bronze velour, with down-filled seat cushions, and accessory cushions of jade green taffeta, piped with mauve. Small tables at the ends hold dully gilded wrought iron lamps with shades made of finely plaited cloth of gold over rose silk, finished with jade green ruchings. Green glass smoking accessories are used.

At the other side of the arched door is a secretary desk, lacquered a parchment yellow, with decorations in dull green. The door of the upper section is fitted with a mitered mirror. Accompanying the desk is a lacquered chair, the seat upholstered in deep green and gold. A comfortable arm chair, with a reading lamp with a parchment shade banded in green, mauve, and black, stands in one corner, near a lovely lacquered cabinet which houses a fine radio.

Blending delightfully with these furnishings and giving a rich depth to the room, is the floor covering of deep moss green chenille. At the leaded windows no glass curtains are used. Draperies are of vivid jade green velveteen, lined with ecru sateen. Mulberry velvet cushions are placed in the recessed window seats.

French doors lead from the living room into the dining room and into the sun room. In the sun room the floor is tiled in two shades of green, and the plaster walls are tinted a pale mauve. At the many windows are full curtains of green gauze, finished at the edges and across the bottom with two inch hems stitched in mauve worsted in a loose chain effect. The furniture is painted black, with a hairline of vermilion to relieve the severity. To complete this unusual color effect deep blue-green cushions are piped in vermilion.

The dining room is particularly fascinating. Paneled walls are done in two tones of pale violet, with the woodwork painted a soft old blue. Changeable blue and violet sunfast draperies are finished with a narrow blue and gold braid and are hung from blue wooden poles by means of violet rings. They hang straight, reaching to the floor. Glass curtains are of honey colored silk gauze. Filet lace runners, dyed violet, and blue Venetian glass appointments are used on the dining table and buffet. A deep blue-violet rug, figured in a small geometric pattern of old blue, covers the floor.

Sage green, lemon yellow, and coral are the colors combined in the main bedroom. The furniture is French walnut, decorated with floral motifs in soft colors. Old ivory walls are marked off into panels by means of fine sage green and coral stripings. At the windows are old ivory gauze glass curtains, with draperies of coral taffeta, banded at the edges with a two inch border of sage green. On the two twin beds are covers of heavy taffeta in wide stripes of sage green and coral, with narrower ones of lemon yellow and turquoise blue, separated by hairlines of chocolate brown. Lamp shades are of lemon yellow silk, trimmed with French flowers and finished with coral taffeta ruchings. Sage green wool chenille rugs are used.

Why My Teeth Glisten

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Countless women ask me how I got my pretty teeth. I tell them simply what experts told to me. They told me to use Quindent.

Quindent, as the name implies, is five tooth pastes in one. It contains 15 ingredients. Some 50 experts collaborated in its development. It contains antacids, antiseptics, cleansers and polishers, iodides and deodorants. It is intended to supply, in one application, all that the teeth require.

They tell me that Quindent, developed by Quindent Laboratories, is the utmost in a tooth paste. And I believe it is. Certainly it has brought to me a beauty that I prize.

The makers supply me with samples, and I shall gladly mail a ten-day tube to anyone who asks. Please get that sample. I don't believe you will ever find a tooth paste to compare.

A Laxative to Rely On

Take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for Constipation. Mild and Gentle. Never Loses its Good Effect

YOU know how much more difficult it is each year as you get older to avoid the ill effects of chronic constipation. The stomach and bowel muscles relax as age advances, and as you are naturally less active, in time they work only by stimulation. You try dieting and exercise,—then take medicine.

All medicines, however, are not suited to elderly people any more than to children, so you will be glad to know of a particular medicine that acts as near to nature as has yet been found. It is a prescription written thirty odd years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell and used most successfully in his practice. It is known today as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and you can buy it under that name at any drug store. A sixty-cent bottle will last an average family many months, and all can use it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts mildly, gently and without griping. It so trains the stomach and bowel muscles that in time medicine of all kinds can be dispensed with. When people learn of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and see how wonderfully it acts they realize how unnecessary it is to use drastic salt waters, pills and powders, for these do but temporary good and are weakening to most constitutions. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, on the contrary, is so natural and safe (it contains no narcotic or strong drugs) that generations of mothers have given it to their babies.

Take a spoonful the next time you are constipated, or have any ailment due to constipation such as biliousness, headache, bad breath or indigestion. If Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should ever fail to do as claimed, you can have your money refunded. More people use it than any other laxative in the world.

Write "Syrup Pepsin," 521 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for a free sample bottle.

Old Standby, "Aida," Opens Opera Season

By Edward Moore.

YET a few hours, until tomorrow night at eight o'clock, and the opera company will swing out for a new season. They tell us that it is going to be a good one, brilliantly melodious from the trans-footlights side, profusely populous from this.

It is no particular news that the season will begin with "Aida." It is no particular news when any opera season begins with "Aida." When it does not, it ought to. For "Aida" is, by all odds the first of the three ring circuses of opera, sent by the operatic fates and the brains of Giuseppe Verdi to be the ideal choice for the opening night of every operatic season.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA with his band at the Auditorium today.

(C) Underwood & Underwood.

It has all the color, all the tunes, all the noise, all the excitement in the world of opera. It likewise has a pretty fair story to carry the proceedings, though this does not really begin until the Nile scene of the third act, and by that time most of the trumpeting and pageantry, the processionals and stage band, the ballet and supernumeraries, but by no means most of the tunes, have had their turn and gone their way. No one ever gets bored at "Aida." One may possibly develop a headache, but there will be no drowsiness. There is too much impetuosity, and that of a highly seasoned nature.

Many Debuts Listed for First Week.

Elsewhere in this section will be found the schedule of operas for the week. As you look over the list of names you find that debuts will be as numerous as traffic cops around the Auditorium entrance. Right at the start Aroldo Lindi, he who at home answers to the name of Harold Lindau, will bear the burden of the Radames rôle and be in the worshipful company of Claudia Muzio, Cyrena Van Gordon, Cesare Formichi, Alexander Kipnis, and Virgilio Lazzari.

Rosa Raisa, Augustus Lenska, Forrest Lamont, and Giacomo Rimini will sing the principal parts of "The Jewels of the Madonna" on Tuesday night, and in the young army of lesser rôles there will be two more debutantes, Anna Hamlin and Lorna Doone Jackson. "La Boheme" is up for Wednesday night, made audible by Edith Mason, Irene Pavloska, Mr. Lazarri, and two newcomers in the baritone parts, Luigi Montesanto and Giovanni Polese, though as regards the last named there are recollections of a baritone of his name in the days of Campanini.

Thursday will need no appraisal of strangers. It will be "Resurrection," by Mary Garden and Fernand Ansseau, though with Mr. Formichi singing the part that was done in beautiful fashion last season by Georges Baklanoff. Friday night will restore the incoming stream, with Elsa Alsen singing the second half of the title rôle of "Tristan and Isolde," Charles Marshall making his first attempt at the first half, and Miss Van Gordon, Richard Bonelli, Desiré Defrere, and Mr. Kipnis taking further shares in the proceedings.

Then will come Saturday, Elde Norena new here as Gilda in "Rigoletto," and Florence Misgen in a smaller part, also Charles Hackett, Mr. Montesanto, and Howard Preston, and in the evening Louise Loring, a debutante as Leonora in "Il Trovatore," with Lindi, Lenska, and Polese. Giorgio Polacco and Roberto Moranzoni will alternate the week's task of conducting until Saturday night, when Henry G. Weber will take the stand and grasp the baton.

An Early Revival.

So much for the first week of operatic bliss. There is talk of a revival of "L'Amore dei Tre Re" following shortly. Donizetti's "The Daughter of the Regiment," announced for last season but canceled because of illness in the cast, is bulletined as one of the early novelties. Charles Wakefield Cadman was discovered in the opera library the other day busily engaged in correcting the score and parts of "The Witch of Salem." They say that the company's scenic studio is in febrile activity over the production of Giordano's "La Cena delle Beffe."

Finally, a statement went out from the office of the president of the Civic Opera company the other day under date of Oct. 26, stating that approximately $435,000 of the desired $600,000 new guaranty fund of 1927-32 was in hand, and that the committee was ardently striving to reach the full amount before the season opens tomorrow night.

Best of Bands to Be Heard Today.

As a pre-operatic observance, and pretty close to the line at that, this department desires to register a vote in favor of John Philip Sousa and his band. They will be at the Auditorium this afternoon and evening, and it is their visit to Chicago on this, their thirty-fourth annual tour.

A Sousa concert is comforting to the soul, not to say stimulating to the blood pressure. He has not only the best of the bands, but the best of the band programs. He will play an overture, Henry Hadlay's "Herod," a symphonic poem; Tschaikowsky's "Le Voyvode," and an African dance by R. Nathaniel Dett. He will also play a suite, "The Three S's," which in this case happen to be Johann Strauss, Arthur Sullivan, and himself, and his new humoresque, "The Wets and the Drys," which in view of the recent election ought to be loudly cheered by both. There will be solos by John Dolan, the cornetist; Marjorie Moody, the soprano, and Howard Goulden, the xylophonist, not to speak of a specialty by the eight saxophonists of the band that always gets many encores.

But, first and last, there will be marches. Mr. Sousa announces only one new one, "The Sesquicentennial," but there will be plenty of others. Did you ever happen to realize that at one time and another Mr. Sousa has composed no less than 104 marches, and that he invented a new musical form to do them? You have probably thought they were the best of their kind, which they are. Being the best of their kind, they fully deserve to be called masterpieces. For a masterpiece does not become such through its length, its complexity, or its aim at lofty foreheads, but because of its vitality.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Sousa has written a total of 272 compositions, and this number does not include his arrangements or transcriptions, which are several times that number. Most of them are written according to Mr. Sousa's theory of composition, which, expressed in the fewest possible words, is to make it snappy. He maintains that the people who go to musical entertainments are the people who dance to jazz music, attend the movies, get their news from the headlines, go out to lunch and get back in fifteen minutes, and drive their automobiles sixty miles an hour to the place where they expect to loaf all day. Wherefore, American compositions written for American hearing ought to be put in the tempo of America.

The gifted young conductor had a birthday celebration in Milwaukee yesterday. He will undoubtedly be in the birthday mood of youth and high spirits today.

Henry O. Osgood Writes a Book on Jazz.

Sooner or later a book on present day popular music had to be written. Henry O. Osgood has done it and called it "So This Is Jazz." It is published by Little, Brown & Co.

Mr. Osgood has served his time as critic of music on the newspapers and has written quite a bit of music himself. But if you think that from his past he is out to help rid the world of verminous monsters you will be badly mistaken. He is a bit of jazz devotee himself, like John Alden Carpenter, and Gilbert Seldes, and Carl Van Vechten, and Igor Stravinsky.

He admits that he bounced off with much resiliency when he first heard Ted Lewis and that maestro's band of maniacs in the early eocene age of jazz, some seven or eight years

HERE'S CORINNE AS "TIN PAN ALLEY" STAR

"SYNCOPATING SUE."

Produced by First National. Directed by Richard Wallace. Presented at the Chicago theater TOMORROW.

THE CAST.

Susan Adams	Corinne Griffith
Eddie Murphy	Tom Moore
Arthur Bennett	Rockcliffe Fellowes
Joe Horn	Lee Moran
Marge Adams	Joyce Compton
Landlady	Sunshine Hart
Marjorie Rambeau	Herself

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Just when I've been wondering what in the world's become of Tom Moore, a lady cries:

"Officer, arrest this man!" AND, looking to see what the racket's about—there's Mr. Moore in the hands of a wrathy policeman with a beautiful young woman bawling him out properly from the doorstep.

CORINNE GRIFFITH is the heroine in "Syncopating Sue."

A shock to you, is that? Well, let it be lessened by the information that the charge of mashing is false—as the young woman quite soon discovers. When she finds that the young man, so constantly at her elbow on the walk home from the music store where she pounds the piano for a living, is a new boarder at her own boarding house, and has been merely coming home, as he had a perfect right to do, and not following her—she's sorry and ashamed.

WHAT can she do to redeem herself? Her heart commands and Susan Adams, known at the song shop as "Syncopating Sue," falls in love with a trap drummer.

Now, while Sue syncopates snappily, Sue's sad because—Sue's stage struck and she doesn't know what to do about it. The ambition of her life has nothing to do with playing popular pieces on pianos. No, Sue wants to be an actress.

Lady Fate Plays a Hand.

At about the time the picture opens Lady Fate sits in and plays a hand. On the floor just above the music store (poem), where Sue plays so constantly ALL DAY LONG, is a theatrical manager with Nerves.

That day that Lady Fate sits in, he suddenly raises his hands to heaven and cries that it is too much! Shall he be called upon to suffer further from that damnable din? Must he be driven mad by that infernal racket downstairs? A quaking office boy is dispatched to command "that girl who plays the piano" to come thither immediately.

"That girl" asks nothing more of life at the moment the command is delivered to her. She has been discovered. The great Arthur Bennett has heard of and sent for her! O, richness of joy!

Looking mighty pretty, she appears before the great one and—"Let him who standeth take heed lest he fall," says the Good Book. Looking mighty pretty, Sue starts to say "You sent for me?"—gets out the "You," and lives through the catastrophe of hearing her sweet voice drowned by the bitter deluge of a heavy bellow:

"ARE YOU THE GIRL WHO POUNDS THAT PIANO DOWNSTAIRS? Well, I can't stand any more of it. GET OUT!"

Not easy to take, and had Sue been a poor little country maiden she doubtless would have shed a meek little tear and made a meek little exit. But Sue's not simple. She's a nice girl—but a hard boiled one. Before she GETS OUT—judging from the motions—the manager knows just where he came from, where he's going to, and has acquired a few little personal sidelights on his character and appearance.

She's No Meek Little Violet.

Sue gets out when Sue gets ready, and her head is not bloody, nor is it bowed. Sue has learned—possibly from those columns that disperse such invaluable advice to the lovelorn and forlorn—that it is never wise for a lady to let a gentleman make a doormat of her. Speak right up if you don't expect a fellow to lose interest. A biff is remembered longer than a buss.

She has not judged wrong in the matter of Mr. Bennett. He thinks her over and comes down to offer her a small part.

She accepts with thanks, and takes it home to study, trying out her interpretation on Eddie and the landlady and her small, sidewalks-of-New-York flapper sister, a blase blonde piece who, later, unknown to Sue, has a little affair with Mr. Bennett, herself.

Well, rehearsals start and when the stage director samples Sue he prays for death, swift and painless, preferably, but if not painless—swift! Sue is something awful and is told so.

It's bitter medicine to have to carry this message back to the folks at the boarding house. Sue's been doing a lot of bragging, you see. She's been doing a lot of air castle building. She's been dramatizing herself and her future aloud and it's hard to have to go back and pin on an N. G. sign.

Complications Follow.

Sue stalls.

The manager gets fresh.

Little sister puts a finger in the pie.

Eddie starts for Europe and—there I go making myself unpopular with the masses by telling the plot!

Well, my darlings, that's all I'll be telling of it, anyway.

Despite the fact that of facial expressions Corinne Griffith has only a couple and they look much alike, due to the tubercular makeup she effects, she's getting to be a better actress every day of her life. I think she must work at her job. If she keeps on as she is doing, she'll go far, for of her beauty there can be no question.

She has good, if subdued, support in this picture. You are led to believe that there must be a clause in the Griffith contract, providing that the folks in support of this star must not be allowed to play about much in the limelight. There's a submerged something about all of them this trip—or maybe I've just been imagining things again.

"Syncopating Sue" is neither striking nor unusual. It is light, brightly subtitled, nicely directed, and ends with a splash (literally).

It will pleasantly dispose of that hour you don't know what to do with.

BITS ABOUTEM.

THE DUNCAN SISTERS have signed a contract to make a series of special pictures for United Artists. "Topsy and Eva" will be their first co-starring vehicle.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK has been engaged to play one of the principal rôles in the Tiffany production, "Redheads Preferred." Anita Loos sure started a run on that little old word "preferred," didn't she?

WILLIAM K. HOWARD, who directed Rod La Rocque in "Gigolo," has been given a long term contract by Cecil de Mille. He is said to be the only former film salesman and theater man to direct successfully.

"COLETTE" will be the name of Constance Talmadge's next picture. Marshall Nielan will direct her.

CHARLIE MURRAY, whom you love, has the rôle of an Irish contractor in "McFadden's Flats." Aggie Herring is the extremely good choice for his wife. Chester Conklin will appear as a canny Scot. (This ought to be good.)

ED WYNN in "The Perfect Fool" will appear for Paramount.

"LITTLE EVA" has been discovered! After making thousands of film tests and turning away numerous grieving blonde little girls and their indignant mammas, Fox has chosen one Virginia Gray, aged 9, to portray "Little Eva" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

See you tomorrow!

The Psychic Follies

By H. L. Mencken.

"PATRIOTISM," said the late Dr. Johnson, glowering at Boswell, "is the last refuge of scoundrels." But there is something even worse: it is the first, last, and middle refuge of fools. Especially is this true under democracy, which is to say, in our incomparable republic, the masterpiece of God. Does one ever hear discourses upon patriotism from prudent and dignified men among us, themselves monuments to their own doctrine? One does not. One hears such pronunciamentos only from a dubious rabble of chautauqua orators, circus preachers, skyrocket politicians, bogus war heroes, half witted pedagogues, and professional uplifters, most of them with something to sell. The thing itself becomes a sort of forlorn joke, like Service and Law Enforcement. Whenever it is mentioned the judicious snicker—and reach uneasily for their watches.

Has any one ever figured out calmly what effect the flag drills, patriotic pageants, and other such maudlin buffooneries, now raging everywhere in the federal union, will probably have upon the rising generation? Will they fill the boys and gals with a boiling, patriotic passion, or will they convince them that the whole business is bunk? Go look at one of these exhibitions if you are in any doubt. Observe the poor schoolma'm at her dreadful work, reading highfalutin nonsense out of a book, with one eye over her shoulder in fear that some prowling snooper will catch her leaving something out. And observe the children in front of the ma'm going through their tedious exercises like dogs being trained or soldiers being drilled. If this is a good way to inculcate love of country, then a good way to inculcate a love of aquatic sports would be to play upon the kids with a fire hose. It is, in fact, precisely the best way imaginable to make patriotism loathsome. The young emerge from their banal gestures and recitations with a firm conviction, probably never to be broken in after life, that venerating the flag is an operation not distinguishable from learning the multiplication table, taking castor oil, or getting washed behind the ears.

It is a wonder to me that the brethren of the patriotic faculty do not learn a lesson from their colleagues of the Sunday schools. There were Sunday schools in America, at least among the barbarous Puritans, so early as 1669, but it was not until 1872, with the adoption of the International Sunday School Lessons, that they became an organized pest. Since that time they have spread to the remotest parts of the country, and that is a rare child, indeed, who does not come under their fire at some time between the ages of 3 and 15. They have a very elaborate machinery for rounding up recruits, and they are greatly favored by parents, even those of an atheistic and wicked nature, because they pen up their scholars for two hours on a day when it is pleasant for elders to take naps.

Well, has any one ever noticed that this rise of Sunday schools in the United States has been exactly coincident with a general decay of piety? In 1850 fully 75 per cent of all adult Americans had some sort of formal connection with a church; in 1926 the largest percentage that even the most romantic ecclesiastical statistician claims is less than 50. How are we to account for that backsliding? Is it due to the influence of Darwin and his accursed hypothesis of evolution? Is the blame to be put upon Nietzsche, the kaiser, or the bolsheviki? Is it a product of jazz, or golf, or the automobile, or the radio, or the immoral movies that come out of Hollywood the damned, or smoking by women, or prohibition, or Sunday baseball, or yellow journalism? Is Clarence Darrow at fault? Or Henry Ford? Or the late Luther Burbank?

All of these agents and agencies of the devil have been blamed, and sometimes by eminent experts in the moral sciences. But I choose to believe that the true villain is the Sunday school. Millions of Americans, sent into it in youth unwillingly, have come out in their teens full of rebellion. Its banal ceremonials have somehow offended them, its theology has revolted them, its consecrated men have aroused their suspicions. So they head for the Bad Lands the moment they are free, and their souls, by premature and injudicious efforts to save them, are only put into peril. I believe that the Old Testament, taught to children, has sent more Americans to hell than even necking or the cigaret.

Here I speak by the book, and out of my own hard experience and that of other highly respectable and virtuous men. My father was surely not pious, but I was noisy in infancy as in old age, and he liked to snooze on Sunday, and so he apprenticed me to an acquaintance who kept a Sunday school. This Sunday school belonged to one of the evangelical denominations and was typical of its kind. I sat in it for five or six years and acquired many things of value—for example, a wide and affectionate familiarity with old time Gospel hymns. I know all of them yet, and am glad of it, for they are hearty and amusing, and I believe that if any genuinely American music ever arises among us it will come out of them.

But I was also instructed in morals and theology, and here I soon ran aground. The teachers told off to belabor me were all manifestly idiots, even to the eyes of a boy of 10. Their ethical precepts, if I had accepted them, would have made me a Y. M. C. A. secretary, which I was certainly not eager to be. Their theology was so childish and so full of plain holes that not a boy in my class ever took it seriously. Like the rest, I listened politely, but, like the rest, I let it go in one ear and out the other. The net result of this instruction was that, at the age of 12, I was a violent atheist, and so were most of the other boys. Hell was not a horror to us, but a joke.

It took me years of experience and suffering in this world to recover my natural human fear of it. Even today I often find myself harboring doubts about it. And even worse doubts about the rest of Protestant theology. It is hard for me, in fact, to contemplate a theologian with a candid and impartial eye. He is somehow disgusting to me, and when the chance offers to plant a hoof in his pantaloons I find myself tempted damnably. This is prejudice, and hence offensive to me, a man who loves justice. But I refuse to take the blame. I was poisoned in Sunday school.

As I say, millions of other Americans have been poisoned in precisely the same way. The fact shows itself brilliantly whenever a Sunday school superintendent goes on trial in the criminal courts, which is oftener, alas, than it ought to be. Every lawyer will tell you that it is almost impossible to get a jury that will hear him fairly. On the panel there are invariably men who were sent to Sunday school in their nonage, and remember the adventure unpleasantly, and these men are hot for railroading the poor accused to jail at once without even hearing his defense. The percentage of convictions in America among professional criminals is not above 20 per cent, but among Sunday school superintendents it is at least 95 per cent. Every one rejoices when one of them is laid by the heels.

In the face of these plain facts I now hear that fanatics are going through the republic in summer setting up vacation Bible schools for the further harassment of the young and to the further damage and scandal of the Christian religion. Could any imaginable enterprise be more unwise? Thousands of mothers who long to go window shopping or to the movies will herd their children into these dens in order to get rid of them, and there they will be bored and battered for seven days a week, as they now are for one. What will be the effect upon them? The effect upon them, if the science of psychology deserves any respect, will simply be to convert them into frantic antinomians. They will go in like convicts climbing the gallows and they will come out ready to burn down the nearest church, even with a prayer meeting in progress. In twenty years Christians will be as rare in the general population of the country as they are now on the bench of bishops.

Such are the inevitable results of bombarding the young with notions beyond their comprehension and outside their natural tastes. The Sunday schools for half a century have been gradually emptying the churches. The vacation Bible schools, if they are not put down promptly by ecclesiastical authority, will complete the process. And the flag drills and patriotic pageants, kept up for a generation, will fill the land with growls and blushes every time the national ensign goes past.

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS IS BY PRIMROSE PATH

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Robert McLaughlin, a playwright hailing from the great lakes region of Cleveland, O., wrote an allegory some years ago which I suspect he thought was a little something below Materlinck's "Bluebird" in merit and quite a bit above George Hobart's "Experience."

"The Pearl of Great Price" he called it, and in it he sought to show that so long as a girl clung to the memory of her mother and preserved her chastity the gods would protect her, even on Broadway.

Being something of a showman, Mr. McLaughlin may also have had the happy thought of slipping vice to the virtuous through the production of such fleshly scenes as might naturally be expected to occur in such places as The Abode of Luxury and the House of Shame. And this accomplished, he knew his chances of creating a sensation were excellent.

But since that day "The Pearl of Great Price" has been hanging around producers' offices gathering nothing but dirt. As a result when it was produced at the Century Monday night by the Messrs. Shubert it seemed an obvious and rather futile entertainment.

Nothing New to New York.

It has the fleshly scenes boldly staged, but stripped females are no longer sensational in these parts and vice is so commonly exposed in the drama that there is no novelty left in it.

For which reason the first audience that saw "The Pearl of Great Price" followed the girl pilgrim from her slightly bent house of the hollyhocks through the various hells of a beastly city and back to the trysting place of happiness where she met love without noticeable display of enthusiasm over the proceedings.

Even such newcomers to the personnel of the allegory as Wanton, Queer, Bore, Lure, Vulgarity, Blasé, Lesbia and Orgy failed to cause much excitement.

The cast is heavy with names. Effie Shannon plays Pilgrim's mother, and Amelia Bingham the shame lady. Marion Kirby is Pander and the most successful member of the cast incidentally, and Julia Hoyt is Luxury. Margot Kelly wears her red bob and extremely little else as Any Man's Sister, who gets herself into terrible trouble and Mrs. William Faversham is the Envy. Claudette Colbert plays the Pilgrim sweetly.

I can't see just where the public for "The Pearl of Great Price" is to be drawn from, but it may be found.

More Light on Gold Digging.

The impression seems fairly general that the newest of the Owen Davis dramas, a town comedy called "Gentle Grafters," will not be a success. Which surprises me a little. It has most of the features associated with successful plays. The heroine is an attractive flapper who becomes a skillful gold digger and sells herself to the most persistent bidder among her admirers. It is well staged, well played and entertaining. But it has not clicked, as they say on the Longacre curbs, and Sam Harris is threatening to take it out of the Music Box before it has a chance to spoil the record of that theater as a home of hits.

I do not know whether or not Mr. Davis was consciously trying to write a new "Easiest Way" when he put "Gentle Grafters" to paper, but that is what he has done. You probably remember that earlier drama in which the unfortunate heroine, tricked in love, decided at the end to go to Rector's and raise hades in place of shooting herself, or turning on the gas, as deserted heroines had made a habit of doing up to that time.

In "Gentle Grafters" the heroine's adventure is that of Sally, a pretty girl, vivacious, in her late teens, and most attractive to men.

At 17 she had been left quite on her own. Her mother, confessing an unhappy love affair with Sally's father, died and the girl, griefstricken and resentful, took a sort of secret vow to be even with men. She would live on the most susceptible of them and avoid any kind of payment.

In the boarding house where she lived was an ex-circus queen with just enough presence and enough grammar to get by. Sally annexed her as a chaperon and introduced her as her mother. For the next several months, the girl supported both of them by gold digging. She furnished expensive apartments with credit furniture, eluded landlords and process servers as long as she could and then moved. Her hats and gowns and furs she managed to collect as gifts from her expectant men friends, or by running innumerable accounts at the stores. Along came love.

The Same Old Fork in the Road.

Then, of course, she runs into the inevitable jam. She falls in love with Dick Cameron, a nice boy whose salary is only $5,000 a year. At the same time she is being most earnestly pursued by Jim Merrick, Cameron's wealthy employer. On the one hand she can become the rich man's darling and sail away to Europe in sables. On the other she can stay in New York, live in a kitchenette apartment and try to find a competent maid who will sleep out.

Sally is about to make the decision in favor of respectability and a small income when the chaperon person lies to her about her suitors. Cameron, the old conspirator says, has engaged himself to marry a rich contractor's daughter, as he should. And Merrick is sailing for Europe alone. Then she goes out, leaves Sally alone in the apartment and phones Merrick the girl is waiting for him.

Next morning Cameron calls to renew his protestations of love and Merrick walks out of Sally's bedroom. Tragic gloom envelops the situation. Sally, bitter and beaten, throws the lying chaperon out, bids the cheating Merrick begone, says good-by to romance in the person of Young Cameron and then goes motoring up toward the Westchester roadhouses with two of her lesser pursuers.

What becomes of her after that nobody knows, but I suspect she will go on collecting fur coats and Spanish shawls and eventually become a Broadway first nighter.

Katharine Alexander, still the loveliest of the wiser ingénues, plays Sally honestly and most attractively, the part being no deeper than her years and experience fit. Robert Keith is the nice boy and Morgan Wallace the pursuing satyr. Charlotte Granville plays the chaperon and Liane Carrera, Anna Held's daughter that was, is a maid.

An Irish Tragi-Comedy.

"Autumn Fires," another of the somber little tragic-comedies of the Irish countryside, seeks to prove that while a man may be no older than he feels, he is most unwise to go in for athletics and matrimony after the arteries begin to harden. John L. Shine, an Irish actor, who has played numerous parts in America, has brought the piece over after seeing it as a success in London and Dublin. Its chances here are not so good.

T. C. Murray is the author. His oldish hero is Owen Keegan, a lusty lad of sixty odd, who decides that he is one of God's exceptions. Being still young in heart and having a home without a mistress at its head, he proposes to Nance Desmond, a pretty girl about his daughter's age. Nance, with an eye to the Keegan property, forgets her earlier flirtations with the Keegan son, Michael, and agrees to marry Owen. A few days later the old gentleman sets out to tame a fractious mare and is tossed into a ditch, which takes most of the youth out of him.

He still is keen for marrying Nance, however, and she is loyal. They are duly joined and a year later father catches Michael kissing his stepmother. She was really sending him away because she had begun to consider his presence a men-

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

ALTHOUGH November is, and long has been regarded as, the best month for the theater,—meaning, of course, for the box-office,—attendance isn't what the statistical charts say it ought to be. Harvest-time in the big cities has for many years been the six or seven weeks between October 15 and the Saturday immediately following Thanksgiving. Business is off, even for the outstanding successes: and the managers are baffled, sad, and, as they seek to explain it, reasonably incoherent. They are, I suspect, about right when they say that the average in the quality of entertainment now on sale is as high as for any other November in the last fifteen years; and they don't have to boast to say that.

NAZIMOVA She's bill-topping this week in the Palace in a new sketch.

This shearing-off in ticket-buying is not a phenomenon merely local to Chicago: few of the shows in New-York are successful; and some of the things regarded as certain wows when staged there are not getting the money to meet bills out of the box-office. The current issue of Variety tells that not fewer than thirty-five of the New-York theaters (of which there are now seventy, I think) had seats last Monday night on sale in the cut-rate places; and Monday was the eve of election-day, which is something of a real holiday down there.

Most of the new plays staged in New-York so far this season seem, from reports, to be either uncommonly bad or uncommonly uninteresting; whereas, in Chicago, ninety per cent of the things that are new has had such advantage as may reside in a New-York test. With the exception of "Coal-Oil Jennie," "Bubbling Over," and Le Maire's Affairs, everything shown last week in Chicago had been previously submitted to New-York. When a producer brings hither something that has been an unqualified failure there, neither he nor the owner of the theater where the failure is housed has a logical grievance if the attendance does not pay out the costs. The four marked successes among the plays and shows current here were successes when given in New-York. There is, as is demonstrated season after season, nothing inevitable about this, however: Chicago not infrequently goes a bit dotty about diversions that are rated as piteous merchandise in Broadway. And among the pieces not doing so well here is one that was classified as a try-to-get-in success last season in Manhattan.

What Passes as Candescent Text on the Stage.

The wisecrack is the species of repartee that from time immemorial has been accompanied on the vaudeville and burlesque stages either by a boot applied to its sponsor's seat or by a newspaper applied to his nose. It is humor that proceeds in no wise from character but simply from a dummy that serves as the mouthpiece of a ventriloquial stage writer. It relies for laughter solely upon itself; what has gone before it, whether in dialogue or character, drawing or dramatic action or what not, is utterly immaterial. It may be isolated from its context and, unlike true comedic humor, lose nothing in the process. And it is today the worst handicap under which American comedy writing is laboring. It has come to the stage directly from the movie sub-title, and it has reduced dramatic composition on a wide-reaching plane to the level of such gag sub-titles.—George Jean Nathan in the American Mercury for November.

Again!

The drama is again on the verge of being saved, it seems. Literature comes by mail from the founders of the Theater Creative, with offices in New-York, projects for schools of acting, of play-writing, of dancing, and of what are known as "the allied arts," and an advisory board chairmanned by none other than the Honorouable James J. Walker, Mayor of New-York. Percy Mackaye is on the board. So, too, is William Lyon Phelps, who talks and writes more and knows less about the drama than anybody else in the United States—with the possible exception of Mr. Mackaye. The labors of these and their fellow-boardmen are, it is told, "dedicated to the first all-American theater," whatever that may imply; and they say that "they do feel decidedly that not enough substantial encouragement has been given to the American dramatist."

Now, if anybody in this comical old world has had a full and complete measure of encouragement in the last twenty years, it has been the same American dramatist. His plays are in use wherever there are theaters, and are acted in all the tongues and languages and dialects. His royalties come from all the lands, and are paid on the healthy valuation of the American dollar. The London editors are screaming with rage because the British playwrights are unable to compete with the American. Each year is marked by fewer importations; and each year ends with fewer importations successful here.

Miscellany.

Winthrop Ames definitely states that he will follow his successful New-York revival of "Iolanthe" with one of "The Pirates of Penzance." The former piece, when taken off, will have had a run there of thirty-two weeks; and that is not only a record for "Iolanthe," but also a record for any Gilbert-and-Sullivan piece in New-York with the possible exception of "The Mikado" when it was new.

Basil Dean, a London stage-director who has transferred his activities to this country, says he will soon undertake a lecture-tour, with Chicago in his itinerary; and I'm all a-wonder as to what he will talk about. . . . He is about to produce in New-York "The Constant Nymph," the dramatization being his, and Noël Coward's "This Was a Man!" which was banned by the English censor when known as "Who Cares?"

An impending new play, by Tom Cushing, is called "The Devil in the Cheese." . . . One from London is named "Glamour." . . . "The Wooden Kimono" is another new one. . . . "Gertie" is a fourth.

Miss Roberta Arnold is to act in "Sisters Three"; and Miss Eva Le Gallienne is acting in "Three Sisters." The former piece is, however, something that is newly rewritten after a try-out which, among other things, revealed that it possessed what was called at the time one of the most shocking lines ever spoken on the American stage.

Chic Sale, an amusing impersonator out of the varieties, is to be Lincoln in a sketch by Miss Ida M. Tarbell;—and the sketch is part of a show prepared for the New-York Winter Garden!

"Polly with a Past," wherein Miss Ina Claire made her first appearance in the "legitimate" as one of Mr. Belasco's stars, is to be made into a song-and-dance piece by the young men who bored us so with "Dearest Enemy."

Miss Lucille Watson, Miss Frieda Inescourt, J. Stewart Baird, and Miss Martha Lorber, the dancer, are to be with Miss Irene Bordoni in the translated version of Sacha Guitry's "Mozart." . . . A probability is that she will be acting it in New-York when the Guitrys, themselves, start their engagement there in the original text of the play.

Having built a theater in New-York and named it for himself, John Golden is negotiating with the Theater Guild to take it over and manage it.

Pilgrim's Progress Is by Primrose Path

ace to her soul's harmony, but it did not look much like a good-by kiss to Owen. He was sorely tempted to disown his son on the spot, or murder him, but he had to be content with sending him away and the play ends with Nance on her knees begging the old man's forgiveness.

The best part in the play is that of Keegan's embittered daughter who fights to the end to prevent the old gentleman from making a fool of himself and then stays on to help him get his health back after he does it. An Irish actress named Una O'Connor has come over to play this and does it so well I have a feeling she will stay on.

Casualties Increase.

As the competition strengthens the casualties increase. Walter Hampden has practically put "The Immortal Thief," aside for the dramatization of Browning's "Ring and the Book" that he has played from time to time on tour. "Caponsacchi" he calls it, after the hero-priest. The change does not, at the moment, appear to have strengthened his position in upper Broadway. Much of the Browning verse is pleasantly set in the play, but as drama it is labored and theatrical.

John Golden, opening his new theater in 58th street has taken "Two Girls Wanted" from the Little Theater and moved it into the new house. This little comedy has grown into a trail success, somewhat as "Pigs" did even after the wiser theater crowd had refused to have much to do with it. The Golden theater is attractively Spanish in furnishing and design, but is somewhat obscurely placed on the upper edge of the theater district.

"Deep River," the Stallings-Harlin native opera, gave up the fight Saturday and many were saddened. It was a fine thing to do and Arthur Hopkins, with his usual confidence and prodigality did it beautifully. How much of his "What Price Glory?" profits he lost in the venture I do not know, but it must have cost him close to $100,000.

"White Wings" Clipped.

Winthrop Ames is also about to pay the price of his overconfidence in and fondness for a play the crowd refuses to accept. This is Philip Barry's "White Wings" an intelligent and amusing satire, but much too jumbled and loosely motivated to hold the attention of the crowd. This, if you have forgotten it, is the play that visualizes the last stand of the Inches, white wings for generations, against the onsweep of the horseless carriage that put them out of business. It closes Saturday night.

Brock Pemberton is thinking, so Brock Pemberton says, and thinking seriously, of giving midnight performances of "Loose Ankles." New York night life, he reasons, has grown at such a pace the night clubs can no longer take care of the sleepless owls and their out of town friends. Therefore he purposes trying the 12-2:30 a. m. performance as a regular thing.

Fred and Dorothy at Home.

The Stones are back in a new one called "Criss Cross," after the hero, Christopher Cross. It is a gorgeously dressed combination of nursery tales and expert dancing. Frederick is slowing up a little and letting Dorothy carry as much of the burden of the show as she can, and that is considerable. "Criss Cross" is, I think, somewhat less varied and less novel than the recent Stone offerings. But it is the one show on the Broadway list that the family guardians feel they can always be sure of, and it is doing the usual big business. Dorothy is still a lovely dancer.

Sousa's Here Today for His Annual Pair of Joyous Concerts

John Philip Sousa manages to put Chicago into his itinerary once a year, whether he be in one of his long tours or in what he calls his by-season, which is every other season, when he cuts down his work to a matter of two or three months, and devotes the other part of the year to an assortment of his favorite sports—one of which is work. This is his by-season; and he will soon be off with a gun across his shoulder, hunting and shooting wherever the hunting and shooting are good. And today is the day of his annual visit, with a concert in the afternoon and another in the evening in the Auditorium, and a dinner with his friends, pals, and the musical celebrities of the town between performances. As has been his custom in recent years, he will use the same program afternoon and evening.

As to the contents of that program, it is all a matter, as usual, of whether you pay heed to what's set down for him to play, which is plenty, or to what he decides to play in the way of extras and added numbers and that plentiful legniappe which his audiences always importune him for. He has, as usual, new things in his bill—new things of his own and of others' writing. His humoresque for this season is named "The Wets and the Drys," and has already been described, as to point and contents, in THE TRIBUNE. Lieutenant Sousa is of the opinion that the elections being over doesn't matter as to this bit of farce in music: there wouldn't, he seems to think, have been any issue last Tuesday if a mere election could settle it. Among the new marches of his program is one composed for the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial. Then, there is a suite, "The Three S's," made up of his arrangement of Johann Strauss' "Morning Journals," Sir Arthur Sullivan's "The Lost Chord," and the March-King's own piece called "Mars and Venus." It seems unnecessary to add that the unprinted list of added numbers includes "The Stars-and-Stripes Forever," although there may be persons with enough imagination to think of a Sousa concert without that march, written just as we went to war with Spain, in 1898.

The weighty matter of the program includes an overture to Stephen Phillips' play of "Herod" composed by Henry K Hadley and Tschaikowsky's symphonic poem named "Le Voyvode." R. Nathanial Dett, whose name is growingly familiar in programs, will be represented by his transcription and arrangement of the old Negro dance commonly known as "Juba." And there will be solos by Miss Marjorie Moody, the coloratura soprano, and John Dolan, the cornetist. Miss Moody's will be "The Blue Danube," regarded by many persons as the loveliest of all ballroom waltzes.

Incoming Shows

Tomorrow Night:

"Sins of Sins" in the Adelphi.—A play by William Hurlbut which Mr. A. H. Woods just dreads to produce because it happens to be, he says, something like the French piece named "La Prisonnière," which is about a Lesbian. The new play—heretofore known as "Hymn to Venus"—has had a try-out in Atlantic City. H. Reeves-Smith, Miss Ruth Shepley, Robert Warwick, and Miss Isabel Elsom are mentioned as of the cast. . . . "The Ghost Train" is held over for a performance tonight.

Otis Skinner in "The Honor of the Family" in the Blackstone.—Return to Chicago, after an absence of more than two years, of the popular actor in his second revival of a piece based on Balzac that was first shown in Chicago, in the Grand Opera-House, in 1908. Mr. Skinner has in this what has been regarded for nearly twenty years as one of his best rôles.

Wednesday Night:

"The Game of Love and Death" in the Goodman Memorial.—First time in Chicago of one of a cycle of plays by Romain Rolland with the French Revolution as background: to be acted by the "professional" performers of the theater.

November 14:

"In This Room" in the Princess.—A new piece by Edward Locke, who won a measure of celebrity years ago with "The Climax." The incoming play was formerly known as "The Leap." Louis Wolheim, Miss Olive Tell, Miss Maude Odell, and Donald Gallaher are in it. . . . The Princess is "dark" until the 14th.

November 21:

"The Butter-and-Egg Man," with Gregory Kelly, in the Selwyn.—A comic play about showmen and their alleged art by George S. Kaufman. It was acted through about all of last season in New-York.

November 22:

"Young Woodley," with Glenn Hunter, in the Blackstone.—An English play about the awakening of biologic consciousness in a schoolboy, with Mr. Hunter here for the first time since his engagement, in 1923, in "Merton of the Movies." The play had a long run last season in New-York.

November 28:

"The Open Door," with Miss Mabel McCain, in the Playhouse.—A piece by Walter Lawrence, who will be in the cast with Miss McCain: she is recalled easily by patrons of song-and-dance shows and of the two-a-day.

December 19:

The Ziegfeld Follies in the Illinois.—A show that has had a New-York run under the name of the Ziegfeld Revue: the Follies label is restored because of the settlement of certain litigation that seemed to affect its values.

December 27:

Miss Ina Claire in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" in the Blackstone.—The popular comédienne in the piece by Frederick Lonsdale wherein she had a long run last season in New-York. Roland Young and James Dale will be with her.

A Doubtful Import.

An English piece by an Irish author, "Distinguished Villa," was passed up by the "regular" producers in this country. It has been taken for use here by the manager of a Newark (N. J.) theater, who thinks he knows a good play when he sees one in London. . . . George Jean Nathan, who has been looking at the plays abroad, writes in the American Mercury that he discerns nothing in "Distinguished Villa" to warrant him in tearing his clothes with joy.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

So far as they are known, the plays and shows definitely dated for Chicago are, as usual, assembled in this issue of THE TRIBUNE under an appropriate heading. Readers who have vainly undertaken to utilize managers' announcements as a guide in planning their theater-going more than a week ahead do not need now to be told here that such bulletins are not binding. As usual, shows are scarce; and the gentlemen responsible for rates and taxes on buildings used, if not always suitable for, theatrical entertainments are not certain what they are going to do for didoes on their platforms. . . .

However, it appears to be certain that the show named "The Great Temptations," taken out of the New-York Winter Garden last night after a run of five months, will be brought into the Apollo soon in succession to the Greenwich Village Follies. . . . It has been explained here that a Vitaphone bill will be put into the Woods when, three weeks hence, Le Maire's Affairs is moved out. . . . "The Noose," a current New-York success, is a possibility for the Playhouse after "The Open Door," whose sponsors say they have arranged for a stay of ten weeks. If not "The Noose," then, maybe, the play about divorce by Judge Sabath: I think it is called "Trial-Divorce." Anyway, negotiations for the revue named "Americana" in the Playhouse by a second cast are off, and that entertainment, if brought here at all, will be housed by the Messrs. Shubert. . . .

Many other plays and shows—many that is, in the relative use of the adjective: shows are scarce, as has been observed—are casually mentioned as impending Chicago diversion; but nobody in authority seems to know when or where—or, in some cases, why. . . . One is "Broadway," with a second cast. Another is "Countess Maritza," also with a second cast. A third is "Yes! Yes, Yvette!" which, as yet, has but cast to its name. A fellow who has been touring in the Dominion a comic piece named "So, This Is Canada!" would like to obtain a theater for it in Chicago, but has been told to have a try with it first, by way of a gradual approach to American tastes, in Detroit.

New in Manhattan.

These are the new things bulletined for the week in the New-York theaters:

"Oh, Kay!" by P. G. Wodehouse, Guy Bolton, Ira Gershwin, and George Gershwin, with Miss Gertrude Lawrence, Oscar Shaw, and Victor Moore. . . . Miss Lawrence is the English song-and-dance comédienne who came to this country late in 1923 with the Charlot Revue, and returned in 1925 for a second venture. She made her first Chicago appearance last season in the Selwyn, and was liked.

"Naked," by Luigi Pirandello, with Augustin Duncan and Miss Marguerite Risser. . . . The author is an Italian playwright whose works are talked about with much heat and argument and praise by persons who never buy theater-tickets; so far, those staged in this country have been losers.

"Princess Turandot," a new version in English by Henry G. Alsberg and Isaac Don Levine of Carlo Gazzi's famous fantasy of "Turandot." The production is one of those Greenwich Village ventures; and the actors, if any, don't matter.

"First Love," the piece made by Miss Zoë Akins from Louis Verneuil's "Pile ou Face!" with Miss Fay Painter and the players with her in the recent experiment with the play at the Selwyn.

"Gay Paree," which is a second issue of the so-called revue of that title shown here last season to big audiences in the Apollo, with Miss Winnie Lightner, Chic Sale, the Rath Brothers, Frank Gaby, and Richard Bold.

"Old Bill, M. P.," by Bruce Bairnsfather, with Charles Coburn, Laurence D'Orsay, and Charles McNaughton. . . . This is meant as a sequel to "The Better 'Ole," the play by Captain Bairnsfather in which De Wolf Hopper performed early in 1919 in the Illinois. Mr. Coburn was Old Bill in the earlier piece with the cast that made it known in New-York.

"Head or Tail?" from an Hungarian comedy by Laszlo Lakatos, with Philip Merivale and Miss Estelle Winwood.

"The Squall," by Jean Bart (a newcomer), with Miss Blanche Yurka, Lee Baker, Miss Suzanne Caubet, Horace Braham, and Miss Mary Fowler.

And Miss Eva Le Gallienne adds "John Gabriel Borkman" to the répertoire she is performing at a dollar-fifty down there.

While Charles Gilpin will take up his old rôle of the title in one of New-York's every-week-or-so revivals of Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones."

F. D.

ABASHED?

MISS ISABEL ELSOM

She's in "Sin of Sins"; and it may be that, because of the awful things told of the new piece, she isn't looking the public straight in the eye. . . . Miss Elsom is new in Chicago, so far as the easy records show.

THEY'RE AMONG THE WEEK'S PERFORMERS

MISS JESSIE ROYCE LANDIS — MISS HELEN GILLIGAN

MISS ROYCE, a native of Evanston (Ill.), has the principal feminine part in Mr. Skinner's revival, in the Blackstone, of "The Honor of the Family." She was known as an earnest amateur when, three years ago, she took up a part in the piece called "The Highwayman" when it was performed in the Playhouse by Joseph Schildkraut and others; and she afterward acted in the Palace (now the Erlanger) with that other recruit from the Yiddish stage, Jacob Ben-Ami, in a boiled-down version of "Samson and Delilah."

Miss Gilligan is regularly the singer of a small part in "Princess Flavia"; but her importance in the operetta now to be heard in the Four Cohans resides in her being understudy of the title-part. Although she has had but a brief career in the theater, she has already (and successfully, 'tis averred) sung the part on occasions when Miss Evelyn Herbert has been out of the cast.

Old Standby, 'Aida,' Opens Opera Season

By Edward Moore.

ago. But three or four years later he heard an orchestra in Chicago in what he describes as a big lake front hotel that has dining room terraced in a circle around the dance floor—further description not given. The band of eight "made music, languishing, crooning music, rude neither in sound nor tempo, music that soothed, and yet, with insinuating rhythms, ear tickling melody, and insinuating decorations, stirred me within."

For a foreword he quotes from Arnold Bennett:

"As regards the spirit, the latest generation has rediscovered, or is rediscovering, the great secrets—lost since the Elizabethan age—that the chief thing in life is to feel that you are fully alive, that continual repression is absurd, that dullness is a social crime, that the present is quite as important as the future, that life ought not to be a straight line, but a series of ups and downs, and that moments of ecstasy are the finest moments and the summits of existence."

Wherefore to Mr. Osgood jazz is as much as anything a state of mind, and on such lines he analyzes and expounds that state's music. Taking a rapid historical course through ragtime, spirituals, and blues, he finally reaches the jazz orchestra and the anatomy of jazz orchestration. Some of his most interesting items are reproductions of scores made by Ferdie Grofe for Paul Whiteman's orchestra.

Gershwin, the White Hope.

Much of the book deals with the personalities of jazz: Grofe, Whiteman, Irving Berlin, who, to Mr. Osgood, is a genius; George Gershwin, who is the white hope. This last is because while Berlin evolves tunes of high value, Gershwin knows enough about the technical side of composition to develop his own material at length, as he did in the "Rhapsody in Blue" and his piano concerto. Incidentally you may be interested, as I was, in finding a few pages of the music of both pieces, not proof-read with ideal care, but, in spite of their mistakes, setting down the outstanding points of both.

No, he is not down on jazz. He does not even defend it. He just likes it at its best, and tells why. Not that he accepts it all, by any means. A good part of what comes out of tin pan alley dies quickly and with his entire approval, and so far he has failed to get enthusiastic over the efforts of highly educated musicians to get into the jazz state of mind. But to him Mr. Gershwin's piano concerto in F "is one of the most important contributions to American musical literature ever made." And he grows positively lyrical over the Whiteman orchestra, in which he apparently was joined by a good part of the other New York music critics, and a few in Chicago.

Having already quoted the Bennett foreword, I might as well add the Osgood last word:

"Already jazz has shown itself to be the first art innovation originating in America to be accepted seriously in Europe and acknowledged as purely American. Only time will tell whether it is to become a school in serious music, an acknowledged influence in the music of the world.

"Will there arise a super-Gershwin to develop it far, far away from its faults? That, to become a real note in world music, it must rid itself of certain limitations is patent. In another ten years, twenty years, we shall know its fate. And if, as is not unlikely, it withers and dies, still only the popular dance music of the day, to be succeeded by some new form that catches the popular fancy, at least the honor of having been the first and only original art that the United States of America has brought forth in a century and a half of trying can never be taken away from it."

All of which seems reasonably sane doctrine.

Concerts Crowd Opera Week.

By way of giving musical attendants plenty to hear on this, the first week of the opera season, some important concerts are scheduled, evidently on the theory that if a little music is a good thing, a lot is much better, a case where logic sometimes bogs down. A few regular concert appointments have been deferred, but as a preliminary to the opera, this afternoon and evening you can take your choice of eleven different events.

On Tuesday morning, at the nearest possible hour to the operatic opening, Lucrezia Bori, she of the Metropolitan and Ravinia, and Nikolai Orloff, pianist, will give a joint recital at the Blackstone hotel. Miss Bori is certainly important, and Mr. Orloff, who is new here, is said to be. In the afternoon the Chicago Symphony orchestra will give a concert. Albert Spalding, the violinist, will play the Beethoven Concerto, while Mr. Stock and his men will play Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" Overture, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Stravinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu" Suite. In the evening Richard Czerwonky will conduct the Woman's Symphony orchestra at the Goodman. The program has so far been kept a secret except that Lillian Magnuson, pianist, will appear as soloist.

Wednesday night will bring Sophie Brasiau, concerning whom a recent communication indicated that she permitted herself to be advertised as the Caruso of contraltos, and Alfred Cortot, the French pianist, at Orchestra hall. Thursday night there will be a "pop" by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Friday afternoon and Saturday night the Chicago Symphony orchestra will appear in its regular series. On this program there will be two novelties, D'Indy's Third Symphony and Ibert's Concerto for cello with woodwinds and brasses. Alfred Wallenstein, the principal cellist of the orchestra, will play it, also Haydn's Concerto in D.

Yes, and the B. Dembinski Singing society of South Chicago extends to one and all a cordial invitation to be present at its thirtieth anniversary concert this afternoon at Bessemer Park Assembly hall, 89th street and Manistee avenue.

Here and There in Music.

The Chicago Gramophone society sends word of its first open meeting of the year at Lyon & Healy hall Tuesday night. Membership in the society is open to any one interested in the development of recorded music and the recording instrument.

The Chicago Bach chorus will give another concert at Orchestra hall Nov. 18. The program will be entirely from the works of the composer whose name has been taken by the organization. Jacques Gordon, violinist, and Edward Rechlin, organist, will be the soloists.

Mary Garden, it is said, has promised to sing some time this season with Rochester Opera company. She was reported as highly enthusiastic over the entire Eastman musical organization, but she did not set the date for appearance there, and neither did they.

LUCREZIA BORI.
[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

AS the star of two opera companies to the audience of a third, she will appear in song recital at the Blackstone hotel Tuesday morning in company with Nikolai Orloff, the young Russian pianist. Part of her program will consist of Iberian folk songs from the southern part of Spain. She comes from Valencia, but there has been no advance information as to whether she will sing it.

We search the output of the studios for the brightest, cleverest pictures and we hasten with them to you. For instance, Corinne Griffith's new picture, "Syncopating Sue," is very, very original. The great Chicago Theatre, next week, proudly displays it. Doug Fairbanks' picture in natural colors; "The Black Pirate," at the Roosevelt, is one of the most remarkable we have ever shown.

Wampas Gets Ready to Judge Baby Stars

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Wampas elections are imminent, and while that may not mean as much to one outside of Hollywood, it is the big excitement here.

The Wampas (Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers) is getting ready to play fairy godfather to thirteen young picture girls who have shown promise of future greatness.

The girls will be introduced to Hollywood and the general public at the annual Wampas ball some time after the first of the year. This custom has been going on for the last six years, and the Wampas ball has grown to be the biggest social event in the yearly calendar of picturedom.

Forty names, so far, have been handed in as possible Wampas starlet candidates. These names include Helene Costello, younger sister of Dolores, who has had many leading roles and some minor ones, including a small rôle as Mary Astor's maid in "Don Juan"; a lead with Rin Tin Tin; work with Willard Louis; Irene Rich's daughter in "The Doormat," and a lead opposite Raymond Griffith in "Wet Paint." Helene is a candidate from Warner Brothers, her only disadvantage being that she is a sister of a celebrity, in this case Dolores Costello. Many young picture girls find kinship more of a hindrance than a help.

Possible "Baby" Stars.

Myrna Loy, who played Estelle Taylor's maid in "Don Juan," and rôles in "Across the Pacific" and "My Official Wife," is another Warner candidate, as is Jane Winton, who played the unfaithful wife in the prologue to Don Juan.

Mary MacAlister, who will be remembered as the child star who used to work at Essanay years ago and who was Red Grange's charmer in Red's recent football picture, besides playing with Conrad Nagel in "The Waning Sex" as the baby vamp, is another promising Wampas candidate.

Martha Sleeper, who is so young that she is still having a tutor on the set to fulfill her educational requirements, is considered another likely choice. She has played leads in comedy at Hal Roach's, one with Charlie Chase being named "Long Fliv the King."

More Candidates.

Tola D'Avril, who played in Christie comedies for some time, but is now with First National, is another likely candidate. She started out as a model, one of the fourteen most beautiful women in the world, so Paramount said, who were used as mannequins in Leatrice Joy's "The Dressmaker from Paris," which showed a southern Illinois town with a railroad station surrounded by palm trees.

Iris Stuart and Lotus Thompson are Lasky's bets along with Jean Navelle. Lotus Thompson is an Australian girl now playing one of the dangerous blonds in Adolphe Menjou's new picture, "Blonde or Brunette." Jean Navelle has done little, but seems promising; she is new in films.

Dorothy Gulliver has done comedy work and is prominent in the baby star list. Barbara Kent is a delegate from the westerns. The longer the list grows the keener the competition for election.

In past years some famous names have graced the Wampas roster. Some of the old Wampas baby stars were Eleanor Boardman, Laura LaPlante, Colleen Moore, Mary Philbin, Claire Windsor, Dolores Costello and Patsy Ruth Miller.

Colman Plays Gypsy Rôle.

Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are making an emotional and thrilling new picture together. The rôle of Colman is that of a good hearted Spanish gypsy bandit chief, incidentally his first rôle in costume. The costume, alas, is not as elaborate as might be desired by the feminine admirers of the handsome swarthy lovemaker, but it is attractive.

The usually smooth Colman pompadour is ruffled and curly and hangs in cute tufts and ringlets over his forehead. A rought but swagger gypsy coat studded with metal buttons and accompanied by high hip boots of leather clothe this Spanish Robinhood, who is out to get vengeance because the wicked lord claiming an old feudal right abducted the gypsy's bride on the wedding night. The gypsy bride killed herself in the lord's castle.

Vilma Banky, as a daughter of the noblesse and bride of the lord, is abducted in turn on her bridal night by Colman in revenge for his lost bride.

Montagu Love as the feudal lord looked lordly, indeed, in a beautiful pale pink and silver costume, all slashed, embroidered, and berumfled.

Vilma Banky, who wears a quantity of blond curls in her rôle as duchess, frankly admitted that she longed for the popular bobbed hair with its comfort, but as she plays ladies who are abducted so much of the time bobbed hair would be out of character. Film producers just won't believe a man could abduct a bobbed haired flapper; she must have the long hair of innocence and tradition.

Laura La Plante announces her wedding to William Seiter, director for Universal, will take place Nov. 14, at Hollywood Congregational church.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer, send stamped, self-addressed envelope—please!

Real Enthusiasts.

Dear Miss Tinée: I would have given a great deal if you and Harold Lloyd could have been part of the optience at our local second rate movie house when they showed "The Freshman." Our first run movie palace had it a year or so ago, of course, but the enthsuiastic optience there was blasé in comparison to these fans.

It took heaps of coaxing on the part of the 11 year old to get me into this last stand of the nickelodeons with its automatic grind organ, but never will I forget that show. The small house was packed mostly with the younger generation, all football maniacs, and you should have heard the screaming! They literally raised the roof. Red Grange in his heyday never inspired an audience to the yelling heights reached by these Harold fans in his justly famous football game. Honestly, such support, sympathy, and enthusiasm would have thrilled you through and through; and Mr. Lloyd would have been inspired to make another masterpiece. No Grauman premiere was ever like this.

It was really the greatest impulsive demonstration I have ever witnessed, these adoring young ones doing it far better than even those past masters of the art, the French, the bombastic Italians or the emotional Spaniards at their greatest moments. I cannot overcome a feeling of irreparable loss and regret because you and Mr. Lloyd were not there, and that is why I took my pad in hand to tell you about it to the accompaniment of Mr. Larson's marvelous recital.

The log in the fireplace has burned to embers, tantalizing odors are drifting through from the kitchen in spite of closed doors. They just said "dinner is ready," so au revoir, Miss Tinée.

See you tomorrow at breakfast.

C. B. W.

Editor's Note: What fun! I should love to have been there and so, I am sure, would Mr. Lloyd.

BOYS UP IN THE ATTIC SEEK NEW RADIO WONDERS

Young Researchers Have No Time for Shows.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Because of the absence of small boys at radio shows this season, officials in charge of numerous forthcoming radio expositions throughout the country are installing special features to interest those young pioneers to which the development of broadcasting owes so much.

In past years the boys have stormed the various booths to such an extent that the fathers and mothers who went with them could not even see the sets. Added to this the boys caused the exhibitors consternation by carrying away tons of literature. This year it has proved quite different. The grownups have been there in undreamed of numbers but not the boys. The question is then, "Where are the boys?"

Seek New Fields.

Until fairly recently they were interested in ordinary long wave broadcasting because it was new and had many mysteries. Today this sort of broadcasting is an old story as far as the youth is concerned. They care not for listening to the smyphonies and the opera stars. While dad and mother are entranced in the parlor listening in, the boys are up in the attic trying to talk around the world with their short wave sets, which by the way, require less power than an ordinary flatiron.

Hoover Pays Tribute.

The boys are evolving new ideas in short wave transmission and reception keeping track of polar expeditions and such like and at the same time making friends in foreign lands thousands of miles away. For instance, the other night a youngster in New York listened to a lad in Australia talking with an amateur in Greece.

It was Secretary Hoover who paid tribute to the amateur "embracing as he does that most beloved party in the United States—the American boy."

"The small boy amateur forms the line of cheerfulness in the radio world," Mr. Hoover added. "True these boys present some problems. I get letters from mothers because their boys won't go to bed at night. I don't see what the department of commerce can do about this except, perhaps, to remind the mothers of the advantages derived by the radio keeping the boys home at night.

Boys Have a Remedy.

"Likewise the boy makes it possible for his mother and father to have the use of an intricate receiving set, which—without the boy to run it—wouldn't last a month.

"I was very much amused at a group of boys who came to my office recently in connection with some new radio control regulations. 'You've got a good set-up here,' I said, 'but how are you going to enforce it?' There was no response, and finally I pressed one of the boys for an answer and he said, 'Well, Mr. Hoover, if these fellows don't do as we tell them, we will go out and beat them up.' I notice we never had an trouble enforcing the amateur regulations, and that may be the answer."

Already C. Francis Jenkins, the Quaker inventor, is enlisting the aid of the youngsters in developing radio photography. The boys will soon tackle television, or "seeing by radio" and simplify it, according to Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson. It is no wonder then that managers are concerning themselves regarding the non-attendance of these boys at radio expositions, for it appears they are far too valuable an asset for the industry to lose.

MARLOWE ON AIR

JULIA MARLOWE.

Julia Marlowe, foremost American actress of Shakespearean rôles, comes out of retirement from the stage to present her art before the biggest audience of her career—the radio audience. Miss Marlowe has been announced as the star of the program to be broadcast next Tuesday evening from New York through W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

Thousands of listeners who have seen and heard Miss Marlowe on the stage and millions of others who have neither seen nor heard her, will hear Miss Marlowe's voice in contributions that draw upon her memorable Shakespearean répertoire, that tap Kipling, and that bring a message to former service men and families of service men.

U. S. GIVES OUT RULES ON RADIO INSTALLATION

Bureau of Standards Tells the "How" of It

A new handbook has been issued by the bureau of standards as a part of the national code which contains safety rules governing radio installations. It will be found of value to operators and owners of transmitting stations and to listeners generally, because it contains many valuable rules for the installation of radio receiving equipment. Among these may be mentioned the following:

Antenna supports must be sufficiently rigid and of such size as to withstand any load which may come on them. Attachment to chimneys should be avoided. Metal poles or masts extending more than ten feet above the the supporting building must be permanently and effectively grounded.

Locations involving crossings over railroads and supply lines should be avoided, but where no other location is possible special rules are given for the installation.

In the case of receiving stations, lead in conductors shall be not less than No. 14 A. W. G. in diameter, if of copper, nor less than No. 17 A. W. G. if made of bronze or copper-covered steel. Clearances are given between lead-in wires and other conductors on the building and it is recommended that lead-in conductors be "securely fastened in a workman like manner."

For receiving stations, grounds must not be made of gas pipes, but should be made to cold-water pipes, if these are connected to a street main. An outlet pipe from a water tank fed by a street main or a well may be used, provided such outlet pipe is adequately bonded to the inlet pipe connected to the street main or well. Where the wire is attached suitable clamps must be used and the entire surface of the pipe covered by the clamp must be scraped clean.

Rules for the application of protective devices, such as lightning arresters, and antenna grounding switch are also given. Each lead-in conductor for a receiving station must be provided with a lightning arrester, even if an antenna grounding switch is used. The arrester may be either outside the building, or inside, if away from combustible materials.

This handbook is known as No. 9 and may be obtaind from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. for ten cents.

IN NEW ZEALAND, TALKS TO PORTLAND PARTNER BY HOOKUP OF HAMS

Portland, Ore., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Although separated from his business by thousands of miles while on a trip to New Zealand recently, A. J. Baldwin of this city was kept in constant touch with his firm's affairs through the coöperation of amateur radio stations in New Zealand with the station of A. C. Dixon Jr., radio 7IT, Portland amateur, the son of Mr. Baldwin's business partner.

When the New Zealand trip was originally planned it was not thought possible to maintain any regular communication with the United States, owing to the overcrowded condition of the cables. However, soon after establishing headquarters at Wellington Mr. Baldwin received word from an amateur at Auckland that he had just received several messages from Dixon's station in the United States relating to business affairs. This relay work was so encouraging that it was decided to find out if any amateur at Wellington could maintain a schedule with the United States amateur. A few nights later E. A. Shrimpton, operating 2XA at Wellington, got in touch with Dixon at Portland, and thereafter the two maintained regular nightly schedules. On two occasions Mr. Baldwin went to the home of the Wellington amateur and carried on a two way conversation direct with his partner in the States. In addition to these exchanges several 500 and 800 word messages were transmitted.

OLD CANTERBURY TO BROADCAST ARMISTICE DAY

Cathedral Organ to Be Heard on Air.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 6. — Canterbury cathedral's famous organ service will be broadcast Armistice day, Nov. 11, between 10:45 and 11:15, as a part of the special ceremonies which are being organized throughout England in commemoration of that day. In the afternoon the evensong from Westminster abbey will be broadcast.

Marconi officials are enthusiastic about the success of the new wireless beam transmitting station at Bodmin, which will be opened for operation within the next few days. It is said that after messages have been sent to Bodmin by land they will be transmitted automatically without any human intervention. To insure accuracy a special loud speaker will repeat the message as it is being keyed, and the messages will be transmitted at the rate of 100 words a minute.

5 Prime Ministers on Air.

Listeners next month will have the opportunity of hearing the speeches of five of the prime ministers of the British dominions. They will be broadcast from the Guildhall and the Savoy. The chairman at the Guildhall will be the lord chancellor, Lord Cave, and the speakers will be Mr. Bruce, Australia; Mr. Coates, New Zealand; Mr. McKenzie King, Canada; Mr. Munroe, Newfoundland, and Gen. Hertzog, South Africa.

The British Broadcasting company announced that among those who will be present at the second of the B. B. C. national concerts at Albert hall are George Bernhard Shaw, who recently got into a row with the broadcasting people because they refused to broadcast his birthday speech on the grounds it was too controversial.

Theosophists to Use Radio.

The Australian section of the followers of J. Krishnamurti, now in America, who is hailed by Theosophists all over the world as the "vehicle of the new messiah," are arranging for a new plan by which the message when it comes into the world can reach as many lodges as possible. The Australian Theosophical society has now obtained a license from the government to erect a broadcasting station at Sidney for this purpose.

Mrs. Annie Besant and Krishnamurti are expected to be in Australia early next year, and then they will probably be the first to use the new method of propaganda.

PADDY DRISCOLL, GRIDIRON STAR, ON W-G-N MONDAY

Paddy Driscoll, star of countless gridiron contests and quarter back of the Chicago Bears, local professional football team which is leading the National league in the football championship race, will be heard over W-G-N tomorrow evening at 6:50 o'clock in a talk on "Football."

Driscoll is one of the most famous players who ever donned a cleated shoe. Previous to playing professional football he starred with North... The game between the Chicago ... and Milwaukee next Sunday, ... will be broadcast by W-G-N.

SINGLE DIAL CONTROL
5 tube 5-50

Over big! Such a success! A knockout! Enthusiastic owners report amazing performance—a drum dial delivering stations loud, clear, sharp; almost an imperceptible turn of the drum apart.

Write the names of the stations on the drum; return to them night after night.

These advanced ideas in radio, including metal shielding and power tube adaptability indicate Powel Crosley, Jr.'s genius in mass production methods to lower prices.

Genuine Musicone, as pictured above, $14.75. Avoid imitations.

FIELD OF RADIO CALLS FOR MEN HIGHLY TRAINED

Subjects That Engineer Must Master.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—A properly balanced course in electrical engineering in some good college or university undoubtedly offers the best training for the average prospective radio engineer, according to C. M. Jansky Jr., assistant professor of radio engineering, University of Minnesota. "If the required work of this course does not give the student the fundamentals of electricity," Prof. Jansky said, addressing the Chicago section of the Institute of Radio engineers, "then the student should take elective courses designed to give him these fundamentals. The fact that these courses may be elective and may be titled, 'telephony and telegraphy,' or 'radio communication,' does not necessarily mean that they are any more specialized than his required courses or that the teacher is concerned only with the application of fundamentals learned elsewhere.

Things He Must Know.

"The theory of the vacuum tube, the theory of coupled circuits, the radiation of electro magnetic waves, distortion of wave form, the theory of circuits containing distributed capacitance, inductance, and resistance, and the meaning and measurements of transmission loss and gain are subjects which are not always sufficiently emphasized in average electrical engineering curricula of today for those who expect to become communication engineers.

"One outstanding characteristic of the radio communication field is the number of new problems which are met at every turn. Amateurs and broadcast listeners are continually trying new circuits and apparatus, most of them, it is true, with very little knowledge of what they are doing. The radio field offers an excellent opportunity for individual investigation on the part of the engineering student. Such work should not, however, be undertaken until the student has secured sufficient fundamental knowledge to derive some benefit from his experiments.

"One of the peculiarities of radio communication is the fact that while man designs and builds the equipment necessary for the transmission and reception of radio waves, he has no control and in fact very little knowledge of the tranmission system he uses. Radio engineering today concerns itself largely with the design and construction of transmitting and receiving apparatus. Our knowledge of what goes on between transmitter and receiver and what conditions influence the strength and readibility of signals at distant points is as yet limited. This knowledge is largely of a statistical nature based on experience.

Students As Constructors.

"In view of the importance of the transmission medium in our communication system it would seem that some contact with it by the prospective radio engineers would at least be desirable. I know of no better method of studying transmitting and receiving conditions than by the actual transmission and reception of radio messages. Many a radio engineer became interested in his field as an amateur or commercial operator.

"At the University of Minnesota department of electrical engineering we maintain an experimental radio station which serves a number of useful purposes. The station carries on extensive communication by short wave radio telegraphy with other experimental stations and amateur stations located all over the world. All construction and operation is carried on by a staff of student operators under faculty direction. This year the staff has eighteen members. The station is in operation normally about eighty hours each week. Actual transmission is carried on by men who have had extensive amateur or commercial operating experience. Its principal object is to keep both students and faculty in touch with transmitting and receiving conditions as they actually exist.

Trained Engineers Needed.

"The radio industry has enjoyed a remarkable growth during the past decade. It is not to be expected that such growth would take place without its problems. During the period when any radio manufacturer could sell equipment faster than he could make it, regardless of quality, it is a small wonder that many have seen no necessity for the services of well trained engineers. However, conditions are rapidly changing. The public is already beginning to discriminate in favor of those manufacturers whose apparatus has been designed and constructed under the supervision of competent engineers.

"This discrimination on the part of the public will do much to stimulate development and improvement."

DR. LYNN H. HOUGH TONIGHT'S SPEAKER AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

"The Voice of Saint Francis" is the topic of the address by Dr. Lynn Harold Hough of Detroit, former president of Northwestern university, to be broadcast from the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall by KYW tonight.

Rush C. Butler, a trustee of the club, will read the scripture, and Clifford W. Barnes will give the informal Bible talk at 7 on the subject, "Tales of Friendship." The Imperial Male quartet will sing at this early meeting, and at the main service the choir of 100, under the direction of Edgar Nelson, will sing "The Eternal God Is Thy Refuge" by West, "I will Lay Me Down in Peace," by Gadsby, and "Prayer," by Chadwick. John B. Miller will be the soloist of the evening in "Arise, Shine, for Thy Light Is Come," by McDermid.

Dr. Hough calls St. Francis "the most cosmopolitan of all the saints," and chose his subject in connection with the anniversary of his seven hundredth birthday.

U. S. LEADS ALL WORLD WITH ITS 5,500,000 SETS

It is estimated that between 12,000,000 and 15,000,000 radio sets are in operation throughout the world, according to a survey recently made. Of these, the United States is believed to have nearly half, or more than 5,500,000 sets.

About 900 broadcasting stations are now operating, nearly 600 being in the United States. The actual number of stations which may be operating is, of course, considerably less, owing to the number of divided time agreements in force; this practice, however, is not common in foreign countries, as the stations are fewer and the distances between them greater. The wave bands used abroad are also much wider.

"CAVALERIA" TO BE FEATURE OF W-G-N'S PROGRAM

An unusual pair of musical features will be presented by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, during the coming week, in addition to the regular daily musical offerings. Tuesday evening, between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, the W-G-N Vocal Group, assisted by the W-G-N Studio ensemble, is to present a tabloid version of Mascagni's opera, "Cavaleria Rusticana," while on Friday evening, at the same time, a picked group of musicians will offer a "Valencia Rhapsody," based on themes from the popular melody of the same name that has swept the country.

The opera is another of the series of classics that W-G-N has been offering during the fall. In order to encompass the best of the music within the range of half an hour, the opera is treated to tabloiding process that leaves only the finest of the beautiful arias, duets and quartets. These are presented by the vocal group, orchestral accompaniment being supplied by the studio ensemble. The burden of relating the narrative portions of the opera falls to the portion of the announcer, and he traces the action in a few succinct phrases that assists the novice in understanding the story.

The "Valencia Rhapsody," written exclusively for W-G-N by Alfred G. Wathall, is a marvelous musical attempt to bring out the latent musical beauties in the popular melody. Through the miracle of rythm and rearrangement, Mr. Wathall has composed a rhapsody that is singularly beautiful, and through which runs the theme song on which it is based.

WOULD REDUCE RATE.

One of the reasons given by the public utilities commission for desiring to reduce the telephone rates in Washington, D. C., is the elimination of cost of radio broadcasting through the sale of station WCAP by the telephone company to the Radio Corporation

POWER TRANSMISSION BY RADIO MARCONI'S DREAM OF FUTURE

Notwithstanding the fact that the idea has been generally discounted, it now appears to be Marconi's opinion against the field that some day broadcasting waves may be used for the transmission of power through the air without the use of wires or cables. Suggested by the development of his beam transmission between Montreal and London, Marconi, who came about as near as anybody to inventing radio, now seems to believe that radio power may be sufficiently magnified to drive distant factories.

Up to the present time, the idea has not found many backers because the estimated strength of a radio wave sent through the air by the most powerful broadcasting station is only a small per cent of the power which might be exerted by a fly or other small insect.

MARIE LOOKS TO RADIO AS AID FOR ROUMANIA

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Queen Marie will return to Roumania convinced that the development of broadcasting within her country is a vital factor in its progress, declares Joseph D. R. Freed.

"Press reports indicate that Queen Marie is very much interested in radio," stated Mr. Freed, an eastern radio expert. "It is probable that she did not realize its vast significance to America until her arrival here. Other visitors have been startled by the way broadcasting has touched the public imagination and how radio has become a veritable necessity in our lives. Its value as an educator is apparent. Radio will mean much to Roumania, and it will enable Roumania's voice to be heard throughout the European continent. For that reason I am venturing the prediction that when Queen Marie returns she will promote in her usual thorough fashion the development of radio within her dominion."

CHOPIN'S PIANO IN RECITAL ON W-G-N TONIGHT

Will Be Feature of Atwater Kent Program.

Chopin's grand piano, upon which the famous French pianist composed his immortal works, has just been brought to this country, and under the skilled hands of M. Maurice Dumesnil will be heard by millions of Americans for the first time when that artist broadcasts in the Atwater Kent program tonight at 8:15. W-G-N will broadcast the program.

Used in His Recitals.

This is the piano which the composer had in his apartment and which was taken to the French salons for his recitals before the most select of European audiences. It was on this beautiful rosewood instrument that Countess Potocka played the last piece heard by the dying Chopin.

The composer's beloved Mme. Sand described him as shut in for days with this piano in the throes of composition, "weeping, walking about, breaking his pen, repeating and changing a measure a hundred times, beginning again next day, with minute and desperate perseverance. Then his creativeness descended upon the piano suddenly, completely, sublimely."

Play Masterpieces.

M. Dumesnil was a student of I. Philipp of the Paris National conservatory. After his debut in Paris in 1909, he played with the leading European orchestras, and has made two tours of the United States. In his program he will play five of Chopin's masterpieces.

Sharing honors with M. Dumesnil will be Lea Luboshutz, the Russian violinist, who made her first public appearance as a violinist in Odessa at the age of six. She studied at the Moscow Conservatory of Music with such success that at the age of sixteen she received a gold medal and the gift of an Amati violin from the conservatory. She later studied with the famous Belgian violinist, Eugen Ysaye. She has played more than a hundred concerts in Russia and Siberia, and the last four years has appeared in recitals in Germany and France, while on the faculties of the conservatories in Paris and Berlin.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, Nov. 7.) (Central Standard Time.)

Today's pro game between the Chicago Bulls and Wilson's Wildcats will be broadcast from Comiskey park at 2 o'clock. A play by play sketch of the entire contest will be given. Microphones located at various points about the grounds will relay the cheering and shouting, thus providing listeners with the color and background incidental to the game.

THE rare rosewood grand piano of the immortal composer, Chopin, will be heard tonight at 8:15 o'clock on W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. This famous instrument, which the great "poet of the piano" used in composing some of his masterpieces eighty years ago, was recently brought from Paris to New York. It is under the care of Maurice Dumesnil, French pianist of international reputation, who will be one of the artists to be heard tonight. This is the piano which Chopin used in his last public recital.

Maurice Dumesnil graduated with highest honors in the piano class of I. Philipp, professor at the Paris National Conservatory of Music. In his program tonight several compositions of Chopin's are included. The other artist to be heard is Lea Luboshutz, Russian violinist, who will present among other selections the following: Menuet by Beethoven; Waltz in A Major by Brahm, and "Rigaudon" by Monsigny.

Edward Davies, baritone; Fern Van Bremer, harpist; and Erma Rounds, accompanist, are to give the Lyon and Healy program at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. A wide variety of selections will be presented. Mr. Davies will number among his solos: "Passing By" by Purcell; "Kitty O'Toole" by Protheroe; "Star Eyes" by Speaks; "Noon and Night" by Hawley, and "Some Day" by Wellington. Among Miss Van Bremer's numbers are the followin: Welsh air by Thomas; "Autumn" by Thomas; "Spanish Patrol" by Tedeschi; and "Dance of the Gnomes." Each Sunday new artists are heard during the Lyon and Healy hours.

Ambrose Larsen is to give his Sunday organ recital at 1 o'clock today. This will be presented in W-G-N's Wurlitzer studio. A diversified program will be given.

The program will consist of both instrumental and vocal music, and several favorite selections are listed for presentation. Each Sunday one of the great composers is discussed in "Our Music Room." A program of compositions by Tschaikowsky will be given next Sunday night.

Tommy Coates, baritone, and Herbert Johnson, pianist, will give a joint recital immediately following the football broadcast this afternoon, provided the game is finished before 4:30 o'clock.

Listeners will have an opportunity to join in song with numerous other members of the radio audience at 7 o'clock this evening during "The Million Sing." Among the numbers to be given are: "Come with Thy Lute," "Home, Sweet Home," "All Through the Night," and "Love's Old Sweet Song."

ATWATER KENT RADIO SPEAKERS

Why your speaker is vital to your enjoyment of radio

Mme. LOUISE HOMER says:
"It is a mystery to me, how music can travel a great distance and be so real when it reaches me. I don't try to explain it. I merely enjoy it. Such perfect re-creation on the part of my Atwater Kent Radio Speaker is a delight."

ALBERT SPALDING says:
"I find a great difference among Speakers. Some of them do fairly well with the middle register, but fail to re-create the low and high notes. My Atwater Kent Radio Speaker, however, brings me all the notes, and the tone is warm, mellow and true."

JOSEF HOFMANN says:
"The simplicity of operation and all-round reliability of the latest Model of the Atwater Kent Radio, as well as the superb quality of tone, are absolutely unique. The completeness of your device, the beautiful finish of the electro-mechanical parts as well as the very handsome container of the former, is a joy to me and my friends. The function is perfect! Can one say more?"

REINALD WERRENRATH says:
"When at home, I listen to many radio concerts. One reason I enjoy them so much is that they come to me through an Atwater Kent Radio Speaker. It re-creates the music so faithfully that none of the quality is lost. I feel as if the artists were playing and singing to me in my own living-room. It is all so real that when a number is ended I often find myself applauding."

Why your speaker is vital to your enjoyment of radio

GREAT ARTISTS, including Josef Hofmann, Louise Homer, Mary Lewis, Albert Spalding, and Reinald Werrenrath, use and approve Atwater Kent Radio Speakers. Naturally, they are sensitive to imperfection of tone, and so they prefer the instrument that re-creates the broadcast programs faithfully.

A radio speaker gives voice to a receiving set. It can make or mar the tone that you hear. With an Atwater Kent Radio Speaker you are sure of natural tone and all the volume you wish. Models L and H are finished in dark brown crystalline. Model G in amber buff and sage green. Prices range from $16 to $23. It will pay you to see and hear one, at any store selling Atwater Kent Radio.

EPOCHAL EVENT IN BROADCAST FIELD PLANNED

To Mark New Regime of WEAF and WJZ.

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Monday, Nov. 15, will be one of importance in the radio field, for on that evening the new National Broadcasting company will formally enter the field by putting on what is expected to be one of the most elaborate entertainments ever heard on the air. Not only will they endeavor to secure the greatest artists in the vicinity of New York City, where the main broadcasting will take place, but an entirely new stunt will be tried out of tieing in famous artists who will then be on concert tour and who may be heard by radio listeners regardless of what part of the country the artists happen to be in on that particular Monday night. The hook-up is expected to be one of the largest ever attempted.

This occasion will mark the taking over of stations WEAF and WJZ in New York by the National Broadcasting company, which is a subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America. It was announced that $1,000,000 had been paid to the American Telephone and Telegraph company for WEAF. Likewise it is believed that the formation of the National Broadcasting company will be the forerunner of a chain of stations—perhaps two or three chains—which will ultimately span the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada.

This expansion will be under the direction of M. H. Aylesworth, president of the newly formed N. B. C. and formerly managing director of the National Electric Light association.

George F. McClelland, long in charge of WEAF, will be the vice president of the concern. W. E. Harkness will remain at his old post of assistant vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

PATENT OFFICE RADIO DIVISION IN SPACE JAM

Inasmuch as the radio division is the worst overworked and the most crowded for space in the entire fifty-three divisions, radio inventors throughout the country will undoubtedly back up the plea made by Thomas E. Robertson, commissioner of patents, for a new building. There are now 1,500 radio patent applications awaiting consideration, which is said to be more than there were a year ago and many other divisions of the patent office are almost as bad off. Not only is the present building overcrowded, but is characterized as a tremendous fire menace.

A modern building is the only solution to the present distressing state of affairs, Commissioner Robertson declared in discussing the effort to put the place on an up to date business basis. He said the patent office is almost self-supporting, inasmuch as it has turned in over $7,000,000 to the United States treasury during the last fifty years.

The present building was constructed shortly after the death of Thomas Jefferson, when only two or three hundred patents were issued each year. Now there are more than 45,000 patents issued annually, not mentioning 20,000 trade marks and designs.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

The jolly students at the University of Illinois have been doing a little racketeering with our radio football reports, we learn. Not that we begrudge them the racket nor the harvest; on the contrary, more power to them!

The jolly students, knowing we were to broadcast Illinois vs. Michigan from Ann Arbor, and knowing that all the campus and the twin towns would be panting to learn about the game's progress, sold admissions to the fraternity houses at a dollar a head, so 'tis said, to listen to their radio sets picking up our broadcast from the game. And one house netted a few hundred smackers.

Champaign—it must be in the air—that's where C. C. Pyle started, you remember.

"THE HAPPINESS BOYS and Harold Werrenrath, the famous baritone, will also make appearances," says the radio editor of the Brooklyn Eagle.

BY STUDIOUS PERUSAL of that best of all best sellers, the telephone book, one can learn many things. Among the momentous matters one discovers therein is the fact that our city holds many people who may wake up some morning to find that they have the same names as some radio stations have. We found in five minutes last night:

WUHS—George.
WUBS—J.
WSOL—Bart.
WISZ—Anton.
WOLK—David.
WEH—Madelaine J.
WEEG—Albert H.
WEGL—Anton.
WALP—Wilbur M.
WAH—George.
WAAK—Frederick H.
WAAS—Alfred H.
WAAG—Walter.

LOOKING OVER THE newspapers, one wonders what has become of the radio photos that used to look like a big patch of gooseflesh.

IN THE NEXT senatorial race we're going to run, because it seems that we have more real friends than any of the politicians. We can prove it by the number of people who have called us up during the last two months to volunteer to help us in our work. . . . Everybody asks if he can't carry a microphone or something for us into the Army and Navy game.

LONG DISTANCE telephone wires are used in broadcasting the big football games from out of town campuses. Somewhere close to the football announcer, generally in the press stand, are three operators, clustered about their apparatus. From this apparatus wires extend to four or five microphones, one to the announcer, two or more to suspended locations above the howling fans, and one held in reserve for emergency use. One of the operators is engaged in watching and regulating the dials and gauges on the amplifying apparatus, the other is listening in with headphones and balancing the power of the various microphones, and the third is manipulating a telegraph key which is in contact with the radio station at home and all the telephone stations in between. He keeps the operators at both ends in touch, to clear up mechanical trouble.

From this apparatus in the press stand there are two sets of long distance telephone lines running to the closest telephone exchange, and thence to the radio station. One of these sets of lines carries the voice of the announcer and the cheers of the crowd, and the other is kept for emergencies. All along the route there are "repeater" stations of the telephone company, where amplifiers are located to strengthen the volume.

When the announcer tells you that he is going to let you hear the cheering, he signals to the operator adjacent to open the microphones on the field and lessen the volume of the speaker's microphone. All of the microphones may be open at the same time, in a proper balance, so that the announcer's words have a background of yelling and hubbub.

GOBS AND GOBS of printed matter have been published about "mike fright," the fear of the silent, cold microphone and absence of an audience that takes hold of all famous speakers, actors and statesmen, when they are broadcasting.

We have found that by sitting opposite the speaker, nodding, smiling, looking intent and otherwise mimicking an audience we can make him feel at ease. Some months ago, when Morris Gest was facing the microphone, he asked us to sit there. He admitted that one man could be the radio audience by proxy and that he could comfortably address his remarks to him.

Most of you heard Sen. James A. Reed taking up arms against a sea of Republican misdeeds last Sunday, in the broadcast from his hotel room in Kansas City. In arranging with the eloquent senator for his radio address, we learned that he dislikes microphone appearances because of the lack of faces reflecting the fluctuations of his speech.

It was an odd scene, a hotel bedroom filled with bulky transmitting apparatus—amplifiers, batteries, and telegraph keys—that would shoot the speech over special wires to Chicago. Four operators fiddled with dials and things, and we talked with the senator and his brother. We asked him if he'd prefer to sit down while speaking. He declined to be seated, stating that he had never delivered an address in his life while seated, and in addition he wanted room to move around and gesticulate if he wished.

So we scurried about finding a stool. The stool was placed on top of the dresser, and the microphone on top of that. It then was just the height of his shoulders, but he was looking directly into the mirror. We suspected that the mirror would be disconcerting, so we covered it with a blanket.

Then we introduced him on the air.

As you recall, at first he apologized for his uneasiness before the microphone and with his auditors beyond his sight. We sat in another corner of the room and watched him. The gray hair, the stern face, the erect figure we have all seen pictured so many times. He was orating, but he wasn't warming to it. The Democratic hat-buster of the Senate, haranguing a metal disk and a blanket hung over a mirror! He said, you remember, that it was like his boyhood days, when he practiced elocution in one of the stalls of his father's barn.

Every once in a while he'd steal a glance around, to see if the boys were listening to him; but they were occupied with their mechanical duties. We gathered that he needed a real audience; so we moved over to almost in front of him.

And unconsciously then, he seemed to perk up. He had a listener! Not that we are inspiring to look at; it was only that we were a human face and a real pair of ears.

With a semblance of an audience, he could light into his subject, and he did. We'd laugh or grin widely at his witticisms, blink our eyes understandingly at his pointed paragraphs, and Sen. Reed was on his feet again.

Funny, the things that go on beyond the scenes of broadcasting!

U. S. OFFICIALS SEE DANGER OF MORE CONFUSION

Based upon reports just received from supervisors of radio of the nine radio districts into which the country is divided, government authorities declare that the air is in decidedly worse shape now than when federal supervision ceased last July and that greater confusion may prevail in the near future.

There has been much speculation as to the exact conditions, but these reports definitely show that during the last three and a half months no less than 63 new stations have been added, that 25 of the old stations have changed their location and 63 have increased their power. Of the 62 which have changed their wave lengths the most of these changes are from the old class A wave lengths below 280 meters to wave lengths in the former class B band ranging from 286 to 545 meters.

There are 40 new stations under construction and expected to begin operation within a few months. Arrangements are being made to increase the power of 46 existing stations. Reports in the Chicago district 22 new stations have been added, 24 have changed power, 18 have changed wave lengths, 40 are under construction and 13 are preparing to increase their power.

Flash Across America; Answer in 21 Minutes

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—To demonstrate the speed with which amateurs can transmit messages across the United States on short waves, N. A. McIntyre, of this city, operating station 2BO, recently sent a message to Los Angeles. The message was copied direct by 6BSL, owned by K. B. Houston, at San Francisco, was relayed on to Los Angeles, and an answer secured and returned to Brooklyn in just twenty-one minutes.

HOAX OF THIS PHONEY "GUEST ANNOUNCER" CREATES AIR RIOT

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Local radio stations have been apologizing for introducing to their listeners "Sparky" Hopkins, who said he was chief announcer at WOAI, San Antonio, Tex. He was accorded the privilege of using the microphones at WOAW, Omaha; KFAB, Lincoln; KOIL, Council Bluffs, and KFKX, Hastings, as a "guest announcer" after telling a convincing story of companionship with Graham Macnamee, prominent eastern announcer.

His exposure resulted from his alleged imperfect form before the microphone, which brought protests from several listeners, and the fact that he was heard at the station he said he represented. WOAI advised the Nebraska and Iowa stations that he was not the announcer, and they radiocast apologies to the southern station. "Sparky," whose motive in perpetrating the hoax is unknown, left here for Kansas City.

WBBM DEVOTES ALL ITS NIGHTS TO FEATURES

Announcement of a complete change in program policy of WBBM, has been made by Kelly Smith, station director. Starting immediately, all evening programs will be made up entirely of special features.

There will be no studio programs from this station in the future except, temporarily, during the afternoon broadcast from 4 to 6 o'clock.

"In explaining this statement, however, I should like to define the phrases 'studio program,'" said Mr. Smith. "In the past many stations have given studio programs consisting of a jumble of solos, both vocal and instrumental, that, when analyzed, was nothing but musical hash. It is our belief that the radio audience of today has become so discriminating that they will no longer listen to this kind of entertaining."

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Patriotic Duty in a Sordid Setting

Mme. X.

As a rule the author of this pillar of polite piffle does not waste time reading anonymous communications, but one came a few days ago so brief that it was easy to take it in at a glance. The unknown called my attention to what he or she considered an error when I referred to the U. S. A. as a democracy when it was really a republic. At first I was inclined to think the point well taken. Then I went to vote at the polling place in the precinct in which the X. family has lived, lo these many years, and am now persuaded that whatever the meticulous may call our country, it has all the earmarks of a democracy.

The place arranged for the greatest privilege a citizen has, casting the ballot, was small, crowded, depressing, and ill adapted to the day's service. The booths were dark little stalls, quite inadequate to handling the enormous ballot sheets. Dirty white curtains ill protected the voter from observation and admitted to the booth the loud and seemingly abusive conversation being carried on between the people sitting and standing about the room. A guttering candle gave more smoke than light. A stub of a pencil was the only instrument for writing the crosses in the circles in front of the names. Alas! I had forgotten a practice of former years, which was to take with me a fountain pen to inscribe an ineradicable cross where I wanted to indicate my choice.

Seated about the low ceilinged, dusty place was a motley gathering of my fellow citizens, some not especially well favored men; fat, dark complexioned women whose ancestors might have been part of Columbus' crew, but who themselves would have been more in place in a throng of Mussolini's followers than in our supposedly Nordic commonwealth. In one corner the owner of the place, a sad faced tailor, plied his trade, apparently oblivious of what was going on about him.

Suitable Surroundings Needed.

The ballot is, or should be, the most sacred possession of a self-governing people. Why couldn't it be treated as such, and its service be enshrined in beautiful and dignified surroundings, in temples as stately as those of ancient Greece or Rome? It would undoubtedly have a good effect on the voters, the clerks, the judges, and the watchers, just as religious services take an added appeal when carried on in a beautiful church. Man, as a rule, responds to his environment, and that squalid polling place made the casting of a vote an unpleasant duty, with none of the patriotic emotion such an act should arouse. I can understand a little why Socrates was willing to die to testify to his disbelief in Demos.

If citizens, in the exercise of their right of choice, could go to and cast their ballots in a stately pillared temple, adorned with flags and with a stirring band dispensing national airs and other fine music, it would make it a real event and would bring together the different elements of every community in a bond of common citizenship which might make of us a more genuinely united people, and help us to realize the real responsibility that rests on each one of us when election day comes around.

The first question that met me with many of the people I came across that day was, "Have you voted?" But my word! there were a lot of my supposedly most intelligent friends who did not vote last Tuesday and did not seem to feel at all remorseful at this omission. Perhaps this is the sensible way to feel about the franchise: exercise it when it is convenient, but don't let it incommode you. If so, those Italians, from whom Mussolini has taken this bother, are right in feeling grateful to him. But as long as our polling places are the unsightly, hit or miss places they now are, and are largely run by seeming aliens, let no one tell this col. that it should not refer to this country as a democracy.

On the Eve of Opera.

Tomorrow night opens the fifth season of the Chicago Civic Grand opera. This is a phase of democracy on which even the most disheartened Chicago voter can look with pride, for we are the only community that supports our own grand opera on such a wide basis of subscribers. New York's Metropolitan opera has, since the beginning, been the pet preoccupation of multi-millionaires. Ownership of boxes there is a sign of extra large bank accounts. They are family possessions, and descend, like any other property, from generation to generation.

Chicago's grand opera is supported by over five thousand subscribers to the guarantee fund, citizens who have promised to pay so much annually toward the inevitable deficit which is one of the accompaniments of this manifestation of music. Samuel Insull, who is our opera's high priest, told me last midsummer that the next five years' guarantee installment was well on the way to completion.

Mrs. Jacob Baur, chairman of the box committee, announces that the sale of opera boxes has been better than ever before. Last year broke the record up to that time. This year eighteen more were sold than in 1925. The work of this committee deserves more recognition than is generally accorded to it. Except for six summer weeks, it is at its task from the time the spring campaign opens until the eve of the opening of the opera season. There are twenty-four members on this board, and they are faithful in attending the weekly meetings and in working to secure the box patrons. It is not an easy task.

Up to the last moment this committee is ready to receive applications for boxes, of which there are a few left. So if you, or any of your friends, would like a box, or half a box, or even a smaller portion, it is not too late to get it. Our opera is the greatest ensemble of famous artists, finest music, and the world of fashion to be found this side of New York.

THE members of the Junior League who are to appear in "Pinocchio," which is to open its series of Saturday morning children's theater performances next Saturday at the Playhouse, were photographed on the way to one of their rehearsals.

Miss Dorothy Michelson is to play the name part, and the others have various roles in the cast and on the production staff.

An Absence of Tiaras.

It will be interesting to see the effect of the fashions of the day as displayed from that great double circle of boxes tomorrow night. There will be none of those glittering tiaras which used to add radiance to similar occasions in days gone by. You can't wear them safely on shingled heads, though there are pictures of the Queen of Roumania with pointed diadems tied in some inscrutable manner on her clipped locks. Perhaps those strings of pearls she wears so becomingly, coming from her regal temples down under and around her chin, help her to balance these royal headpieces.

The short skirts of today will not be noticeable to those who study the occupants of the boxes tomorrow. Short skirts are a requisite to the wearers of short hair. You could not imagine donning a long and sweeping frock with clipped locks. Nor could you fancy high dressed, long hair with the ultra short skirts of today. Probably what we now call "robes de style," those attractive frocks of close fitting waists, and full, flowing, rather long skirts so becoming to tall and slender women, are couriers of the coming change, if fashion follows history, which up to now it has done.

For instance, the short hair now in vogue was the mode soon after the French revolution opened, and during the period known as the Directoire. It was called "coiffure de victime," meaning "hair dressing of the victim," the victim being the aristocrat whose locks had to be cut off to make the work of the guillotine easier. The doomed aristocrats themselves cut off their hair with a rather gallant gesture, so as to make the fashion significant of their rank and standing, thus giving the mode a gory and dramatic significance. They wore their frocks short because there was little occasion for the sweeping, sumptuous robes worn in the times of the three Styles Repeat Themselves.

So can the experienced scholar read history by studying the meaning of the different styles of dress and coiffure from age to age. The sumptuous, flowing garments betoken unwarlike eras. The simple, unimposing attire, the spears and helmets, such as Scythian monuments depict, show a race dedicated to constant strife. In some way future students may link our present modes with the terrific world war through which the civilized world has just passed and which we Americans seem so prone to forget. It's just as well that we do, but we accept modes from nations who have not forgotten. Also, it should be noted that the famous designers of costumes are close students of history and are much influenced by the sequence of styles in the past.

From our clipped heads it is most probable that the next coiffure will be close fitting turbans designed to cover the shorn locks until such time as they shall have grown out again. Mme. de Stael, the Empress Josephine, and their contemporaries will be our models. There will be many who will fight any curtailment of our present much appreciated liberty from bonds, and who will cling long to our corsetless state, our clipped heads, and our short skirts. At least, so they say now, but, after all, no absolute monarch was ever so powerful as the accepted arbiters of fashions, and we shall all probably accept whatever is the edict from Paris or whatever may be the shrine of new modes.

Two Outstanding Events.

The two big outstanding events of the gay world this month, of course, are, first, the impending visit of the queen of Roumania, the first really reigning queen to visit this not so long ago haunt of red men and wild animals; and, second, the Army and Navy football game on Nov. 27, which will bring here a numerous cortège of official notables from Washington, West Point, Annapolis and sport lovers from the north and south, the east and west sections of the country. There are so many plans on foot for making these two great occasions the reason for entertaining of all kinds that it would take too much space at this moment to list them all.

The Barrett Wendells' ball on the twenty-sixth at the Palmer house is the most important purely social function for the second event. This will be preceded by many dinners, large and small.

The Arthur Meekers are giving a big dinner at the Casino preceding the ball, at which the numerous delegations of visitors from the national capital will be the guests of honor.

The Arden Shore military ball at the Sherman house is another important social event for that evening. It is expected that among the guests there will be many of the more than 5,000 young army and navy boys who are coming here for the great match. The ball is given under the auspices of a long list of eminent patrons and patronesses, headed by Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, Congressman and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mrs. John F. Hines, wife of the commandant at Great Lakes, and Mrs. Michael Lenihan, wife of the commandant at Fort Sheridan, and thirty-six other representative Chicago citizens. Mrs. Lloyds Smith Shaw is chairman of the ball and has a numerous and active committee, whose names I gave my readers a fortnight ago.

At the Casino on Sunday, Nov. 23, an attractive musical tea is to be given by the club. There will be a song program given by Marshall Bartholomew, director of the Seymour school of Yale. There will be songs of the sea and Negro melodies. He is said to be quite marvelous, especially in the second of these.

The music of primitive races, the music which springs from the emotions and spiritual experiences of unsophisticated people, makes a stronger appeal to the average mortal than any composed by the most erudite and noted composers. An afternoon musical given by Mrs. Ernest Hamill and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Alfred Hamill, at Lake Forest on a rainy day last summer, when a couple of Highlanders in their kilts and tartans sang old Scotch and Irish melodies, gave the writer more real pleasure than many a performance of highly trained and famous musical celebrities which it has been her privilege to hear. In those taking songs, some rollicking, some sad, were the very spirit of that picturesque Celtic folk, both in Scotland and in Ireland. Their romances, their wars, their tragedies and comedies were all mirrored in those major and minor chords and sequence of notes.

Earning a Holiday.

But the give and take of entertaining, the receiving and meeting of many kinds of famous folk is not the only concern of our social leaders. Mrs. George A. McKinlock, for instance, is going to earn her delightful and luxurious winter in her picturesque Palm Beach home by heading the Chicago committee for the Red Cross drive which starts hereabouts Armistice day. She filled this important post last year and broke the record made up to then, going over the quota assigned her by al forget how many thousand dollars. So the Chicago Red Cross section is fortunate in getting her to take the job again.

Her devoted and efficient helper in this task is Miss Muriel McCormick, whose youth and energy enable her to tackle much of the running about and routine part of the work, leaving Mrs. McKinlock freer to devote herself to the direction of squads of workers and to the general campaign. This enterprise accomplished, Mr. and Mrs. McKinlock and Miss Muriel McCormick will his themselves to their winter home, Casa Alejandro, at Palm Beach, where, sheltered in their grove of clattering cocoanut palms, they can listen to the surf beat upon that long and sandy beach and to the mocking bird's trill—that is, they can do so until Palm Beach's strenuous social season begins, as it does after Jan. 1. There is gathered there at the height of the season as cosmopolitan and interesting a group of people as you can find at any time of the year on this side of the Atlantic.

Other Chicagoans who will be journeying to Florida a month or so later than the McKinlocks are Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick. Mr. Dick, who is recovering from a serious operation, will be glad to find himself once more on his delightful and ultra comfortable yacht, the Chieftain. Although it was seemingly smashed by the collapse of the steel shed in which it was summering, it is already repaired and, if reports can be trusted, shows no signs of that terrible West Indian hurricane, which did so much damage to southern Florida two months or so ago.

Of our fellow citizens others who delight to spend at least a part of their winters in the semi-tropics, the John T. McCutcheons and the Charles Atkinsons, have good reports of the prompt and successful repairs of the damaged parts of Nassau, the capital of the Bahamas, and of Treasure island, the McCutcheons' famous island, nearby. Some of the older ones of the palm trees that shade most of the McCutcheons' island, fell before the onslaught of the gale, but not enough to damage seriously the beauty of that delectable retreat from the strenuous world.

Women Voters' Convention.

But it's really too soon to begin to talk of people's plans for going away. There's many an important event between now and the time for departure for the late winter and early spring months which is as much the custom of the financially independent as any summer outing.

For one thing, that energetic band of devoted patriots, the League of Women Voters, is holding here its annual convention on Nov. 16, 17, 18. The program will include as topics, the legal status of women, child welfare, citizenship training, women in industry, and international coöperation to prevent war. Among the speakers will be Mayor Dever, Miss Julia Lathrop, Chester H. Rowell, and Miss Belle Kearney. Mrs. James W. Morrisson is president of the Chicago branch of the league.

The National League of Women Voters is composed of affiliated state leagues. It numbers many thousands of intelligent women in its ranks. It is an institution to be taken account of by political parties, although it is a nonpartisan organization. It has helped put through much national and state legislation of a beneficial character. Besides its national headquarters at Washington, it has established permanent staff workers and headquarters in twenty-five states and thirty-three civic localities. A total of 439 bills supported by state branches of the league have been put through state legislatures, and 33 opposed by it have been defeated.

It has founded two national and eighty-six local schools of citizenship which have done good work in instructing the several millions new voters admitted to citizenship by the nineteenth amendment. We women need this instruction. And doubtless many men, also, need it. For just one little, seemingly insignificant item: did you know that if so much as a tip of your cross in the circle you place on your ballot touches the rim of the circle, your ballot can be thrown out as imperfect? It seems straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel when you consider the conditions under which many a ballot is cast.

Junior League Is Busy.

Those delightful Junior leaguers are at it again and are starting their children's theater next Saturday morning at the Playhouse. Their first play will be "Pinocchio," a dramatization of an old Italian story.

Miss Dorothy Michelson is taking the leading part. Some of the others in the cast are the Mesdames John Farwell III., Waldo Emerson, Helen Walton, the Misses Laura Thompson, Emily Hamill, Brier Wright, Frances Oliver, and Jane Linn. Mrs. Philip Maher and Mrs. Walter Paepke are doing the stage sets, while Mrs. Shreve Badger is designing the costumes. It promises to be "some show," and the youngsters and their elders, too, have lots of joy ahead of them.

To Aid Bates House.

Day after tomorrow at Mrs. John Borden's, 1450 Astor street, there will be a Christmas sale of a great variety of articles for the benefit of the Ellen Bates settlement. It seems early to be thinking of Christmas, but there's nothing like taking time by the forelock. When the Bordens bought the Charles G. Kings' charming house a year or so ago the latter naturally removed the beautiful mural decorations painted by our well known Chicago artist, Abram Poole. These Mr. Poole has replaced by paintings said to be quite as effective. He is making a name for himself in the east that bids fair to make him an American Tiepolo, and if you don't know who Tiepolo was you'd better look him up in your biography of celebrities, for just to say that he was the most famous Venetian mural painter is not telling you half enough about him.

So, while you are buying your Christmas presents in Mrs. Borden's dining room, you can study Abram Poole's latest work. Among the women interested in this sale are the Mesdames Arthur Farwell, William McCormick Blair, Lawrence Robbins, Clarence Mitchell, John Holland Jr., Charles Hutner, Lawrence Viles, Charles Frey, and Miss Marie J. Rouet.

Arousing an Interest in Politics.

Some of the more serious women in our leisure class are interested in a course of lectures on contemporary topics which Miss Julie Adams is giving this month. She is continuing the similar work which her mother, the late Mrs. E. S. Adams, carried on for many years, that of enabling many intelligent women to keep up with the County Conferences Aid Club Federation

By Kate Webber.

AS THE club year progresses, constructive changes in working plans, put into operation in all districts, have begun to show markedly improved conditions in even the smaller organizations in the state federation.

At the beginning of the season, a plan evolved by the new president of the I. F. W. C., Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, was put into operation, being the first departure along the lines suggested by Mrs. Seymour when she was elected to office last May. The plan, mentioned in this column at the time, was to take the state organization to the women in the ranks, and it seems to have succeeded very well for the time it has existed.

County conferences have been held during October at Rockford, Galesburg, Champaign, Springfield, Belleville, and Mount Vernon, all of them having been largely attended. Women have driven overland 125 miles to attend these district meetings.

Creating a Clearing House.

"If we have accomplished nothing else," said Mrs. Seymour, "we have succeeded in getting at the little things in which our work was weak. We have taught clubwomen that they can tell their difficulties to state board members and not have them go disregarded."

The final district county conference is to be held on Wednesday at Marshall Field's for the benefit of clubs in Cook and Lake counties, comprising the first ten districts of the federation.

The morning session will be given over to conferences of state department chairmen and their committees, and speakers will be Mrs. Ethel McClure Patterson of Dayton, O., budget chairman of the general federation, and Sergt. Thomas Ryan.

Armistice Day Program.

At luncheon district presidents and department chairmen will be seated with their groups, and past federation presidents will be guests of Mrs. Seymour. An Armistice day program will be given following luncheon, with the Rev. John Thompson, Mrs. Rufus Dawes, Mrs. Gertrude Bonnin, and Howard P. Savage, national commander of the American Legion, as the speakers.

In addition to the conferences, another plan to bring state department chairmen into closer affiliation with district and club chairmen is being evolved. A monthly personal letter to district chairmen is in turn to be passed on the club chairmen, instead of the former long and complicated outline of work. This is to be known as the circle letter plan, and many districts are planning conferences for state chairmen to further this personal contact idea which is being worked out by the president and directors. Other state federations undoubtedly will adopt one or both of these new ideas, which promise to eliminate much of the red tape and unnecessary fluttering up of club work.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans

"ONCE in a while we have brought to our attention cases of vision in clubwomen that are most astounding," observed the ex-president. "Several years ago, when club ethics was just beginning to be noticed by the clubs, the president of one organization called me up and told me that she was planning to have a committee on club ethics, and she asked if I would serve as chairman. I laughed at her. The idea seemed so indefinite, almost absurd. 'It's coming,' she insisted, 'and I want to be the first to get in line.' I didn't feel that I could help her out, so she gave up the idea, but she was right; it's come."

"Yes," interposed the board member, "I noticed that one of the federated districts has a club ethics committee and that it has compiled a code for club presidents."

"That's what led up to my remarks," said the ex-president.

"Just what points does this particular code cover?" asked the committee chairman.

"It's in the form of suggestions," answered the ex-president, "and touches on the ways in which the club presidents can best help the work of the district; sending names of officers, and year books to federation officers, answering correspondences promptly, attending district meetings."

"I heard the other day of a downstate district that was working on a code, and of a club that has a committee on ethics," the board member informed them. "Such a committee might be most helpful in studying the best ways of carrying on club work—sort of a research committee."

"There are other possibilities," reflected the committee chairman. "If a member or officer became obstreperous she could be called before the committee on ethics; if disagreements reached a straining point we could lay aside the strain until the committee on ethics had reported findings on the point——"

"Enough levity," interrupted the ex-president. "That's the side of it that I saw at first, but when I began to consider the fact that club ethics is concerned with every phase of club conduct—good, bad, and indifferent—I took the matter more seriously."

Question.

A member of our committee insists on talking again and again on every motion. Can we stop her? R. M.

Reply.

A committee cannot close debate or limit it. If a member obstructs the business of the committee the matter should be reported to your club which may remove the member or limit the debate in your committee.

Question.

One of our members brings the same guest to meetings time after time. Is that right? MRS. JOHN W.

Reply.

Many clubs limit the number of times a member may bring the same guest. One who comes often has the privileges of the club without the work or dues.

SOCIETY

principal developments, national and international, of these eventful times. Mrs. Adams was one of the most remarkable educators Chicago ever had. Her daughter's course includes subjects of local interest, such as local elections and the changing status of American women, and those of wider concern, such as American influence in Europe, the future of the British empire, the problem of the Philippines, the new Turk in the near east. She is giving these talks on the north and south sides, and at Lake Forest, Winnetka, and Evanston. In time American women may develop that world-wide interest in politics which is characteristic of cultivated English women.

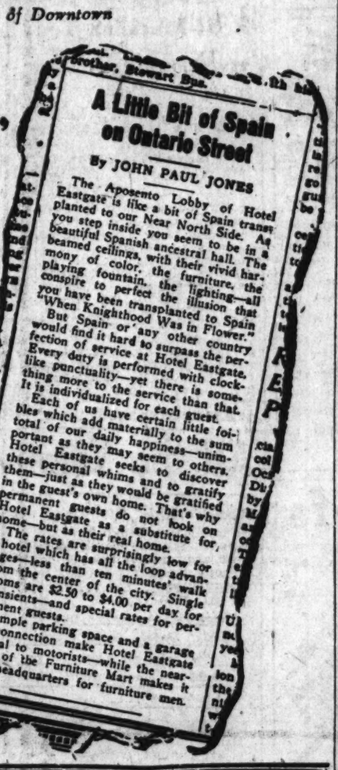
Just a "Whisper" from the LOOP.



A Little Bit of Spain on Ontario Street

By JOHN PAUL JONES

The Aposento Lobby of Hotel Eastgate is like a bit of Spain transplanted to our Near North Side. As you step inside you seem to be in a beautiful Spanish ancestral hall. The beamed ceilings, with their vivid harmony of color, the furniture, the playing fountain, the lighting—all conspire to perfect the illusion that you have been transplanted to Spain When Knighthood Was in Flower." But Spain or any other country would find it hard to surpass the perfection of service at Hotel Eastgate. Every duty is performed with clock-like punctuality—yet there is something more to the service than that. It is individualized for each guest. Each of us have certain little foibles which add materially to the sum total of our daily happiness—important as they may seem to others. Hotel Eastgate seeks to discover these personal whims and to gratify them—just as they would be gratified in the guest's own home. That's why permanent guests do not look on Hotel Eastgate as a substitute for home—but as their real home.

The rates are surprisingly low for a hotel which has all the loop advantages—less than ten minutes' walk from the center of the city. Single rooms are $2.50 to $4.00 per day for transients—and special rates for permanent guests.

Ample parking space and a garage in connection make Hotel Eastgate appeal to motorists—while the nearness of the Furniture Mart makes it the headquarters for furniture men.

The best food at moderate prices in the cafe.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Gotham's Opera Has Pale Debut

By Dolly Madison.

NEW YORK.—The season is officially open. That the official opening was not as brilliant an event as one might have hoped for is something else again. At any rate the Metropolitan flung wide its doors with the initial presentation of the 1926-'27 season, and society made an attempt to be as colorful as ever in its occupancy of the golden horseshoe.

I must confess that the first night of the opera was something of a disappointment. As a rule, one confidently expects that society will turn out in force, wearing jewels that fairly blaze. On Monday night, however, this was far from the case. A few tiaras glittered as their fair wearers turned their heads, but, with the exception of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, the parterre habitants were conservative in wearing their jewels.

Perhaps the choice of "La Vestale," a little appreciated opera, had a lot to do with the disappointing showing made by New York's notables, but many of the most prominent society folk were missing from their usual places.

Vanderbilts Were Missed.

The Vanderbilt turnout, conspicuously poor, had an excuse in the lamented passage of Dr. W. Seward Webb. No one, gazing at box 17, quite empty, could help but think of the new affliction laid upon the Vanderbilts. It was all the more noticeable that Mrs. H. McK. Twombly and Mrs. Henry White, who share the ownership of box 17, have not missed an opening for many a long year. Ever since Dr. Webb was brother-in-law both no one looked for them to be present.

Grace Vanderbilt, too, failed to appear, though it was understood that she would be in box 3, together with Judge and Mrs. Charles H. Sherrill, Lord Cochrane, and Henry S. Cram.

Cathleen Vanderbilt that was, the present Mrs. Harry C. Cushing III, was a lovely hostess in the dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt's box. All in white with a fetching white turban, she made a striking appearance. It had been expected that Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt would share the honors of box 31, but she, like Grace Vanderbilt, did not put in an appearance.

Crimson Fans Popular.

Fans were noticeable at the opening, with great ones of startling crimson being visible on all sides. One of the largest was carried by Mrs. Robert W. Goelet, who was in box 1 with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth P. Budd and Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward.

While the notables, as usual, were late in arriving, the first act being far more than half over before the parterre began to fill, Clarence H. Mackay's party was the last of all to arrive. It was during the second act that the grayed Mr. Mackay put in an appearance. All during the first act whispers had circulated, as was to be expected, that there was a possibility of Ellin Mackay Berlin being present. However, Mr. Mackay's only daughter present was Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien. The other guests in that box included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener and Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Polk.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moment, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Misunderstood.

I was to take care of my employer's children one evening while he and his wife went to the theater. I had been invited for dinner and had offered to do the dishes, as I was afraid they would be late. However, Mrs. J—— insisted on washing them while I dried them.

When about to leave, Mrs. J—— said: "I don't think we will be late, Miss B——."

I replied, "I hope not," and then wondered at the queer expression on her face.

It developed that Mrs. J—— referred to the time of their return and I to the time they would arrive at the show! I'm still blushing. V. B.

Women the World Over

The first mothers' aid laws were passed in Missouri and Illinois in 1911.

It is estimated that 5,000,000 women in the United States visit barber shops annually.

The women of Esthonia are absolutely forbidden by law to use cosmetics in any way.

Of the million and a half workers in Wurtemberg, Germany, more than one-third are women.

During the last 10 years the sale of women's shoes has increased between 40 and 50 per cent.

Though they are now past 24 years of age, the twin daughters of Lord Ruthven of England still dress alike and are so much alike in looks that it is difficult for their friends to distinguish one from the other.

What Girls In Paris Do

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I make yearly trips to France, and have done so for many years. Just to find the best aids to beauty and to youth.

There many able scientists give their lives to beauty study. And their results are known everywhere. I am trying to bring to American women the best ideas they develop. I want them for myself and for you.

One of the best ideas I found there is a way to clean the skin. It is a liquid which contains no animal, no vegetable grease. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply penetrates the pores to the depths, then departs. When you wipe it off, all the grime, all that clogs the skin comes with it.

This is what I use to clean my face skin, as girls do in Paris. I never use soap and water. Results are astounding. When you learn them you will always do as I do.

I call this product my Facial Youth. It will bring you a new conception of what a clean skin means. I urge you to try it. Take from your face skin all the hardened oil, dead skin and waste, and see the results.

All toilet counters sell Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth at 75c. Or the coupon will bring you a sample bottle with my Beauty Book. Try this facial cleanser. You will never know what a clean skin means until you do that. Clip coupon now.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Armistice Day Is Theme in Churches

THE REV. M. RUSSELL BOYNTON.
[J. E. Waters Photo.]

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

TODAY will be Armistice Sunday in many churches. In Episcopal churches it is called Peace Sunday and judging by the pulpit announcements the emphasis of the ministers of all denominations will be on world peace.

A special prayer approved by the Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, presiding bishop, will be used in Episcopal churches. It reads in part: "Lighten the thick darkness of the world and the gloom of our miseries and fears; have compassion upon the peoples of the earth stumbling in confusion and guide our feet into the ways of peace."

On Armistice day, Thursday, a rally will be held in Orchestra hall at 3:30 under the auspices of the commission on world friendship of the Chicago Church federation. The Rev. Norman E. Barr, chairman of the commission, will introduce the chairman, George W. Dixon, who will preside. The Union League Boys' club band will play. Rabbi Freehof will pronounce the invocation and the Rev. Frederick Siedenberg, S. J., the benediction. Gen. John F. O'Ryan will speak on "America and World Peace." Other features will be a poem, "A Letter of Farewell," by Harriet Monroe, editor of Poetry magazine; the singing of "America the Beautiful," with Eric DeLamarter at the organ, and other music. Tickets without charge may be had of pastors and at 3:30 the hall will be open for general admission.

Thursday evening Prof. James T. Shotwell of Columbia university, N. Y., will speak and Bishop C. P. Anderson will preside at a peace meeting in St. James church, Cass and Huron streets.

THE REV. GEORGE H. THOMAS.

The Rev. George H. Thomas is rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, which will dedicate tomorrow evening its $125,000 parish house. The Rt. Rev. Herman Page, bishop of Michigan, who was for fourteen years rector of St. Paul's; the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, and the Rt. Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, suffragan bishop of Chicago, will take part in the dedication ceremonies.

The new parish house is built of Indiana limestone and is complete in every way with library, large auditorium with stage, equipped also for athletics, parlor, clubrooms, parish offices, and rector's study.

The Rev. Mr. Thomas, rector since 1925, took an active part in religious work during the war, going to Europe as one of the speakers in the army camps. Later he made a tour of the orient, especially of China. St. Paul's parish has made a record for its missionary and benevolent work. The rector is a graduate of Yale university and of the Episcopal Theological seminary, Cambridge, Mass.

A reformationfest will be given today at 3 o'clock by the sixty Evangelical churches of Chicago at the Moody Memorial church, North avenue and North Clark street. Arthur C. Lueder, Chicago's postmaster, will be chairman. Four hundred children of the Bensenville and Ulrich orphanages will sing under the leadership of William Hoeppler, and the Englewood High school orchestra will play. The Rev. W. N. Dread, Evansville, Ind., and the Rev. Charles Chworowsky will speak.

Fifteen Orange lodges of Chicago will be represented this evening at the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 54th street and South Marshfield avenue. The state grand master, grand secretary, and grand mistress will be present, and the Rev. C. C. Cox, pastor, will speak.

This is education week in the churches, public and parochial schools, among Roman Catholics as well as Protestants. The religious editorial in this issue is by Sir Robert A. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, Canada, and president of the Religious Education association which has its international headquarters at 308 North Michigan avenue with Joseph M. Artman as general secretary. Today is specifically designated as religious education day and the editorial is on the subject, "Opportunities of the Religious Education Association."

ART AND ARTISTS

Awarding of Prizes Causes Wonderment

And cavalcades of fairies came by night,
Witches with black cats mounted high behind;
Goblins and brownies and a host of elves
And pixies blown like leaves before the wind.

The forest glades were filled with laughing voices,
And Pan himself, the ruler, laughed aloud;
His laughter running through the forest shadows
As lightning stabs the blackness of a cloud.

The silver rays of the slow setting moon
Wove a white cloak to wrap the puny night.
Night hid her face and slunk away, a shadow,
Dawn trembled on the lip of Pan's delight.

E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

IN the calmer light of a second visit to the exhibition of American Paintings and Sculpture, which opened some ten days ago in the east wing galleries of the Art institute, there are those quite unnecessary things, frequent disappointments, lurking on several of the walls. Perhaps the chief of these are found among the prize paintings. Will there ever come a time or be an exhibit when the taste of the judges and of the public coincide? Year after year, exhibition after exhibition, the ribbons awarded, the same murmur is raised: "Why on earth was this and that rewarded, and this and this passed over without acknowledgment of their obvious merit?"

Consider the present exhibition. The most pretentious prize in the list was given to a simple study, scarcely more than a study, a perfectly frank, definite, unassuming painting of an Italian boy playing an accordion and lustily singing to its bleating chords. The painting is barely finished. The eyes are suggested, not painted. The artist, of course, George Luks, has a name. He does this type of work. He has, however, given us the pleasure several times of seeing more finished pieces, which failed to catch the rewarding eye.

Realism, but Nothing Else.

Were this exhibition the annual school exhibition of the Art institute, and were this sketch one of the exhibited pieces, its merit would be great, although expected. Just such canvases are hung in the school show. This is not to say that the students' work is as entirely satisfactory as Mr. Luks', but there is a similarity to be felt. One senses "The Player" as a quick, aggressive achievement, more or less thrown on the canvas, with no nuances, no subtleties, no searching for more than surface values. As an illustration of broad painting, of deliberate realism, of art stripped of all fine feathers, the picture is a success. However, it does seem a far cry from that to the fact of its being the most honored picture in the rooms, the winner of the most important prize of the Art institute year.

Take next the nude which was given the Potter Palmer gold medal and $1,000. It is by Eugene Speicher and is the property of the Des Moines Association of Fine Arts. She is, the model, a most improper lady, hard, bold, flaunting her undress in the arrangement of her scarf. It is one of the most tiring paintings of nudes, because of its obviousness, that has been met with by most of us in many a long day. She is there, not to be missed, whenever you cast a glance toward the end of the gallery, the wall of which she preempts. You cannot miss her carnal appeal. To be honest, it is an appeal which repels more than seduces.

For a third example of absolutely unimaginative painting, consider the winner of the third important prize, "Family Group," by Charles Hopkinson, awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $1,000. In this there is no quality or suggestion that displeases and there is nothing that leads one to conjecture the rapidity with which the artist worked, but, all in all, it does not seem to bear the hall-mark of "great." You see the painter, his wife and five daughters, exactly as they are, fresh and young and vigorous. It is a charming family group, painted in bright, cheerful colors, unstudied, unposed, naif in the sincerity of its presentation. It is all that, and yet one turns away dissatisfied. Perhaps the colors are too bright, the combination of individualities too fixed, the mass effect of six adults too overwhelming, the suggestion of the photographic family group of forty years ago too much recalled. Whatever the reason, there is something—is it finesse?—lacking that makes it just miss being the painting it should be with the Logan medal stamping its excellence.

Canvases of Beauty.

To go for a minute from the prize pictures to those which were not so distinguished, one discovers the "Haunted Wood" by John F. Carlson, the playground of fairies, gnomes and pixies, a forest of light and shade filled with the magic of a mad moon and a dying night; a feather-headed Pan and a laughing dryad; with witches and brownies, and all the little folk who have been the friends of romancers and of poets since the world was born.

Then there is the splendidly picturesque and colorful portrait of a wood engraver by Nicolai Fechin, the Russian artist who was so successful in giving beauty to the portrait of Lillian Gish as Romola, making it one of the loveliest canvases shown anywhere last year. By contrast, but with equal success, there is the portrait of three sailors, "The Captain, the Cook and the First Mate," a stunning group by Charles W. Hawthorne.

A perfect still-life with marvelously modulated colors is discovered in "The White Dragon" by Felix Russman. "Peace and Plenty" by Oscar E. Berninghaus is a striking combination of autumn fruits and their Indian harvesters, a Taos episode that has both dignity and beauty to commend it.

Reassuring Work.

"Springtime" by John E. Costigan is one of the most successful canvases in the exhibit. "Morning" by Emil J. Bistran is another magnificent piece of work which reassures you about the fate of modern art. For light and frothy painting, gay and carefree, and resolutely lovely, look at "The Gossip" by Will Foster, a fascinating tumble of snowy bird and exquisite lady mingled in a tangle of breakfast things and furnishings that remind one of nothing so much as inrolling combers of a green sea after a storm, each breaker capped with its own crest of white spray.

There are others, for example: "The Discarded Scarf" by Katherine Langhorne Adams, "Sycamores" by Orrin A. White, "His Eminence George, Cardinal Mundelein" by Carl Bohnen, almost the most masterly portrait in the exhibition; "Toilers of the Sea" by George Elmer Browne, "Still Life, Fruit and Vase" by Boris Anisfeld, "Provincetown Sunshine" by Henry Hensche, "Experience" by Kenneth Bates, "Cape Cod Fishing Boats" by Arthur W. Woelfle, and "Spring in Siberia" by Leon Gaspard.

All these do not touch upon the sculpture, which must have a column entirely to itself later.

Current Exhibitions.

Last Tuesday an exhibition of paintings and batik, and various divisions of work artistic, by William Jacobs, opened in the galleries of the Chicago Woman's Aid, in the Kimball building. In all probability it will continue through the month.

In Evanston, last Friday, at the Orrington hotel, there opened an exhibition, under the auspices of the University Guild and the Evanston Art commission, of oil paintings shown by the courtesy of their Evanston owners.

An exhibition of paintings in water color by Emily Groom is to be found in the Thomas Whipple Dunbar art galleries. The exhibit opened with a reception to Miss Groom on Wednesday of last week and will run into the middle of the month.

Louis Bunin, a Chicago artist, is exhibiting a group of water colors done in Spain and France, at the J. W. Young art galleries in the Fine Arts building.

In the Carson Pirie Scott galleries there is at present an exhibition of paintings by Harry Leith-Ross. These canvases strike an unprejudiced observer as being a little formal, a little stilted, a little lacking in depth, a little stiff—perhaps a bit unreal—with the exception of one, "Lanesville Rapids," this being characterized by honest painting, well done.

In a further room are to be seen the fragments left from the closing of the Frank V. Dudley one-man show, and the fragments are peculiarly beautiful. The canvases all deal with the dunes and the shores of Lake Michigan, but much as Mr. Dudley has painted this ground, over and over and over, never does he present it in any but fresh shape. The beauty of it, as revealed by him, makes one catch one's breath. There is a painting of wild flowers on a sand bank that is a revelation. And there is a wide expanse of stormy, purple water, that is another revelation. Mr. Dudley has grown in his craft as a painter to a development that marks him one of our leading artists.

A third exhibit in these galleries is that of water colors and etchings by Ynqve Edward Soderberg. These have charm and a facile touch to commend them. The etchings show more serious work, but the entire exhibit is worth while.

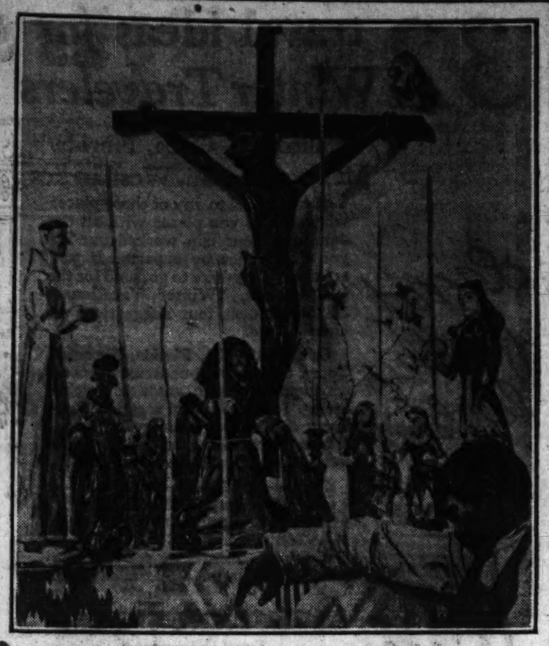
At the Institute.

The Tuesday afternoon lecture in Fullerton hall of the Art institute this week will be given by Laurence Binyon of the department of prints and drawings in the British museum at London. His topic will be "Indian Painting."

Lorado Taft has resumed his lectures on sculpture and will give them throughout the winter each Sunday afternoon in Fullerton hall at 5:30 o'clock. The Sunday concerts in Fullerton hall, given by the Little Symphony Ensemble under the direction of George Dasch, conductor, are at 3 and at 4.15 o'clock.



"STRANGE THINGS," by Walter Ufer, an unusual painting by this leader of the Taos school of painters, is to be found in the exhibition of American paintings and sculpture in the east wing galleries of the Art institute.

A WONDERFUL NEW INVENTION

AN almost miraculous return of hearing power is now assured you. Though there is but a spark of hearing left, that failing sense can be revived through the

BOOSTER AMPLIFYING UNIT
"The Aural Wonder of the Century"

This new attachment is but a small disk, approximating a half-dollar in size and weighing a little over an ounce, yet it amplifies sound to a magnitude never before approached [heavy box devices, weighing many pounds, not excepted] but with a purity of tone that is truly amazing. It is to the Phonophor what the vacuum tube is to the radio.

FIVE NEW PHONOPHOR MODELS

The Phonophor, equipped with the Booster Amplifying Unit, enables even the very deaf not only to enjoy modulated conversation but also to hear, perfectly and without effort, in church, theatre or concert-hall, whether seated five, fifty or one hundred and fifty feet from the pulpit or stage.

Such perfect hearing is accomplished through the Booster Amplifying Unit. Its development and perfection not only has brought the entire range of Phonophors to the highest pitch of perfection as a hearing aid, but it also tends to arrest the progress of advancing deafness.

A NEW CHICAGO OFFICE

The efficacy of these advanced instruments can be best appreciated by actual test. To facilitate such convincing demonstrations, to bring the new Phonophor closer to you, we have opened a permanent branch office in Chicago, at Suite 1812, Mallers Building, 59 East Madison Street.

This opening will be featured by a special demonstration, conducted by several experts, on November 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M.

TEST THESE NEW AIDS—YOU NEED NOT BUY

Those with impaired hearing are invited to call during demonstration week for personal consultation. There will be no obligation to purchase.

Even if your case seems hopeless,—if it has failed to respond to many other aids or treatments—we honestly believe that a demonstration of the new Phonophor, fitted with the Booster Amplifying Unit, will convince you that comfortable hearing can be obtained instantly, easily and permanently. If unable to call, write for further particulars.

Morrison Hotel

REFRIGERATING ROOM, MORRISON HOTEL CHICAGO

THE "art of dining well" is no academic mystery at the Morrison Hotel; scientific equipment has long made it a recognized tradition of the institution.

The 300-Ton Refrigerating Plant is one of many incidentals that aid in maintaining the perfect cuisine. It cools the large storerooms where fresh meats are kept until exactly right to bring out their best flavor.

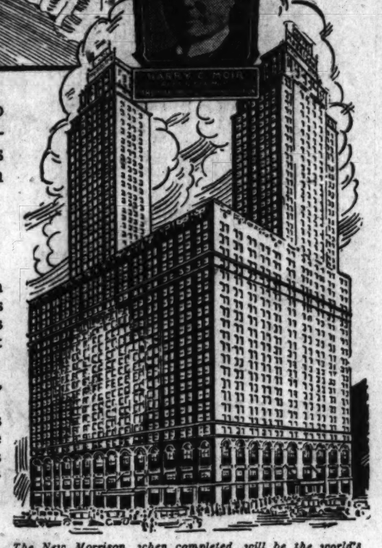
Luxury with Economy

Yet, although the quality of the meals is unsurpassed even by the most expensive hotels, the moderation of Morrison prices is a proverb. Note, for example, the following figures for fixed-price meals:

Breakfast, 35c to $1.00
Luncheon, 80c. Dinner, $1.25.



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

1944 Outside Rooms, $2.50 Up

Every guest room at the Morrison has bath, running ice water, and Servidor, which assures complete privacy. Every patron enjoys garage privileges. Yet minimum rates are charged because the valuable store subleases at this central location pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

The Terrace Garden's table d'hote Sunday dinner is served from 5 to 9 p. m., with dancing and full entertainment program; only $1.50. Write or wire for room reservations, or phone State 8700.

Romance is calling you~

Would you step back thru the centuries to Yesterday? Then come to San Antonio!

Come to this land of enchantment—where the sun casts a golden glamour over crumbling gray missions ... where the white magic of the moon silvers a forbidding wall ... where the faint strumming of a guitar adds its plaintive note to the allurement of a soft Spanish air ... where sleek motors pant impatiently as a serape-draped Mexican urges his indifferent donkey across a crowded street ... where rustling palms whisper of another day.

Heed the call of Romance!—spend this winter in Sunny San Antonio, where the charms of Yesterday cling to the progress of Today!

Any railroad agent can quote you Winter tourist rates to San Antonio. Ten-day stop-over allowed on all through tickets, any direction.

San Antonio
"The Winter Playground of America"

Things to See and Do

The Alamo
The historic mission-fort, where Davy Crockett and his little band of Texans held out against overwhelming odds and perished to the last man in defense of Texas Liberty.

The Missions
Built 225 years ago by the Spanish padres. Mission San Juan is the finest example of Spanish architecture in the Western Hemisphere.

Fort Sam Houston
By far the largest army post in the country. Infantry, Cavalry and Artillery all represented in an amazing array.

Brackenridge Park
Second to none in beauty, improvements and facilities for outdoor sports—golf—horseback riding—polo—tennis—picnics and other recreation.

Mexican Quarter
Quaint and interesting by day—see the native costume dances at night, to the tune of strumming guitars.

San Fernando Cathedral
In the heart of the city, adjoining a modern office building—a strange contrast of the Old World and the New.

Play Golf
On the finest and smartest courses in the South—acres of greens fees and ample competition of the homes over. Texas Open Golf Championship, attracting national stars, played over Brackenridge Park municipal course.

Ride Horseback
26 miles of bridle path in Brackenridge Park—suitable mounts available at reasonable rates.

Hunt and Fish
Medina Lake—30 miles away by perfect road—in the paradise of the hunter and black bass fisherman. Paved roads to Gulf Coast points, where water fowl winter, and tarpon and deep sea bass abound.

Motor
More miles of paved road in Bexar County (San Antonio) than any county in U. S. Paved roads to Corpus Christi on Texas Gulf Coast, and to Laredo, Brownsville, Del Rio and Eagle Pass, all on Mexican border.

Play Tennis
On any of scores of finely kept clay courts—San Antonio residents play the year around—assuring adequate competition for the visitor.

Motion Picture Making
The war scenes of "The Big Parade" were filmed at San Antonio. "Wings" and "The Rough Riders", featuring Mary Astor, Clara Bow, Wallace Beery and others, made entirely at San Antonio. New pictures constantly being filmed.

New sights • • new scenes • • new sources of pleasure and recreation await you here • • in this most delightful of all Southern resorts.

Here, surrounded by the atmosphere of Old World romance and adventure, you can pass your time out in the open • • in the invigorating air and mellow sunshine • • doing the things you like to do. You can saunter in flower-grown parks and plazas • • explore the winding streets of the old Mexican quarter • • motor over smooth roads • • hunt, fish and golf to your heart's content.

Your happy, restful, carefree days begin the moment you board the KATY for San Antonio • • and continue all the time you spend there. There's room for all at reasonable rates • • in fine hotels, furnished apartments and in private homes.

Go via the Texas Line

The principal highway to San Antonio lies through St. Louis or Kansas City and the Katy. Three fine, fast trains—the Limited, TEXAS SPECIAL and Katy Flyer offer choice of suitable hours for departure and arrival. Smooth roadbed, through Pullmans and dining cars—and attentive service add to the pleasures of your trip.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Executives and Managers.

WE WANT THREE

SALES MANAGERS

WHO CAN EARN

$5,000 TO $20,000

OR MORE PER YEAR.

One of the oldest and most successful REAL ESTATE CORPORATIONS in Chicago needs three more aggressive and competent sales managers. We want only "Square Shooters" — men who can manage sales—and who know how to get results out of men. We want working managers—not swivel chair artists.

WE ARE ABOUT TO OPEN

TWO NEW PROPERTIES

in the finest suburban locations around Chicago—beautiful and heavily wooded tracts. They include properties on the North Shore and to the West.

We have more than $15,000,000 worth of wonderful land.

The men who can qualify for these positions and who can deliver sales can establish permanent and profitable connections with a house known throughout Chicago for its reliable methods—and for the character of its properties.

This is an especially good proposition for men of real executive ability — who can bring their own men with them.

This advertisement is run without an address—because we do not want a lot of callers. We prefer that you shall write us — and we will then arrange a time for interview.

If you are at present employed and want to "do better than you have ever done" —write us in STRICT CONFIDENCE. Character is a necessary qualification — and so are sales and managing ability. WRITE NOW. Address B Y 68, Tribune.

SALESMANAGER.

In all Chicago we do not believe there is a greater opportunity for making money or for future promotion than there is right here. We are right now one of the largest corporations in our line of business, and we are still growing.

We do believe that we can train our men differently, that our commodity is better than that sold by others, and that we co-operate with our men to a greater extent.

We want a Noser who can handle men. We are a firm of young men, which has sold more than $7,000,000 worth of close-in, restricted Chicago real estate in last eighteen months. If you make the grade you will be paid well. Call at once. See J. G. TEMPLETON,

DID YOU EVER HEAR OF HINKAMP & CO.?

Throughout Chicago you will see the bright sign of this successful firm shining from conspicuous walls, on boulevards, and lively business streets, and from bulletin boards on choice and desirable profit making South Side real estate. It is the Sign of Profit—Profit to the buyer of Hinkamp real estate, profit to the salesman.

Hinkamp & Co. wants several more salesmen—producers, hard hitters, conscientious workers, men who can stand success. To high caliber salesmen Hinkamp & Co. offers independence, higher income than almost any other possible connection. Several Hinkamp salesmen have earned over $25,000 each this year. But the opportunities are unlimited.

Hinkamp & Co. specializes in property with the Chicago city limits in the line of development, restricted to apartments and business, with underground improvements—the best property available in Chicago today. Hinkamp & Co. stays with each subdivision until and after it is developed. So well has Hinkamp Profit Land been sold that not one buyer is one month in arrears in payment—and Hinkamp & Co. has sold over $7,000,000 within the last 12 months.

If you believe that you can qualify to sell Hinkamp Profit Land, call at once. If you are a real salesman, independent, but have had no real estate experience, do not hesitate to call. You will be given every assistance to make good, providing you seriously wish to get ahead. Some of the most successful Hinkamp salesmen have come from other specialty lines, worked hard, and have increased their incomes greatly. Call immediately.

WE PAY YOU EACH WEEK

Whether you sell or not and furnish you with live leads if you are a willing worker. We will make you $100 per week. Come in and let us prove it. Room 348, 111 W. Washington.

WHY BE SATISFIED WITH $40 TO $60 A WEEK
WHEN YOU CAN EARN
$100 AND MORE?

We are just opening up for sale two more wonderful suburban subdivisions conveniently to the loop, surrounded by beautiful homes. WE MUST ENLARGE OUR SALES FORCE. You don't have to have experience to sell the class of real estate we offer. We will show you how you can make big money. We have women who less than a year ago were clerks—and who today are earning from $100 to $200 every week.

There are thousands of women in Chicago who are earning $40 to $60 per week who can earn more money. Remember, we do not ask you to give up your present position until you are certain you will be successful. But you know success can be obtained only by going after it. We merely ask you to come in and talk it over. A nationally known sales instructor will show you how to make appointments. Experienced sales managers will close sales for you. You will earn while you learn.

YOU WILL BE GIVEN LEADS EVERY DAY.

We have a real opportunity for you. We have $12,000,000 worth of property—the finest North Shore and Western subdivisions—heavily wooded lots—to sell right now. Thirty-six minutes from the loop. Making appointments with people to see these properties will earn big money for you on every sale that results.

Those who prove their ability will be promoted. We want to see only women WHO WANT TO MAKE MORE MONEY. You can start right now toward a bigger income without losing a single week's pay.

Beauty Parlor Operators.

Lila Farrell, in her work with us as character analyst selecting ladies to handle our special work, has determined through her classes that lady beauty specialists are especially qualified to succeed in a big way in our organization, due to the fact that they know how to handle the public and have more or less studied human nature and make many acquaintances and friends. Probably that is the reason why the ladies in our organization who have been in the beauty business are earning over $75 per week.

Miss Farrell wants to start a new unit composed entirely of beauty parlor operators to definitely demonstrate to us that $75 per week can be earned by those she selects for this new unit.

If you are over 25 years old—married or single—come in Monday any time after 10 a. m. and let Lila Farrell frankly tell you whether you are qualified to get into the big money making class. Would be very glad to have you call even though you can devote only part time to our special work.

ROOM 922,
77 W. WASHINGTON-ST.

Those selected by me making a success of this work will be promoted to field managers.

Call Monday after 10 a. m.

1120 Lake Shore Drive

CORNER OF ELM-ST.

The apartments in this building are spacious, exceptionally well lighted and ventilated, and have every modern convenience for enjoyable living.

The total monthly operating cost of a five room apartment under our 100% cooperative plan is as low as $117.84; and in the seven room apartment as low as $169.40.

There is only one Lake Shore-dr., and it unquestionably is the finest location for residential purposes in Chicago. Its convenience and beauty have made it Chicago's fashion center and one of Chicago's most attractive real estate investments.

THINK THIS OVER.

1. THE BUILDING IS ON A CORNER. There is no other lot on Lake Shore-dr. available unless one wrecks an expensive mansion.

2. THE LAND VALUE of the lot at 1120 Lake Shore-dr. HAS INCREASED 30% since we first offered these apartments to the public, but we are still offering them at the original price.

3. OVER 80% OF THE APARTMENTS ARE SOLD. The building is a thoroughly successful 100% co-operative project right now.

4. ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE. The names of the group of owners who will be your neighbors are available to you.

5. THE BUILDING IS CONSERVATIVELY FINANCED. It has only one loan owned by the New York Life Insurance company.

6. A FEW APARTMENTS ARE STILL AVAILABLE.

The equities range from $12,800 up. You may purchase an apartment in this building with as little as $4,500, paying the remainder out of income rather than capital. This is the time to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity.

PLANS, SPECIFICATIONS AND SCHEDULED PRICES WILL BE SUPPLIED UPON REQUEST.

Why not come with your family to the building and see these delightful apartments? There is no urge to buy—just courteous attention when you require it.

before bitter winter sets in. I have just returned from Mississippi and am enthused with possibilities there. Within 26 miles of the State Capitol in the world's greatest agricultural belt, where three crops can be harvested in a season, I found rich alluvial lands as low as $25 per acre. Also fine locations with several tenant houses, wonderful timber. An inspection of these lands will prove what our own Mr. Lowden says, "Mississippi is the Virginia." You may have the benefit of my experience as a surveyor, civil engineer and realtor. A. L. WEBSTER, Wheaton, Ill.

McCUTCHEON

THIS FAMOUS McCUTCHEON CARTOON appeared first in The Tribune of August 7, 1914. It followed the entrance of England into the conflict that was to grow into the great war of all the ages. The cartoon is reproduced in colors at the request of many Tribune readers. It serves as a timely memorial for the anniversary, next Thursday, of Armistice day.

"All's well that ends well"

"Sally! The most terrible thing has happened! That new beaded georgette of mine—the blue one I was going to wear to the dance tomorrow night—it's absolutely ruined. The rain must have leaked through the suitcase on it or something. What shall I do?"

"Don't worry, Julie, we can wash it in plenty of time."

"You wouldn't think of washing it!"

"With Ivory? Surely I would. I have always cleaned my georgettes that way. Come along, we can do it before tea."

And now at the dance, Julie is radiant. "Sally," she stage-whispers across Tom's shoulder, "isn't it perfectly enchanting?"

To guard your complexion

learn these important facts

The skin of your face is full of tiny pores which throw off moisture and impurities. Your face has also a multitude of what scientists call sebaceous glands. These glands supply natural oils—without these oils the skin would be drawn and rough.

So it is easy to understand that mistreatment of your skin or the use of unsuitable soap may fill up the pores or dry up the glands. Then these little organs will cease to work properly and your skin will lose its clearness and smoothness.

In order to remove dirt from pores and the skin surface, soap is necessary. The dirt that accumulates there combines with the oils and cannot be completely removed by any other method than soap-and-water washing.

Only physicians know how many skin troubles come from too much massage; over-manipulation, improper cleansing methods; or the use of unsuitable soap.

Medical authorities say: "Wash sensibly with pure, mild soap. Then healthful, refreshing cleanliness will result." Ivory Soap cleanses thoroughly without needing to be rubbed in, yet it also cleanses gently without robbing the skin of its natural oil.

Daily washing with Ivory Soap and warm water, followed by a dash of cold water and a little pure cold cream, if you like, is the very best cleansing treatment for your skin.

PROCTER & GAMBLE

Bobby joins the ladies

"Isn't Bobby perfectly sweet!" exclaims Sally Verity in an admiring whisper to her mother.

"Don't!" cautions Mrs. Jollyco. "Don't let your brother hear you use such language. He's vain enough as it is. He already bathes twice a day and wears eight shirts a week. I simply can't keep enough Ivory Soap in the house any more."

"Well," says Bobby, who has heard none of this, "I guess I'll drift. Got a date up the Drive."

Ivory Flakes meets this important safety test:

Before you trust your costly fine fabrics to any soap in any form, a doubt naturally comes up in your mind.

"Is this soap really safe?"

Ask yourself: "Would I be willing to use this soap on my face?"

A soap which is too strong for your face is naturally too strong for your delicate and costly garments.

Ivory Flakes is simply Ivory Soap in flake form. Of course it fully meets this important safety test. For Ivory Soap, pure, mild, gentle, white — has protected the faces and hands of millions of women since 1879.

Ivory Flakes offers you a real margin of safety for cleansing the very finest garments you own. Many women wash all their clothes and dishes with Ivory or Ivory Flakes, thus saving their hands and preventing redness and roughness.

". . . the poppies blow Between the crosses, row on row"

A SOLDIER'S FAREWELL TO HIS PARENTS, the beautiful letter reproduced here, was written by the boy pictured above. He was Lieut. Ralph Jefferson Feigl of Battery F, Seventh Field Artillery, First Division, A. E. F., the first American artillery officer killed in action in France. Lieut. Jeff Feigl, as he was known, was instantly killed, at Beaumont, by a fragment of a German shell on March 21, 1918, the first day of the great German drive on which the fate of the world seemed to hang. The lad had a premonition that his end was near, for his last letter was found a year after his death in a handbag that had gone astray. Eleven days before his death he had been cited for exceptional bravery under fire, and he was posthumously awarded the Croix de Guerre with palm. Lieut. Feigl was a Harvard student, the son of Col. and Mrs. Fred Feigl of New York city, where an American Legion post now bears his name. He was not yet 23 years old when he died.

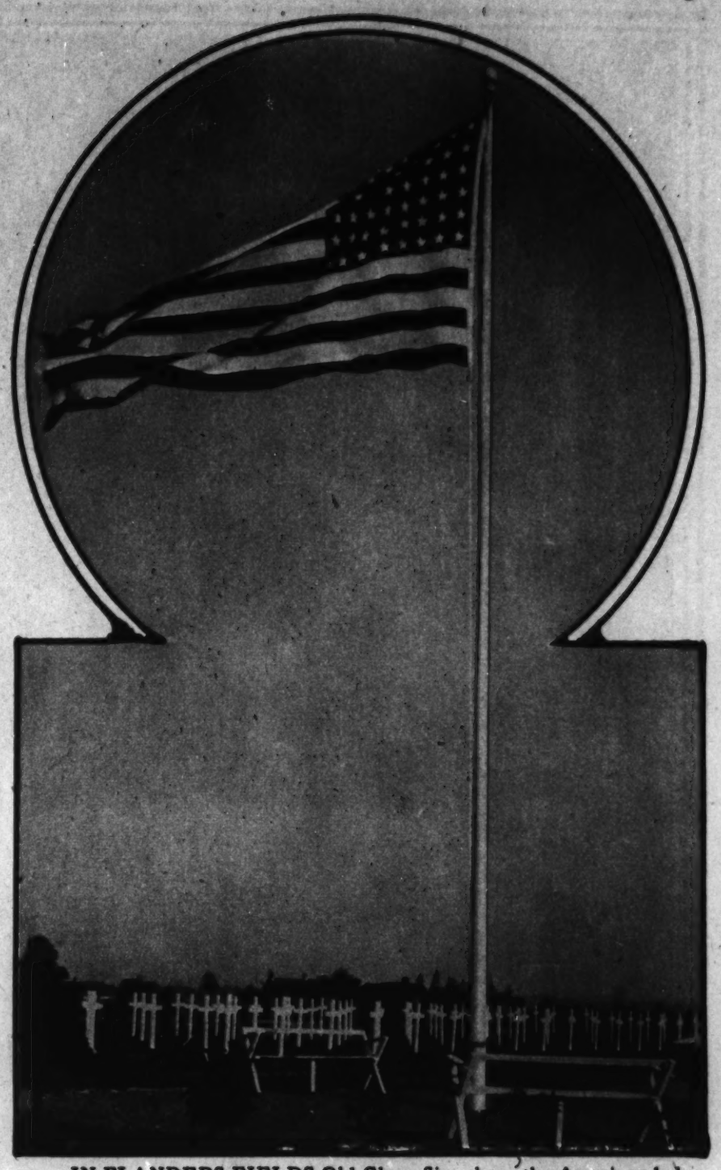
Dear Parents,

I suppose you alls will be feelin pretty low about the time this arrives. If my instructions have been carried out you'll already have received a cable telling you of the death of your one and only son. Please believe, fond parents, that I realize just what the loss means to you and what a void its going to leave in your lives. Therefore, I wont ask you to cheer up, cause I know it wouldn't do any good.

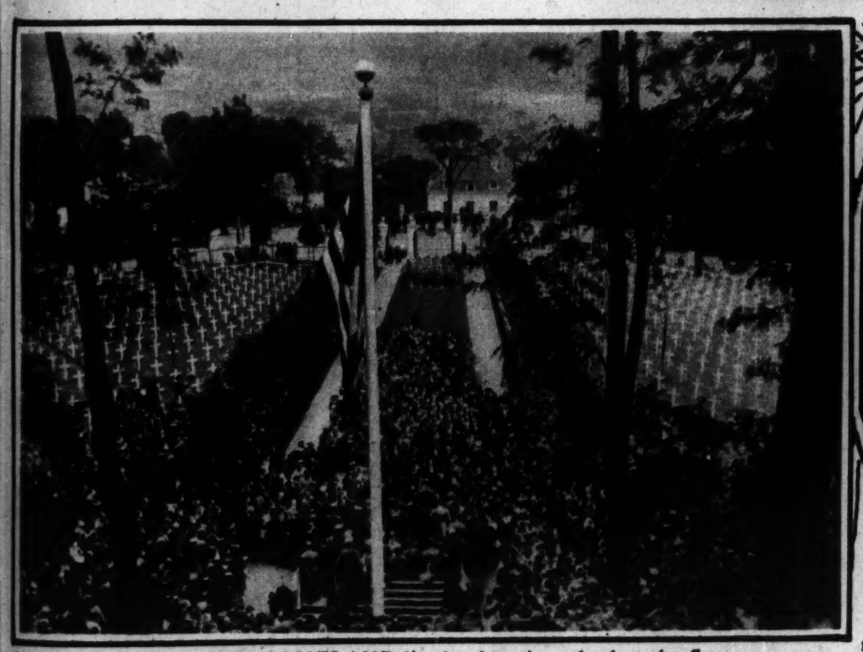
As far as I'm concerned, however, it seems as if dame Fortune couldn't have picked a nicer or more gentlemanly manner for me to make my exit, and if it wasn't for the grief I know I'm causing you, I would be more contented now, in leaving this life, than I ever could have been while living it. If I may have a final request it is this, that any love you had for me, you'll, towards each other, thus filling in some part, the gap I leave behind.

Love, son

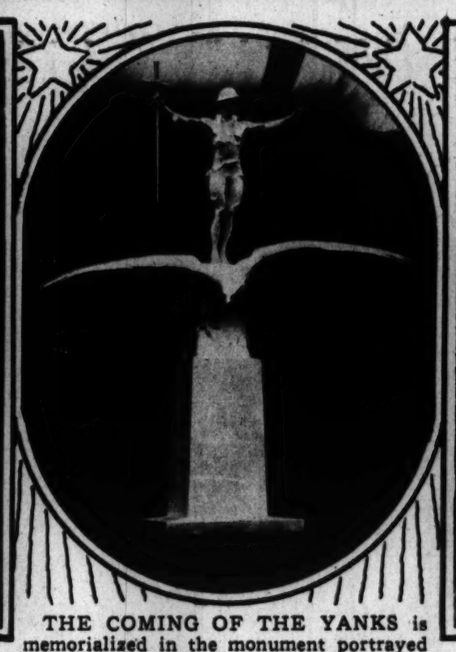
Feigl



IN FLANDERS FIELDS Old Glory flies above the American lads whose blood stained the Ypres sector a deeper hue. The little cemetery is at the town of Waereghem, Belgium, where townsfolk will join this Armistice day in laying wreaths of memory upon the graves of the men from over the sea.

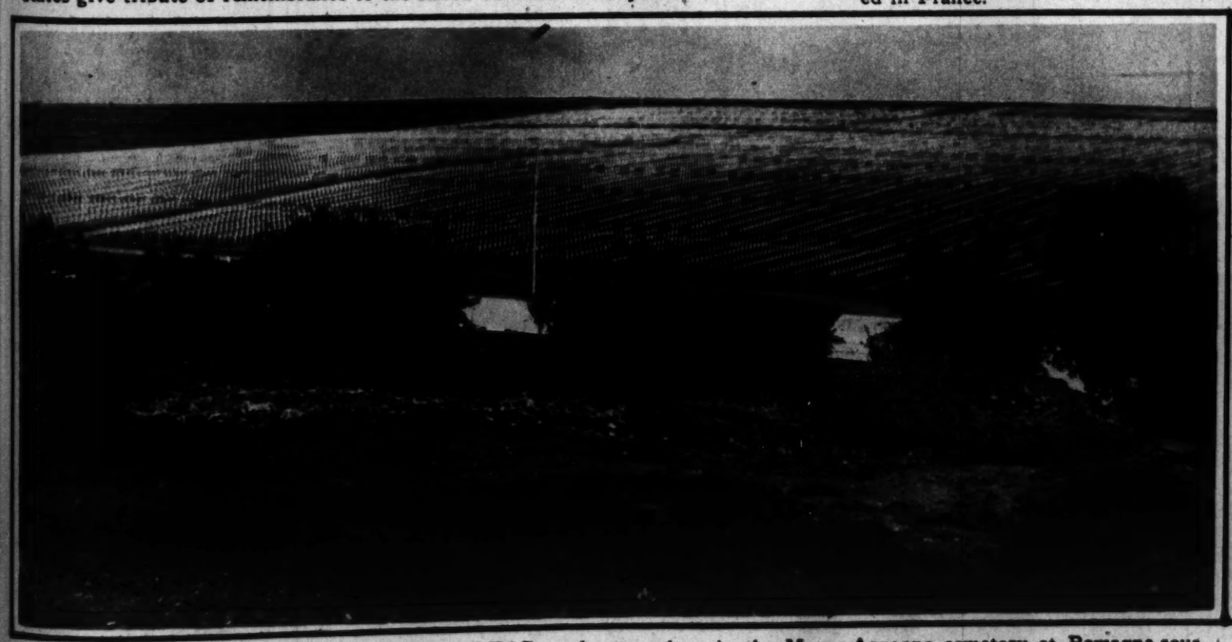


IN A BIT OF THE HOMELAND lie the American dead at the Suresnes cemetery at Paris, owned by the United States. In this beautiful spot, kept green lovingly and meticulously by an American staff, official France and representatives of the states give tribute of remembrance to the fallen on memorial days.

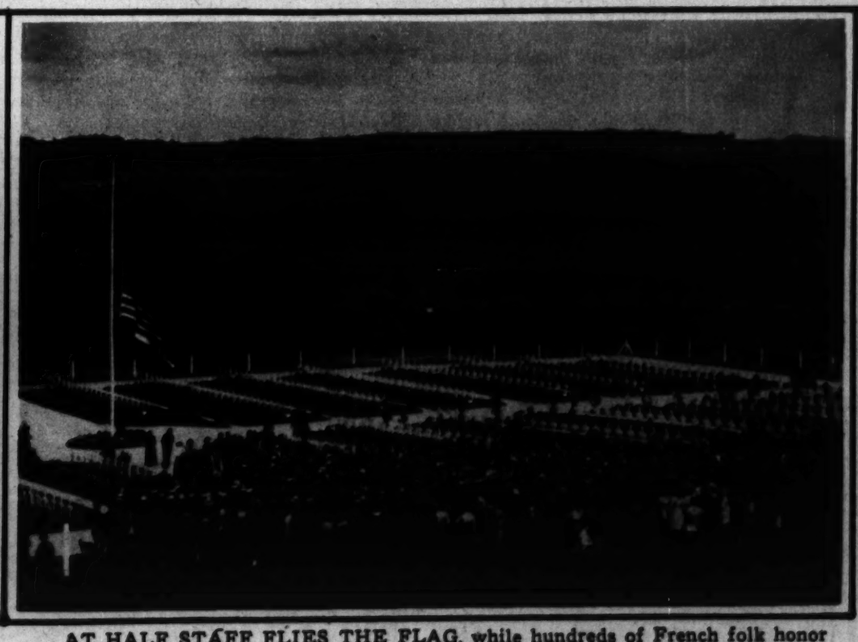


THE COMING OF THE YANKS is memorialized in the monument portrayed in the model here. The monument, by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, stands at Saint-Nazaire, where the first American troops landed in France.

TEARS CONSECRATE an American hero's grave in the Meuse-Argonne cemetery at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon. Nor is any other of these sons of America forgotten in a foreign land, as witness the flags of the United States and France that flutter at each cross.



FOURTEEN THOUSAND AMERICAN DEAD, and more, sleep in the Meuse-Argonne cemetery at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, largest of the eight burial fields established in Europe by the United States. Next Thursday, as on all Armistice days, this white forest of crosses will glow with the color of flowers and flags.



AT HALF STAFF FLIES THE FLAG, while hundreds of French folk honor the memory of the American dead in the Aisne-Marne cemetery at Belleau. Here lie immortals of Belleau wood, where they fell in the victorious glory of hurling back the German tide.

WASHINGTON HEIRESS TO WED TITLED BELGIAN—Miss Allison Roebling, daughter of Mrs. Arthur O'Brien and heiress to the Roebling millions, with her fiance, Baron Joseph van der Elst, secretary of the Belgian embassy. Miss Roebling is a great-granddaughter of John A. Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn bridge.

Grandmother used it

YOUR mother probably used Dr. Price's Vanilla Extract—yes, and grandmother too, for this famous vanilla has been the popular flavoring since 1853. Price's Vanilla costs a little more, but its rare tropic flavor and uniformity are well worth the slight difference.

Made of the finest juice of the true vanilla bean, it is aged in wood to bring out to the full its wonderful flavor and strength.

We will send, free of charge, an attractive recipe book, "Delicious Desserts and Candies," compiled by well-known cooking experts. Address the Price Flavoring Extract Company, Dept. C, Chicago, Ill.

DR PRICE'S VANILLA

Maple Cream Sauce

1 cup of heavy cream, 4 tablespoons of thick maple syrup, ½ teaspoon of Dr. Price's Vanilla Extract.

Beat the cream stiff, add the syrup and the Dr. Price's Vanilla Extract to it and either pile around pudding or serve in a separate dish.

FASHION DEMANDS TOILETWARE GAY IN COLOR

THE smartest women of the day are using toiletware in colors that harmonize with the decorations of their rooms. They naturally select Fiberloid Toiletware because it gives them such a splendid variety of colors and such truly Parisian designs.

Gloria, the newest pattern, is indeed stunning in its combination of pearly green, blue or rose with brilliant transparent Fiberloid of contrasting tone.

Deauville is another most popular design. It comes in a range of colors that give it an instant appeal to the feminine heart.

And these are but two of the many smart Fiberloid designs from which you can choose the toiletware for your dressing tables. You will find these newest Fiberloid creations in the more select stores. If your favorite store does not have them on display we will very gladly tell you where they can be seen. The Fiberloid Corporation, Indian Orchard, Mass.

SEND FOR A SAMPLE TUBE OF THE DENTIFRICE MOST MEN AND WOMEN USE

You may think your teeth clean, but let another person admire them and you know that your teeth show their healthy cleanness.

Now . . . . four senses say

CLEAN

The cleansing foam of this modern dentifrice brings a new cleanness.

You can taste it. You can feel it

ONE minute after using Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, four senses tell you that your teeth are clean—your mouth pure—your breath wholesome.

The touch of your tongue against the back of your teeth, the feel of your lips against the front of your teeth, a glance in the mirror—all flash—CLEAN.

Concentrated in the Colgate tube is a remarkable power to clean. Liberated at the first touch of moisture it expands into a delicious, snow-white foam. This foam washes thoroughly—washes clean—polishes—protects.

Through utter cleanness Colgate's removes the causes of tooth decay. Doctors and dentists give no drugs to well people. "Complete cleanliness," says science, "and you need not fear imaginary afflictions of teeth, mouth or gums."

Colgate's contains nothing for mental dental ills. It cleans and cleans evidently. What more can be promised to normal, healthy Americans with healthy mouths.

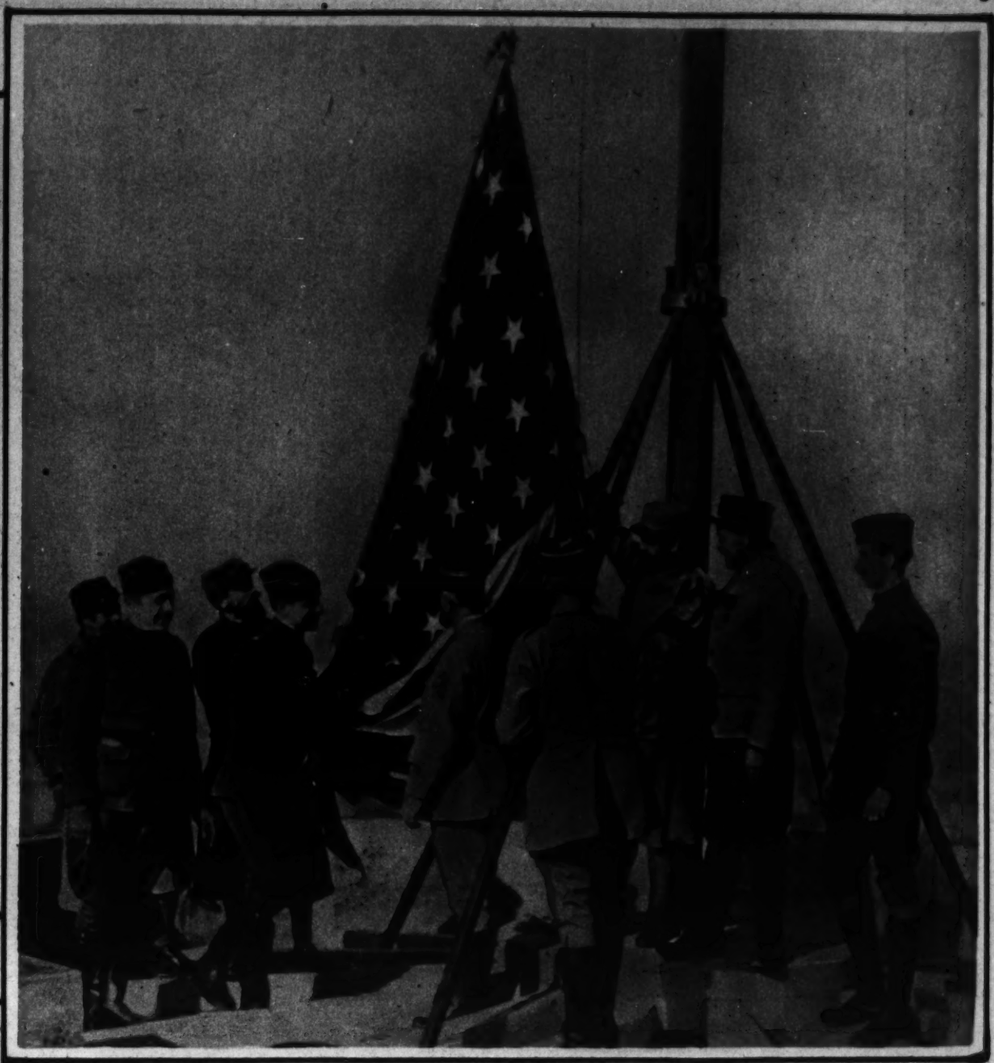
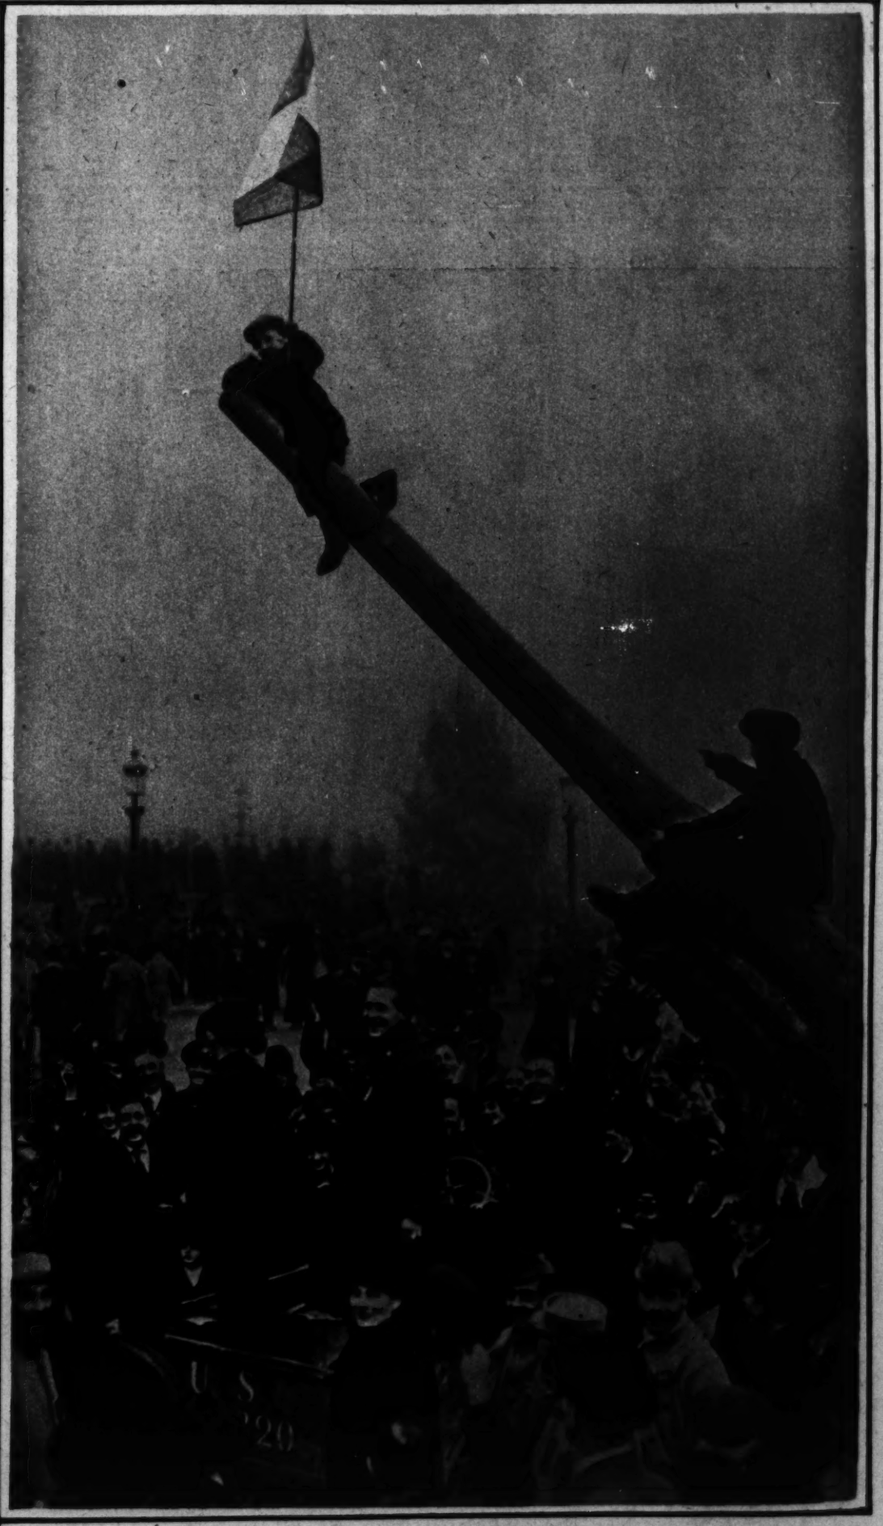
The First Armistice Day

EIGHT YEARS AGO next Thursday this hilarious crowd of Yanks of the Twenty-seventh division staged an informal celebration of the armistice with their private liberty bell. As you would guess by the overseas caps, it was somewhere in France.



EIGHT YEARS AGO, TOO, Yankees and some French comrades made a great ceremony of raising the Stars and Stripes over Fort de Vincennes to celebrate the coming of peace.

AND THERE WERE HIGH JINKS IN OLD VINCENNES. Celebrants of the American signal corps started the ball rolling, and it ended in this parade. Boys and girls, poilus and girl friends, beards and smooth faces, horizon blue and olive drab—arm in arm, shouting, laughing, singing, they painted the old town red on Nov. 11, 1918.



ON THE PLACE DE LA CONCORDE throngs of Americans and French, to say nothing of a few dozen other assorted nationalities, eddied and swirled in a delirious transport of joy. Directly beneath the barrel of the captured gun, in the background, is visible the statue of Strassburg, the Alsace-Lorraine capital redeemed by the war. Before Paris had more than begun to celebrate the armistice the statue was buried beneath flowers enough to make a florist explode with envy. (All photographs from Pacific and Atlantic.)

GOOD-BY TO GOLDFISH, good-by to monkey meat. Good-by to vin rouge and cognac and mademoiselles and the mire of sunny France. Red diamond doughboys of the Fifth division sloshed about in the mud in the 1918 version of the Black Bottom when they heard that la guerre was fini, and flung tin hats into the air like paid claqueurs at a political rally.

200 KILLED BY SOUTH AMERICAN TORNADO—What remained of the city of Encarnacion, Paraguay, after the storm had passed. Four hundred buildings were razed, leaving hundreds of families destitute.

Maybe you won't admit this—

NO one likes to admit being lazy —about anything!

Particularly not to a boss, to a wife or to a father-in-law.

Up to this point we probably agree, don't we?

BUT—unfortunately, most of us—maybe all of us—are lazy about certain things. Usually these are the small, important things in life, things that often have a very important bearing on our own well-being.

Take brushing the teeth, for example: even in this simple little job many of us are careless.

At night we're tired; in the morning we're in a hurry.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth.

In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient —entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay. —Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for a large tube.

*This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.

HERE'S THE ILLINOIS FIELD GOAL THAT BEAT PENN, 3 to 0, in their great intersectional football battle at Urbana. For three quarters these gridiron giants fought each other to a scoreless standstill. Then an aerial attack by Illinois put the ball close to the Quakers' goal line. "Frosty" Peters dropped back to the 17-yard mark and booted the winning score which you see sailing between the goal posts. At the right is a close-up of the Illini hero, pictured in his favorite act.

BEAUTY

never knew a Castile soap exquisite like this!

For six hundred years beauty has acknowledged the supreme virtue of Castile soap. In Spain, where Castile first was made; in Spain, land of the most gorgeous complexions in all Europe, the flower of Race and Luxury will use nothing else!

There is nothing else that can approach the delicious blandness of Castile! But how little it looks the part. Nameless! Shapeless! Clumsy! Small wonder many dainty women do not include this impossible object among the exquisite indispensables of their toilette?

But—at last—we have made for you an exquisite Castile. Doña! Molded in Cameo perfection for the intimacy of your hand. We have given it a charming dress. And to its virtue of blandness we have added these: instant lather, even in cold water; instant rinsing as well. What a blessing to women with delicate skins! Wonderful, too, for the shampoo! And Doña is "hard-milled," firm, it will last.

Plain, is it not?—the reason why millions of women who would not use Castile now use—and love—Doña? What feminine woman could resist its feminine perfections? Not you, if you take Doña in your hand and use it—once! Buy it where you buy your toilet soap. Armour, U.S.A.

Here Are the Simple Rules!

1—This offer is open to every girl—unmarried or widow—residing anywhere in the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin, excepting professional beauties, such as stage girls or artists' models, and excepting employes of The Tribune and members of their families. It is free. There is no charge of any kind.

2—The Chicago Tribune will pay cash prizes ranging from $50.00 to $10,000.00 each and totaling $20,000.00 to the 56 most beautiful peaches themselves. See prize list herewith.

3—Peaches may be nominated by any relative or friend. To nominate a peach, simply send in her name and address. A Nomination Coupon will appear in The Chicago Tribune each Sunday. You may use this or write on a separate sheet of paper.

4—Send a photograph of your peach nominee if you can. Otherwise The Tribune will endeavor to obtain one by writing your nominee direct.

If you wish to enter this peach search personally, send in your photograph. Any kind of photograph will do—a small snapshot, a cabinet photo or a postcard picture. Style of photograph will not count, as standard photographs of the peaches selected by the judges will be made later at The Tribune's expense. From these standard photographs the 56 prize winners will be chosen. Therefore, do not hesitate to send in any photograph you have.

5—A Nomination Coupon should be pasted on the back of each photograph submitted, or the same information should be written on the photograph. All entries should be addressed "Peaches," The Chicago Tribune, Postoffice Box 1539, Chicago, Ill. The Tribune cannot be responsible for photographs, but will try to return all photographs that are accompanied by sufficient postage to cover their return.

6—A new group of photographs of peaches will be published each Sunday in the Picture Section of The Chicago Sunday Tribune. Photographs of the six sectional first prize winners will be published in The Tribune's Natural Color Photography.

7—This contest is now open. Peaches should be nominated at once. No entries will be accepted after midnight, December 7th.

8—The judges will be a committee of three well known and reputable artists and writers. Their decision will be final and not open to question.

ANCIENT SPORT MAKES AMERICAN DEBUT—William Humphries, English sportsman, with the Bavarian goshawk "Flora" at Brewster, N. Y., where hawks were flown at pheasants and ducks in what was perhaps the first exhibition of falconry in this country. The art dates to 2000 B. C. in China. The birds are brought to the field hungry upon the falconer's gloved fist, trained to swoop upon the quarry for the kill. The long-winged hawks are hooded until flown at the prey; but upon the field, at least, the hood is not used for the short-winged variety, of which the goshawk is a member.

CHICAGO DRILL CHAMPIONS PAY TRIBUTE TO THEIR DEAD BUDDIES—The drill corps of Woodlawn Post No. 175, which won the first prize at the American Legion's convention in Philadelphia, presented this impressing front as Maj. Hamlet C. Ridgway placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Washington. The officers grouped in the center of the line are Capt. George E. Macauley, Capt. A. A. Langlund, Capt. Melville Mucklestone, Lieut. Leroy Howe, and Lieut. W. J. Milner.

At the left with her parents is Princess Bibesco, wife of the former Roumanian minister to the United States. The princess has contributed several fine short stories and serials to The Tribune's famous magazine pages. Her father, Lord Oxford and Asquith, former premier of England, recently resigned leadership of the Liberal party as a result of controversy with Lloyd George. And Lady Oxford and Asquith, otherwise Margot, is the personage best known for telling secrets in her memoirs.

MARTHE REGNIER, charming French actress and talented mondiste says: "Since I discovered Cutex it is no trouble at all to shape the cuticle in lovely ovals."

IN PARIS

they shape their cuticle this perfect way . .

The secret of shapely cuticle is keeping the old skin free from the nail as the new grows out. Cutex removes every shred of dry skin and shapes the new into perfect ovals.

LOVELY ovals of smooth cuticle, perfect Half Moons! What slenderness and beauty they give to the lovely, talented hands of the sophisticated Parisienne.

Yet the method she uses is the self same one you have known so long.

For after all, the one thing that makes the cuticle look so untidy is the old dead tissue that collects around it. Scissors won't take that away. Neither will pushing nor jabbing.

For this important part of the manicure the Parisienne has discovered a dainty liquid that almost magically removes this dead skin and shapes the new cuticle perfectly—revealing the lovely Half Moons.

It is Cutex—an essential of the manicure! In fact in Paris and at the smart French resorts more Cutex manicure preparations are sold than any other kind!

The Parisienne uses this method: She first washes her hands and shapes the nails. With an orange stick and cotton dipped in Cutex she works gently around the nail base. Every shred of dead tissue wipes away. The new cuticle almost shapes itself!

To complete their grooming, a bit of Nail White is smoothed under the nail tips and Cutex Liquid Polish is brushed evenly over each nail.

Cutex Manicure Sets—35c to $5.00—contain everything you need for the manicure. Separate preparations—35c.

6 Complete Manicures — only 10c

THE PHOTOGRAPHER RISKED HIS LIFE TO GET THIS PICTURE of a devil dance of lamas at a group of monasteries near Lassa, the sacred capital of Tibet. The robes worn by the monks are of ancient Chinese silk and the masks, made by a secret process, are hundreds of years old. All of the spectators visible are inhabitants of the monasteries. Lassa, "the forbidden city," was isolated for centuries until 1904, when a British trade expedition reached it and signed up the Tibetans as customers. MOUTH of YOUTH it can always be yours

Are they guarding your mouth?

The numbers show where the mouth glands are located, three on either side. Pebeco contains an important salty-tasting ingredient that keeps the mouth glands youthful, active.

SIX important mouth glands should be working in your mouth. When you eat, fluids from these tiny mouth glands should wash away food particles—protecting your teeth from food acids.

But from our earliest years, soft foods slow up the mouth glands. Even in childhood, decay begins! And so the formula had to be worked out that restores vigorous mouth glands. Especially for this purpose, Pebeco Tooth Paste was uniquely prepared.

The very taste of Pebeco—its refreshing, salty tang—and its tingling after-feeling tell you your mouth glands are re-acting to its help. Use Pebeco to keep the clean and healthy Mouth of Youth.

THE QUEEN OF BELGIUM VOTES, setting a royally democratic example for the women of her land. Nor was the balloting important—it was merely the town council election in Brussels. (Photograph from Acme.)

THE SWORD IS MIGHTIER THAN THE KNIFE, the photographer remarked. The bridegroom, in uniform, is Lieut. Charles P. AFTER THE HURRICANE DISASTER AT HAVANA—This Cuban city was a heavy sufferer from the storm that took hundreds of lives and destroyed the homes of thousands of families in Cuba and the Isle of Pines. In flooded Havana alone there were more than a hundred deaths. (Photograph from Wide World.)

A ROYAL ORIENTAL IN EUROPEAN DRESS is the empress of Japan as pictured here. Because of the emperor's poor health she is rarely seen in public, especially in western attire. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

HAVANA COUNTS ITS DEAD—Several bodies were found in the wreckage of this house, which went down early during the West Indian storm. From this scene may be gained a conception of the devastation throughout the islands of the tropics, impoverished and suffering as the result of loss of property and crops. SEVENTY-THREE YEARS A PRINTER—Such is the record of Col. W. N. Bates of Pekin, Ill., 86 years old, whose only respite from the case was during the Civil war, in which he won his military title. How the Garwoods' furniture money buys more beauty as well as more furniture

THERE was the whole house to furnish. So the Garwoods made up their minds to find furniture in which beauty did not mean extravagance . . . naturally that led them to the Cavalier dealer.

Finished beauty

Cavalier Furniture—bedroom and dining room—is made to give you extra value. In style and finish it rivals furniture far more costly. In sheer beauty, its rich, carefully matched, full-grain walnut veneering challenges the field, regardless of price.

Prove to yourself that honest value is an in-built feature of Cavalier. Examine several pieces. Notice the firm strength they have—graceful, but built to last. Look at the backs of dressers and buffets. You'll find them neatly finished, even though they are hidden. And the drawers slide smoothly on generous, oversize guides. Every piece of Cavalier Furniture bears a tag guaranteeing fine construction. It is your protection, so watch for it, and also for the figure of the Cavalier that appears only on the genuine.

See your dealer

If you want your furniture dollars to buy more, have a talk with your Cavalier dealer. He has studied furniture. You can depend upon his advice. And he'll tell you that Cavalier offers a truly remarkable combination of high quality at moderate prices.

Decorating Service—Complete and helpful hints with every suite. Ask your dealer about this and also the decorating manual, "Beautiful Bedrooms and Dining Rooms." Tennessee Furniture Corporation, Chattanooga, Tenn. Makers of bedroom and dining room furniture, cedar chests and refrigerators.

A Miracle? No
MAGNESIA!

MISS H. SWEARS milk of magnesia has "miraculous" powers. How else could it have toned her whole inner system, cleared her complexion, and altered her very looks? What is it that makes magnesia fairly rejuvenate those who have taken it at times to tone the stomach?

THIS LIQUID PURITY that stops after-eating distress in about a minute goes further than that—it sweetens the entire digestive tract—counteracts over-acidity. Soon your elimination is normal and thorough. Auto-intoxication stopped. Folks can actually feel the cleaner condition milk of magnesia brings about!

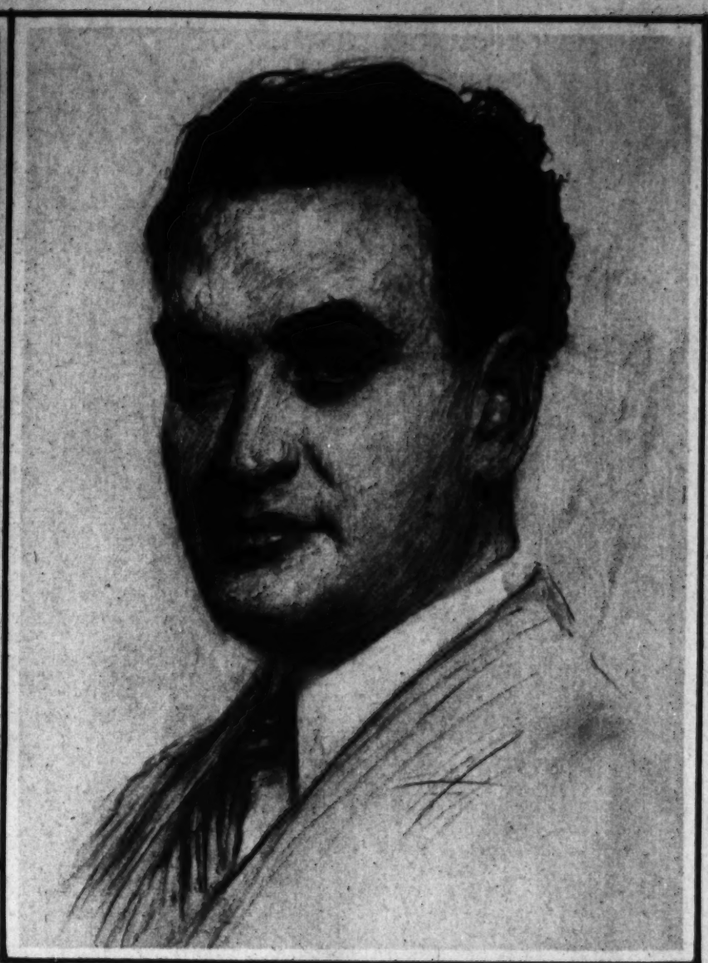
Stars of Chicago's Civic Opera

CLAUDIA MUZIO is scheduled to open the operatic season tomorrow night as Aida in Verdi's opera of the same name. The picture gives an idea of how she may be expected to look, but you will have to go to the opera to hear how she sounds. It will undoubtedly be on the same high plane as her appearance.

MARY GARDEN, fresh from Europe and ready to talk about sharks in the Mediterranean and on land, with an occasional incidental remark about critics, is to make her first appearance in "Resurrection." This is the way she looks in the first part of the opera before taking an excursion down the primrose path of dalliance. (Photograph copyright by De Gueldre.)



GIACOMO RIMINI—Professionally he is a baritone, in private life the husband of Rosa Raisa, by personal avocations a photographer and automobilist. Those who have been in the rear seat when he was at the wheel are ready to testify that he holds the operatic title for fast driving. (Drawing by Carl Bohnen.)

ROSA RAISA will take a leading part in the proceedings of the second night of the season, if all goes well. She will be Maliella in "The Jewels of the Madonna." No matter what the part may be, she herself is a jewel of a prima donna. (Photograph from H. A. Atwell.)

EDITH MASON—She is the wife of Musical Director Giorgio Polacco and the mother of the opera baby, Graziella, but to the opera and concert going public at large she is Edith Mason, a lovely and fine native born and bred American lyric soprano. (Drawing by Carl Bohnen.)

VANNI-MARCOUX, a famous singing actor of France, is bulletined for the name part in a revival of Mozart's "Don Giovanni." Gossip says that he is quite a personality in the part, and the picture says that he will look like this. (Photograph from Matzene.)

EIDE NORENA is a Norwegian coloratura soprano whose American reputation is still to be made. They speak well of her on the other side of the Atlantic, and she is billed for early appearance in various roles on the stage of the Auditorium.

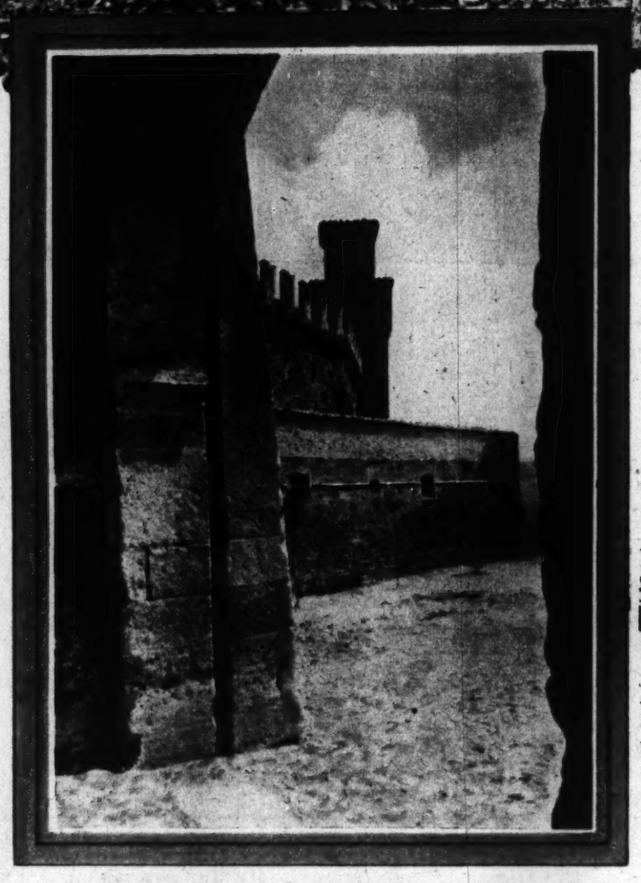
TITO SCHIPA—This is he as he is in the rare intervals when he permits himself to take a vacation. When he is not impersonating a tenorial hero he is wandering about the world on a concert tour, but Chicago will have eight weeks of his opera-ing heroes this season. That is Mr. Schipa's bold signature you see across this sketch. (Drawing by Carl Bohnen.)

ELSA ALSEN comes to the Chicago Civic Opera company to sing Wagnerian rôles, the same in which she created favorable comment a few years ago with the Wagnerian Opera company from Germany. Isolde of "Tristan and Isolde" will be her first on the Auditorium stage. (Photograph from Kessler.)

The Beautiful Duchesse de Gramont-

Distinguished Leader of French Aristocracy . . . on Keeping a Lovely Skin, Nature's Gift to Youth

The Duchesse de Gramont, accomplished horsewoman, riding to hounds in the parc of one of the most famous of the great historic French chateaux, near Paris, now belonging to a prince of the old aristocracy.



In northern Italy on the shores of lovely Lake Maggiore, the Duchesse de Gramont owns a magnificent medieval Castle. This view through an arch of the great wall shows courtyard, moat and massive tower.

To the Castle, overlooking the beautiful plains of Lombardy, come peasants in mule-drawn carts bringing the Duchesse tributes of flowers, fruit and vegetables.

THE DUCHESSE DE GRAMONT is the beautiful and distinguished widow of the late Antoine Alfred Agénor, Eleventh Duc de Gramont. He was head of an ancient and highly important French family which was granted a duchy as early as 1643. Before her marriage, the Duchesse was Maria Ruspoli, member of the prominent Italian family of the Princes Ruspoli, of Rome.

She is the acknowledged leader of Parisian society and is considered so exceedingly chic in dress that what she wears on any occasion is what the beau monde will seek to emulate next day.

Here she is wearing the smart little close-fitting velvet skull cap with ear-tabs for which she set the fashion. Among her favorite artists of the haute couture are Chanel and Vionnet.

YOUNG, beautiful, with beauty of a rare exotic sort, now brilliant as crystal, now shadowy as a fugitive moonbeam. Dark, svelte, graceful—with the bearing of a woman unconsciously proud of her distinguished lineage. This is Maria Ruspoli, Duchesse de Gramont, acknowledged leader of Parisian society.

Rarely in public may you see her delicate face with its high-bred, fragile modeling, or the flash of her dark eye from a complexion which is like "the waxen whiteness of some tropic flower." For she moves in that small exclusive group which rides, hunts and golfs in the great private parcs of the historic old French chateaux, or which dines and dances in the gracious houses on the Champs Elysées or in the Parc Monceau of Paris.

It is true that the graceful figure of this lovely élegante may sometimes be seen strolling on the beach at Deauville or Biarritz in the season, or stretched in the sun on the topaz sands of the Lido. And at least once a year this French-Italian duchesse dances in public, attending in costume more dazzling than the rest the great June Bal du Grand Prix de l'Opera in Paris.

Last year she visited America where she was queen of the season at Palm Beach, bringing with her a wardrobe so exquisite in taste and so faultless in chic that all the fashion journals promptly featured her.

THE Duchesse de Gramont is one of those rare women who sense the importance of the thousand details that go to make up the perfect whole. Nothing too slight to be considered if it contributes to charm, to cachet, to distinction. The Creams she uses to tend her waxen-white skin—does she choose them, too, with the same meticulous care? How has she kept the complexion of a girl not twenty—though she is the mother of two sturdy fast-growing boys? In her own words, let her tell you!

"A lovely skin and good colour are Nature's gift to youth but their possession must not be taken for granted. Rather they are to be protected and preserved by daily care. Pond's Two Creams afford an exquisite means of giving precisely the care a woman's skin requires today."

Thus another of the beautiful women of the social world offers a tribute of praise to the Two famous Creams made by Pond's! Delicate, fragrant, compounded with scientific skill from precious ingredients, these Creams should be used to cleanse, finish and protect your delicate skin each day as follows:

Pond's Cold Cream affords a thorough cleansing. It should be used every night before retiring and during the day whenever the skin feels dusty and tired, especially after an outing. If the skin is dry, more Cream, added after the nightly cleansing, will restore suppleness while you sleep.

Pond's Vanishing Cream affords an exquisitely soft finish, enchantingly natural and smooth; holds your powder surprisingly long and oh! so evenly; and keeps winds, dust and city soot from chapping and clogging your pores. It should be applied lightly after every cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream, except the bedtime one.

The UNDERGROUND RAILROAD

by Oney Fred Sweet

ILLUSTRATED BY L.R. GUSTAVSON

The Bootleggers of Long Ago—They Convoyed "Niggers," Not Booze, in Rebellion Against Laws That Were Tyranny

THE popular uprising against the tyranny of the Volstead act has led THE TRIBUNE to look back to an uprising against an act of American tyranny long ago.

Mysterious messages, strange signal systems, secret hiding places, the whispered mention of "Canada," and weird expeditions under the darkness of night for the purpose of transporting certain "goods" contrary to the law of the land all played a part in the earlier history of the country. The old time shipments—men on their way into Canada rather than out of it—that "somehow got through" in spite of great vigilance consisted of human slaves instead of gin. And the secret trails—running from the borders of the southern states through the non-slave holding north and into free Canada, over which runaway Negroes were helped along in violation of the fugitive slave laws—constituted what was called the "Underground Railroad."

"That nigger of mine must have gone off on an underground road," remarked a Kentucky master, unable to locate his property after giving chase across the Ohio river. And this incident, repeated, is said to have given the line its name later—the Underground Railroad.

Instances are recorded of the shipment of Negroes in boxes as freight by railroad and boat. Slaves were concealed in wagon loads of vegetables. They were hidden under grain and beneath feathers. On one occasion, for the purpose of secreting a large party of runaways toward the safety zone, a number of closed carriages were procured and formed in a funeral-like procession. Every sort of disguise was brought into use.

As for the places where the "goods" sought by the law were concealed, awaiting a proper moment for shipment, we are told of a secret cellar in the barn of the Rev. John Rankin at Ripley, O.; of a hazel thicket in the pasture lot of Deacon Jirch Platt at Mendon, Ill.; of an out of the way bedroom in the home of Joshua R. Giddings at Jefferson, O. We are told that the Rev. J. Porter, pastor of the Congregational church at Green Bay, Wis., made use of the church belfry for hiding runaways. Ely F. Brown of Amesville, O., so built an addition to his house that one room was equipped with secret panels. At Galesburg, Ill., the gallery of the Old First church was utilized as a place of concealment for refugees.

Concerning those brave souls who, with no reward but seeming disgrace, carried on this work of the mysterious Underground Railroad, one cannot but be impressed by their unselfish devotion to principle. They seem for the most part to have been clergymen, college professors, and persons—many of them women—not only of education and refinement, but possessed of rare courage and a remarkable indifference for the opinion of the mass mind of the moment.

It was not only the severe penalties of the law that for a long period these scattered few dared face, but the disdain of their neighbors, as well. They were greatly in the minority in many communities, and the public at large was either unwilling or unable to distinguish between a desire for abolition and the advocacy of fusion of the white and black races. Consequently violators of the fugitive slave laws—these Underground Railroad "agents" and "conductors"—heard themselves called "niggerites" and "nigger thieves" and were obliged to withstand endless taunts and insults.

But the abolitionists considered that a government stooping to the task of slave catching violated all ideas of decency, national dignity, and consistency. They pointed to the Declaration of Independence, and to the slave owner's "Servants, obey your masters" they quoted: "Do not deliver unto his master the servant that hath escaped."

It seems plain that slavery would never have vanished as an institution if the passing of laws for its protection had been all that was necessary to save it. By the enactment of the first fugitive slave law in 1793 the aiding of fugitive slaves became a penal offense. The measure laid a fine of $500 upon any one harboring escaped slaves or preventing their arrest. And the law was violated from the beginning by persons who thought it unjust.

And so in 1850 the drastic law was passed—the one that we are apt to think of entirely in this later day in connection with causes of the civil war. Under this act any person hindering the arrest of a fugitive or attempting the rescue of a fugitive was liable to a fine of $1,000 or six months' imprisonment and was also liable to civil damages.

The arrest and removal of a fugitive slave was to be granted to the claimant by the United States commissioner, the courts, or the judge of the proper circuit, district, or county. The refusal of the United States marshal or his deputies to execute a commissioner's certificate involved a fine of one thousand dollars, and failure to prevent the escape of the Negro after the arrest made the marshal liable, on his official bond, for value of the slave.

Commissioners were given the authority to summon posses and "all good citizens" were "commanded to aid and assist in the prompt and efficient execution" of the law. In all cases where the proceedings took place before a commissioner he was "entitled to a fee of ten dollars in full for his services," providing that a warrant for the fugitive's arrest was issued; if, however, the fugitive was discharged the commissioner was entitled to five dollars only.

The law was severe enough, but its effect was quite contrary to what its framers had intended. The injustice of the law aroused active opposition from many who hitherto had been apathetic concerning the whole agitation against slavery.

Two years later came Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." We are told that the thrilling escape of Eliza across the ice of the Ohio river actually took place fifty miles above Cincinnati, a station of the Underground Railroad with which Mrs. Stowe was personally familiar.

Mrs. Stowe was disheartened when she finished the book. "It seemed," she said at the time, "that there was no hope, that nobody would read, nobody would hear." But the success of the novel was immediate. It was claimed at the time of publication that the book would not affect a single vote, but the fact was lost sight of that the younger generation was absorbing the volume at many a mother's knee, and ten years later these same youths were not only ready to vote but to fight, and the political effect of the novel is a matter of history.

Maddened, the slave owner fired.

MRS. STOWE, having listened to the experiences of midnight visitors, was a typical Underground Railroad worker. For the most part, however, the men and women who were what was termed "stockholders" in the Underground Railroad were quiet persons, little known outside of the communities in which they lived. They "did their bit" with serenity, and many of them went to their graves, contented of conscience even though they saw little hope that even the passing of time would justify their actions in the opinion of men.

Prof. Wilbur H. Siebert, in one of the few books that deals with this dramatic phase of American history—a difficult task because of the secrecy in which the activities of the Underground Railroad were shrouded—says that in general it is safe to say that the majority of helpers in the north were of Anglo-American stock, descendants of the Puritans and Quaker settlers, or of southerners who had moved to the northern states to be rid of slavery.

Philadelphia, due to the Quakers, was an important Underground Railroad station, as was Boston. Also we find that among the college settlements where stations were established were Oberlin, O.; Galesburg, Ill., and Grinnell, Ia.

Here is a sample of the messages that were sent between "agents" at the time:

"By tomorrow evening's mail you will receive two volumes of the 'Irrepressible Conflict' bound in black. After perusal, please forward, and oblige."

Another: "Uncle Tom says if the roads are not too bad you can look for those fleeces of wool by tomorrow. Send them on to test the market and price; no back charges."

Slave hunters, with the law behind them, could make demands, but they were baffled by an opposition upon which it was so difficult to place a finger.

There were certain stout hearted women who actually felt hurt if their humble homes were not used by refugees as hiding places. Such were Esther Moore of Philadelphia and Abigail Goodwin of Salem, N. J. Esther, though poor in worldly goods, placed a dollar in the hands of every passenger that used her home as a station. Abigail denied herself necessary apparel to see that the runaways who passed through her hands were properly clothed. Abigail died at the age of 73 in the neighborhood of her birthplace, having lived a life that was outwardly "wholly uneventful." It was the passing of the drastic fugitive slave law of 1850 that decided Esther Moore upon the course to give of her little fortune, dollar by dollar, to defeat a measure which daily vexed her righteous soul.

Among the notable persons who helped along the Underground Railroad was Joshuh R. Giddings, for twenty years an ardent advocate of the abolition of slavery, who made a "station" of his home in Ohio. On the floor of congress he expressed his opinion of the fugitive slave law with "When you ask us to pay the expenses of arresting your slaves you overstep the bounds of the constitution, and there we meet you, and there we stand and there we shall remain."

THE grave of the "Man with the Branded Hand" at Muskegon, Mich., was recently visited by James O'Donnell Bennett on one of his Chicagoland pilgrimages. A granite obelisk marks the grave today and carved in the stone is a man's right hand, deeply branded with the letters SS. The two letters, which a United States District court court in 1844 ordered burned into one Jonathan Walker's hand with a redhot iron, stood for "slave stealer."

Walker was a Cape Cod mariner, and in 1844 was captain of a vessel engaged in coastwise trade. He believed slavery to be wrong and attempted to convey seven Negroes from the state of Florida to the freedom of the Bahamas. He was overhauled, brought to Pensacola, tried as a thief in the United States federal court, convicted, and sentenced to be placed in the pillory and branded with the letters in the ball of the right hand, to be kept in solitary confinement for a year, and to pay a fine of $600 and the costs of prosecution.

Every clause of the sentence was executed, but Capt. Walker came through alive, and upon his return to the north was hailed as a hero and martyr by anti-slavery leaders. Walker went to Muskegon county in 1863, bought a few acres of land, and took up fruit farming. Neighbors, who had a profound respect for the man, said that the branded letters were visible even after thirty years.

Gerrit Smith, philanthropist, kept open house for fugitives in his mansion at Peterboro, N. Y. Josiah B. Grinnell, who represented his Iowa district in congress, called a room in his home at Grinnell "the liberty room." Thurlow Weed, the journalist, was never too busy to lend relief to Underground Railroad passengers.

Among the clergymen who made it a part of

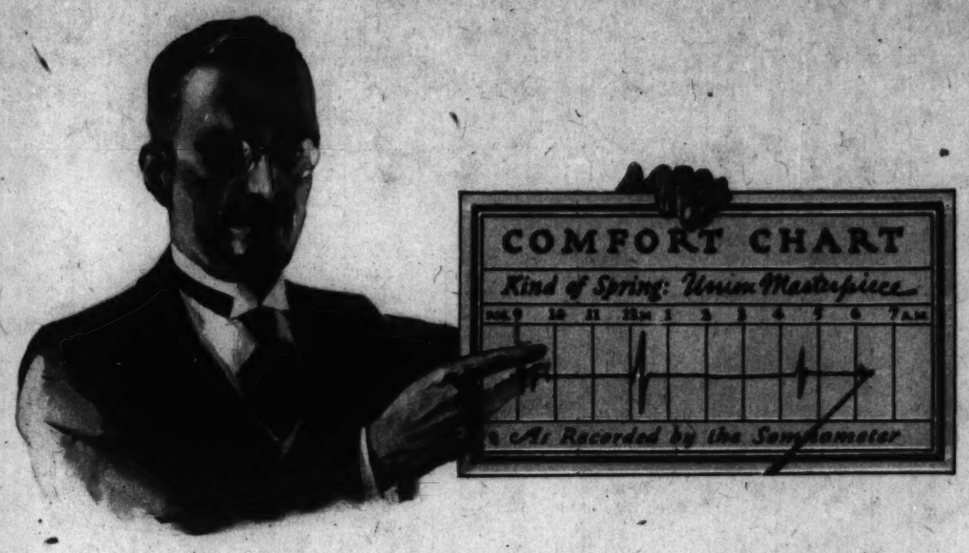
"THE BAMBOO RAFT"
The story of a life-and-death struggle in the Luzon jungle—By Frederick O'Brien.

There is a way to prove that you will sleep better on a

MASTERPIECE BED SPRING



ACTUAL Comfort Charts made on the Somnometer prove that the Masterpiece Bed Spring furnishes greater comfort to the average user. These scientific tests have been made with light-weight people, heavy weights, old and young. Invariably their comfort charts show less restlessness—less stirring and tossing about—when they sleep on the Masterpiece Spring. And no one gets the right kind of sleep unless they are comfortable. A bed spring that causes you to toss about all night is sure to rob you of the full benefits of deep, sound sleep.

If a Somnometer could be attached to your bed spring and a record of your tossing made hour by hour throughout the night you would doubtless be amazed at the unconscious discomfort you are permitting yourself to endure, night after night. We regret that we cannot furnish a Somnometer with every Masterpiece Bed Spring.

But we are glad to offer you a practical way to test and prove the superior comfort of the Masterpiece—without risking a cent. This is our unusual offer: Go to any Union Sleep Unit Dealer—phone or write us for the name of one near you. Buy a Union Masterpiece Spring on these conditions. Have it delivered to your home. Sleep on it for two weeks, a month—or as long as you think necessary to make a fair, convincing test. If you are unable to notice that it lets you sleep better and feel better, then we want you to return it to the place you bought it and get your money back without question.

We stand behind our dealers on this remarkable offer and urge them to sell the Masterpiece on this "money-back" understanding. We have demonstrated the real meaning of comfort to hundreds of people and now we invite you to prove that YOU also will sleep better on the Masterpiece Bed Spring. Surely better sleep is worthy of such a test.

Other UNION SLEEP UNITS

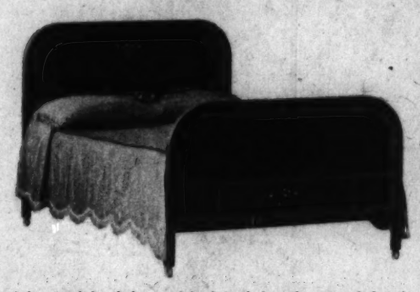
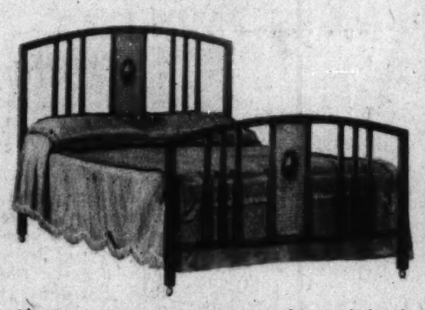
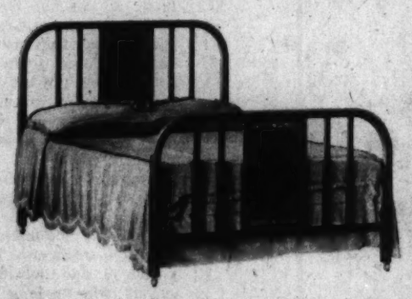
Here are two Union Sleep Units—a pair of Windsor twin beds that are unusually graceful and appropriate for the finest of bed rooms. This same design, or other equally attractive designs, may be obtained in a wide selection of colored enamel or wood finishes, plain or hand-decorated.



A beautiful solid panel bed with hand-painted floral decorations in soft tones to harmonize with the walnut background. A light walnut inlay on post and panel is outlined with gold. Supplied in all wood or enamel finishes.



Above is a most attractive square-post, bow-top bed with cane panels decorated with artistic medallions. Your dealer can supply this design in all wood and enamel finishes and in twin sizes as well as the full size as shown.



Further evidence of the artistry it is possible to employ in the manufacture and finish of beds is shown by this number. Light walnut inlays on posts and panels and dainty floral designs distinguish this pattern from the ordinary.

Other UNION SLEEP UNITS

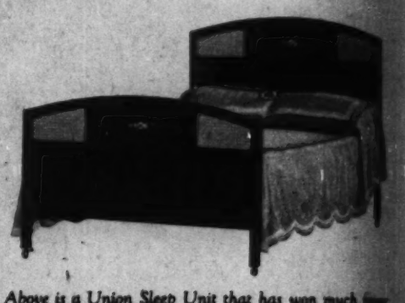
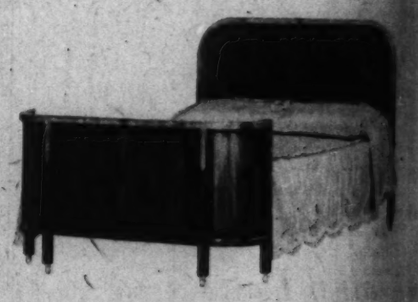
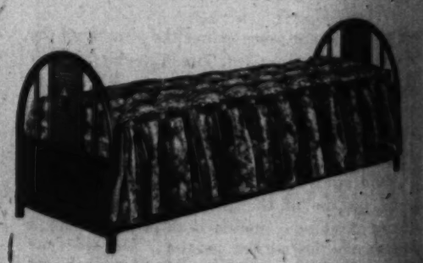
Another set of twin beds taken from the extensive range of patterns found in the line of Union Sleep Units is shown here. Superiority of design, finish and workmanship distinguish these as well as all other Union beds.



Above is a Union Sleep Unit that has won much favor among those who appreciate artistry in their home furnishings. This number is supplied in all the popular wood and enamel finishes, with or without decorations.



To those who prefer the bow-foot style this bed will especially appeal. This design may be had in full or twin sizes and in a great many combinations of finishes and decorations to harmonize with any bed room scheme.



The same painstaking thought is given to the design and finish of Union Day Beds as to all other Union Sleep Units. In fact we believe that good taste in a day bed is oft-times doubly essential because of the surroundings with which day beds may be expected to harmonize.

THE OTHER DAY - - An Encounter with a Painless Shaver - - By Donald Ogden Stewart

THE train from Los Angeles to New York stops off at the Grand Canyon for those who want to see the Grand Canyon. If you don't want to see it you can either go on to New York or you can get off at the Grand Canyon and not look.

The train arrives at what I am going to call the "Canyon" from now on until practically the end of this article, very early in the morning.

In the washroom I met a man. He was brushing his teeth. After a while he stopped and looked up. "Have you seen the Canyon?" he asked.

"Not yet," I replied.

"Well," he continued, "have you seen the cap to my tooth paste?"

I laughed.

"What's it look like?" I asked.

He thought a minute.

"It's sort of round," he replied, "and on the inside there are grooves cut so as to make it fit onto the top of the tube."

"Is this it?" I asked.

"Probably not," he replied, "but anyway, I'll look."

He looked.

"No," he replied, "that isn't it. That is something which came out of my safety razor. I was looking for that, too."

He picked up the razor and fitted the new piece into the handle. Then he walked over to his bag and began searching for something. I waited. After a while he looked up.

"Do you think I need a shave?" he asked.

I examined his face.

"I don't know," I replied. "Are you going anywhere?"

"Just to the Canyon," he replied.

"Then I think that you had better shave," I replied.

He began once more to rummage in his bag. Then he looked hopefully out the window.

"It's a pretty dark day," he said.

"It's very early," I replied.

"And my beard is quite light," he continued.

"Suit yourself," I replied.

He considered a minute and then returned to his bag.

"If I could only remember," he murmured, "where I put that soap."

"I can lend you some of mine," I offered.

"No," he replied, "I'd rather not. In the first place," he went on, "there is the danger of disease."

"Yes," I admitted, "although in the present case that seems hardly likely."

He looked at me closely.

"You never can tell," he said, "and besides, how do I know who you are?"

I searched through my pockets and handed him a card. He gave me another short quick look and then examined the card.

"H'mm," he said, after a minute, "so you are Frank Pugh."

"I am not," I replied.

"I know it," he said. "I know Frank Pugh very well. And that was why I was so surprised to have you hand me his card."

"Let me see," I asked.

He returned the card.

"This is a mistake," I said. "This is a card that was given me by a stranger in Los Angeles."

"Frank Pugh isn't a stranger," said the man. "He's one of my best friends."

"He was a stranger to me," I replied. "I remember now. I met him in an elevator and asked him for a match. He said he didn't have a match, but would I take one of his cards?"

"That's just like Frank," said the other. "He would give you his shirt if he had it."

"All I wanted was a match," I said. "I've got plenty of shirts."

"What size?" asked the stranger.

"Fifteen," I replied.

"I wear a size fourteen," said the other, and then he suddenly began tearing through his bag.

"You're welcome to one of my shirts," I offered.

"O," he said, "isn't that terrible? I must have forgot to pack any shirts."

"What did you pack?" I asked.

He looked.

"It mostly seems to be socks," he replied, "and some sort of a masquerade costume. I'm a notoriously bad packer," he added, with a brave attempt at a smile.

"You're welcome to one of my shirts," I offered.

He considered that a moment.

"What kind?" he asked.

"Well, I have several kinds," I replied. "White—colored."

He shuddered.

"No colored shirts," he said, "please!"

"All right," I said, "white."

"Silk?" he asked.

I hesitated.

"Why, yes," I said. "I have one or two silk shirts."

"Wait a minute," he said, digging down into his bag. "Ah—thank the Lord!"

He pulled out a shirt.

"Whew," he said, wiping his forehead. "That was a narrow escape."

"For whom?" I asked, somewhat coldly.

"For me," he replied. "I hate to wear other people's clothes."

"And use their shaving soap," I added.

"Yes," he said, "and besides, I've got a new kind of soap. You don't need any brush. It's wonderful, they say."

HE closed his eyes and reached once more into the depths of that cavernous bag.

"Here's something," he said.

He pulled out a shaving brush.

"How silly," he said. "The man told me I didn't need this."

He looked around the washroom for some place to throw the brush, and then tried to open the window. It wouldn't open.

"Do you want it?" he asked.

"No, thank you," I replied with a certain amount of dignity, "I don't like to use other people's shaving brushes."

"Maybe the porter would like it."

"Perhaps the porter is a little sensitive, too."

He returned once more to his attempts to open the window.

"Can I help you?" I offered.

"No, thank you."

After awhile he stopped and walked over to the mirror. He passed three fingers over the left side of his face, then three fingers over the right side. Then he looked at me.

"Suit yourself," I said. "Personally, I wouldn't think of going out looking like that."

He stood for a moment gazing out of the window.

"How do I know," he said at last, "that I am going to enjoy the Canyon?"

"It's a wonderful sight," I said.

"Have you ever seen it?" he asked.

"No," I replied.

"Well, then," he said, "how do you know it's a wonderful sight?"

"Because," I replied, "I've read about it. And I've met people who have seen it. And they all say it is a wonderful sight."

"What people?" he asked.

"O — friends of mine," I replied.

"That doesn't mean anything," he said. "Friendship is of very small importance when it comes to canyons. Canyons are bigger than friendships. If I was going to ask about a canyon, I wouldn't go to a friend."

"No?" I said.

"Certainly not," he replied. "I'd go to a man who knew about canyons. I'd go to a man who had spent his life looking at canyons. And do you know what I'd say?"

"No," I answered, "What would you say?"

"Well," he replied, "I'd come right out with it. I'd say something like this——"

He paced rapidly back and forth two or three times.

"Yes?" I suggested.

"I'd say," he continued, "I'd say, 'Mr. Abbot——'"

"Mr. who?" I asked.

"Mr. Abbot," he replied. "That's just a name I made up."

"O," I said, "what was the first name?"

He considered a moment.

"Edward," he replied at last, "Mr. Edward Abbot."

"All right," I agreed

His eye suddenly lighted on an object in the rack over the washbowl.

"Why, there's my soap," he cried, delightedly. "I must have unpacked it right at the first."

He picked it up and began eagerly to read the directions.

"See," he said, pointing. "It says that you don't need any brush. Where's the brush?"

"There," I said.

He picked the brush up and put it hurriedly back in the bag. Then he picked up the tube of shaving cream and began to unscrew the top. His hand was trembling with excitement.

"Will you excuse me a minute?" he said.

"Certainly," I replied.

Finally the cap came off and it immediately slipped from his fingers and rolled into the washbasin and down the waste pipe.

"O, dear," he said, and he stood for a moment looking first at the tube and then at the basin. Then he recovered, and after reading the directions once more he excitedly squeezed some of the cream out on his palm.

"Do you think that's too much?" he asked.

"No," I replied.

"I think it's too much," he said.

"All right," I agreed.

He hesitated a moment and then began slowly and cautiously to rub the paste into his chin. Then he stepped back and looked at the result. He smiled.

"This is wonderful," he said. "And to think that lots of people don't even know about it."

"How about a little more?" I suggested.

HE FOLLOWED my suggestion. Soon his face was covered with the cream.

"Now," he said, consulting the directions, "you rub it in."

"No," I replied, "YOU rub it in."

He rubbed it in.

"What do you think?" he asked.

"Fine," I replied. "Now what?"

He examined the tube.

"O, look," he said. "The directions are in Spanish, too."

"I can't read Spanish," I said.

"I took Spanish at Harvard," he said. "It's fairly easy if you know Latin."

He read the Spanish directions. Then he nodded his head.

"It's good Spanish," he said.

"That's fine," I exclaimed. "Now what?"

"Now," he said, "for a delicious, comfortable and rapid shave."

He picked up his razor and began. First he went down the left side of his face, then the right. Then he repeated the process.

"How's it feel?" I asked.

"It feels great," he replied, "only——"

He had picked up the razor and was going once more over his chin.

"It certainly doesn't pull," he murmured.

He put down his razor and looked at the directions on the tube Then he began again to shave his chin. Suddenly he stopped.

"All through?" I asked.

He did not reply. He was gazing at his razor.

"That was certainly a quick one," I said.

Without replying he walked over to his bag. I waited while he searched.

"What is it?" I finally asked. "Did you have a bad blade?"

"No," he replied, and then, after a minute, he added, "I didn't have any blade."

The search continued. At last he walked back to the basin and began washing the shaving cream off his face.

"If you would like," I said, "I can lend you a blade."

"No, thank you," he replied.

After another minute I left him. He was sitting at the window, gazing out at the station. It was already quite light outside.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD ------ By Oney Fred Sweet

their religious duty to help runaways from the south were Theodore Parker, John Rankin, and Samuel J. May. It is said that the lights from the windows of the Rankin parsonage, just across the Ohio, were hailed by the fugitives as beacons to guide them on mysterious ways to freedom.

Levi Coffin of Ohio and Thomas Garrett of Delaware, both business men, helped thousands defeat the fugitive slave law. Coffin was sometimes called the "president" of the Underground Railroad.

Garrett fought the fugitive slave laws for forty years and saw his fortune swallowed up in fines. At the end he said: "The war came too soon for my business. I wanted to help off 3,000 slaves. I had only got up to 2,700."

The helpers on the Underground Railroad, who came to be known as "agents," "station keepers," and "conductors," have been catalogued by Prof. Siebert in his book to the number of 3,211.

"There was for them," he says, "no outward honor, no material recompense, but instead such contumely and seeming disgrace as can now be scarcely comprehended."

SO much for the causes and the type of persons responsible for the Underground Railroad. Let us now consider some of the dramatic episodes in connection with the workings of that institution which was of such a secret nature during the time of its existence and concerning which so comparatively little was ever jotted down.

In Philadelphia a Negro by the name of William Still kept a record of the slaves who sought freedom through his Underground Railroad agency. He tells of the arrival by steamboat of one William Peel, the slave "who was shipped in a box." William, as Still explains, was "25 years of age, unmistakably colored, good looking, rather under the medium size, and of pleasing manners."

The master had been selling off his slaves, and, seeing that he was liable to be in the market any day, William decided that he preferred the box to the auction block. The Negro had a relative do the packing and forwarding, and, while in his cramped position he often felt like crying out while aboard the steamer, he was still alive upon his arrival at the wharf in Philadelphia on a Sabbath morning in 1859.

An underground agent, expecting the arrival of the "goods" and equipped with a bill of lading, was on hand at the wharf, but the day was Sunday, and freight, unfortunately for the man in the box, was not delivered on that day.

However, the agent went to an officer of the boat.

"No," said the officer, "we don't deliver freight on Sunday."

Then, noticing the anxiety of the inquirer, he asked him if he would know the box if he saw it.

Not wishing to manifest too much interest, lest he might excite suspicion, the agent said slowly, "I think I might."

Deliberately, looking around among the "freight," the agent found what he was looking for.

"Take it along," the officer agreed, glancing at the bill of lading.

But the box was too large for the carriage the agent had secured and the driver refused to take it. An hour and a half more was spent in looking for a van. Finally one was found and the agent grabbed hold of the box to lift it aboard when, to his alarm, the fellow within gave a sudden cough.

"Hush, my babe, lie still and slumber," sang the agent, to drown any further strange noises, and the van driver, totally ignorant of the contents, drove the box to its destination as directed.

And so, after many hours, William was loosed from the box, the straw about him removed, and he was sent by less painful methods on his way to Canada to "shake hands with the lion's paw."

Henry Brown was another who escaped from slavery in a box. Henry arrived in Philadelphia from Richmond, Va., by way of the Adams Express company.

Rising in the box, Brown reached out his hand.

The size of the box and how it was to be made to fit him were of Henry's own ordering. He took with him a bladder of water and a few small biscuits, also a gimlet in the event that he should find himself in a death struggle for air. The box was nailed and hooped by a friend and addressed to James A. Smith, shoe dealer, in Philadelphia. Also Henry had his friend letter the directions, "This side up with care."

The box was carried to the express office on a dray and thence by overland express. It was twenty-six hours en route and baggagemen, as Henry could testify, did not always pay attention to the "This side up" instructions. For a time Henry stood on his head as he traveled. And in the meantime, a Mr. McKim, who was on the lookout for the illegal shipment, was in a disturbed frame of mind.

McKim, who, in behalf of what was known as a vigilance committee, was engineering the Philadelphia end of the transaction, received a telegram which gave the hour that his "case of goods" should arrive. He decided, however, that instead of going to the depot, which might excite suspicion, he would have the box brought to his office.

It was delivered without any apparent trouble and several friends of McKim, who were in sympathy with his ideas on abolition, gathered to see the box opened. The office door was locked. All was quiet. McKim rapped on the lid of the box and called out, "All right." Instantly came the answer from within, "All right, sir."

Hatchet and saw were then quickly brought into use and presently the marvelous resurrection of Henry Brown took place. Rising in the box, Brown reached out his hand with the greeting, "How do you do, gentlemen!"

The success in this instance was so marked that Brown's friend in the south was encouraged to render similar service to two other slaves. Both boxes, however, having been duly expressed and having gone some distance on the road, were, through the agency of the telegraph, betrayed, and the fugitives taken back to their masters. The man who had made the shipments was arrested and sent to prison.

THERE is also one other instance in which a slave made escape by being shipped in a box that should perhaps be recalled. On this occasion the human freight was a girl. In the advertisement offering a reward for the capture and return of the woman it was stated that "Leer Green is about eighteen years of age, of black complexion, round featured, and good looking."

According to Leer Green's story, she was the property of a Baltimore butter dealer. A proposal of marriage had been made to her by a Negro of her acquaintance, and she decided that she ought to be free in order to fill the station of a wife and mother. An old chest of substantial make was secured and in this the girl placed a quilt, a pillow, and a few articles of raiment, together with a small quantity of food and a bottle of water.

The mother of the Negro whom Leer intended to marry was a free woman and she agreed to go as a passenger on the same boat by which Leer planned shipment. The rules of the steamship company assigned colored passengers to the deck, and in this instance it was exactly where the guardian desired to be—as near the chest as possible.

After eighteen hours the steamer arrived in Philadelphia and in due time the living freight was delivered to a house on Barley street. The girl never went to Canada, but risked residence in Elmira, N. Y. Her freedom, bought at the cost of such bravery, lasted but three years, when death ended her career.

The attitude of the United States toward Canada regarding fugitive slaves, and the stand taken by the British government were given expression in 1828 at the time of diplomatic negotiations relating to the subject. Mr. Clay, then secretary of state, declared the escape of slaves to British territory to be a "growing evil," and he felt that it was calculated to disturb the peaceful relations existing between the United States and the adjacent British provinces.

England, however, steadfastly refused to accept Mr. Clay's proposed stipulations for extradition, on the ground that the British government could not, "with respect to the British possessions where slavery is not admitted, depart from the principle recognised by the British courts that every man is free who reaches British ground."

It will be noted from what has gone before that the Underground Railroad had its routes by sea as well as by land. And, while one might suppose that shipment in a box would produce the limit of suffering, we are told that the pain endured by those who chose this method of escape in preference to bondage was as nothing compared to what a certain trio of slaves went through as the result of being stowed away not far from the boiler in a steamer plying the Atlantic coast.

The fugitives in this instance were James Mercer, William Gillian, and John Clayton. The colored steward of a boat listened to their appeal, but he could point to no other place of concealment than a cramped space not far from the boat's boiler. The hiding place demanded that the runaways lie flat down and be shut off from light and remain almost without air. The journey was accompanied with intense suffering, but ended in victory, and William Gillian, once in Canada, seems to have been able to look back on the adventure with a sense of humor.

The three Negroes who thus made their escape belonged to a widow, who stated that each of them would have sold for $1,200. Newspaper comment in the widow's home city referred to the escape editorially as follows: "The question is now to find how they got off. They must undoubtedly have had white men in the secret. Have we then a nest of abolition scoundrels among us? There ought to be a law to put a police officer on every vessel as soon as it lands at the wharf. There is one, we believe, for inspecting vessels before they leave. If there is not, there ought to be one. These Negroes belong to a widow lady and constitute all the property she has on earth."

William Gillian, in answer to this, wrote back from Canada: "I have no compassion on the penniless widow lady, I have served her 25 yers 2 months." And he signed himself "The Widow's Mite."

THE use of disguises on the part of slaves in their efforts to evade the fugitive slave law was common. Many instances are recorded of slaves so nearly white that on the suggestion of "agents" they simply put up a bold front and walked off to liberty. Belonging to this class was the case of William and Ellen Craft, slaves in Georgia. Ellen, it is said, was fair enough to pass for white, and she conceived the idea that she act the part of the master and her husband play the rôle of servant for the purpose of taking flight to free territory. The woman secured a fashionable suit of male attire and she had her hair cut in the style worn at the time by young planters. There was a drawback in the fact that she was beardless. So, after some reflection, she conceived the idea of having her face muffled as though suffering from toothache.

As it was necessary for the couple to register in stopping at hotels en route, Ellen further decided that she would assume the attitude of a gentleman very much indisposed. Accordingly, she placed her right arm in a sling, which gave her sufficient excuse for not registering. She also assumed lameness and wore a pair of large green spectacles. In fact, she became most dependent upon her "faithful servant." The pair progressed safely enough until they reached Baltimore, when the servant asked the agent for tickets for his master and himself. Under the law the master could have a ticket, but it was necessary that bonds be entered before the Negro could procure one.

"The servant" replied that he knew nothing about the law, but that his master was in delicate state of health and could not be detained. The ticket master in this instance waived the rule and the tickets were granted. Reaching Philadelphia, rheumatism and toothache and sore arm soon departed. The beardless face was unmuffled, the deaf spoke and the blind saw.

Mourning veils were resorted to by a couple of Negro women, Charlotte Giles and Harriet Elgin, who arrived in Philadelphia on the last day of May, 1856. In fact, this was a day of unusual Underground Railroad activities in Philadelphia. Travelers, some of them with children, had walked for days and nights in succession over strange roads, through byways and valleys, over mountains and marshes, but Charlotte and Harriet had come by train.

These two women had somehow contrived to procure suits of mourning with heavy black veils, and, thus dressed, apparently absorbed with grief, had taken a direct course for Philadelphia.

While seated in the car, before leaving Philadelphia, who should enter but the master of one of the woman. In an excited manner he approached the two, who were apparently weeping.

"What is your name?" exclaimed the excited gentleman, lifting Charlotte's veil.

"Mary, sir," sobbed Charlotte.

Fortunately for Charlotte, it was her companion with whom the man was acquainted.

Without lifting the other veil, the gentleman asked the other mourner her name, to which Harriet replied faintly, "Lizzie, sir."

And the excited gentleman rushed on.

A slave by the name of David, the property of a Virginian, conceived the plan of traveling to freedom "as a coachman," the "white lady" and her 10 year old child in the back seat of the carriage to be none other than fellow slaves who possessed but very little colored blood. David found that his master happened to have a vehicle that would answer for the occasion and he decided to borrow the conveyance.

The party drove to Chambersburg, Pa., without being suspected, the "white lady" bearing herself with an independent air. The keeper at the hotel at which they stopped, however, said that it looked to him like "an Underground Railroad move," but he assured the party that he would not betray them. But his suspicion alarmed the fugitives, and, leaving the horse and carriage behind, they sought other modes of travel.

. . . . . .

Swamps and caves of the south and its borders afforded hiding places for many a runaway slave. These hiding places were made unattractive by the presence of wildcats and rattlesnakes, but instances are known where fugitives remained hidden in them for months at a stretch.

Nor did a certain form of propaganda put out by the slave owners deter the slaves from risking death at the other end of the Underground Railroad. The slave's reaction to this propaganda was openly to agree with everything that was told him, but somehow if the master was heard to curse Boston the slave became satisfied that Boston was just the place he would like to go to. Or if the master said that the blacks in Canada were freezing and starving to death by hundreds the slave's secret hope of reaching Canada was strengthened tenfold.

In a letter from J. Bolds of Lawrence, Kas., to one of his friends we find a paragraph which further bears out the fact that propaganda on the part of slave owners reacted precisely in a contrary manner to what was hoped. Back in 1859 Mr. Bolds wrote: "Lawrence has been known and cursed by all slave holders for being an abolition town. I have learned from Negroes that they would never have known anything about a land of freedom only from their master's continual abuse of the Lawrence abolitionists."

A copy of Mrs. Stowe's book was found.

The extent to which "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was looked upon as dangerous literature is shown by the case of Sam Green, a free Negro, who was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for having a copy of that book in his possession.

Sam Green's son, belonging to a doctor in Maryland, learned about the Underground Railroad through one of its shrewd and fearless agents, Harriet Tubman. He made his escape to Canada successfully, but left behind him a father, mother, and one sister. Green's escape placed the father, Sam Green, under suspicion. One night a search was made of Sam Green's home, where a copy of Mrs. Stowe's book was found. Commenting on this discovery, the Cambridge (Md.) Democrat said: "It is to be hoped the court will find the evidence in this case sufficient to bring it within the scope of the law under which the prisoner is indicted and that the prisoner may meet with due reward, be that what it may."

Green got his reward—a sentence to the penitentiary for a term of ten years.

The case of Seth Concklin, an Underground Railroad agent, who "was found drowned, with his hands and feet in chains and his skull fractured," furnished at least one of the mysterious "killings" connected with the dramatic days of fugitive slave law violations.

About 1850 Concklin, a resident of Philadelphia, decided to go to Alabama and bring about the escape from bondage of the Peter Still family. Peter's brother William had previously found his way to freedom, and it was William's accounts of slavery that had aroused Concklin's zeal.

Concklin's idea was to assume the character of a slave owner and bring the Still family away as servants. He found that steamboats on the Tennessee river were too irregular to be depended upon, and, returning to Indiana, he arranged for the escape of the slave family across that state into Canada. This second attempt had a tragic ending. Having made a safe journey for seven days and nights in a rowboat, the party was captured in southwestern Indiana.

A newspaper account dealt with this capture as follows:

RUNAWAY NEGROES CAUGHT.—At Vincennes, Ind., on Saturday last, a white man and four Negroes were arrested. The Negroes belong to B. McKiernon of South Florence, Ala., and the man who was running them off calls himself John H. Miller. The prisoners were taken in charge by the marshal of Evansville.

William Still, waiting in Philadelphia, was made to mourn by these tidings, and later a report found its way into the newspapers to the effect that "Miller," the white man, was found drowned, with his hands and feet in chains and his skull fractured. The man proved, as his friends feared, to be Seth Concklin. And in irons, upon the river bank, this particular violator of the fugitive slave law was said to have been buried.

McKiernon, claimant of the fugitives, gave his version of the affair as follows:

Some time last March a white man by the name of Miller appeared in the nabourhood and abducted the above Negroes, was caught at vincanes, Indi. with said Negroes and was thare convicted of stealing and remanded back to Ala. to Abide the penalty of the law and on his return met his Just reward by getting drowned at the mouth of cumberland River on the Ohio in attempting to make his escape.

IT was within a year after the passage of the fugitive slave law of 1850 that the "Christiana case" stirred the country. In this instance the transgressors of the law found themselves indicted for treason against the United States. The scene of the trouble was Lancaster county, Pa.

A party of slave hunters had gone into a neighborhood near the town of Christiana in pursuit of fugitive slaves. About daybreak the party was discovered lying in an ambush near the house of one William Parker, a colored man. Parker fled to the house, pursued by the slave hunters, who entered the lower part of the building but were unable to get upstairs, where the family had retired. A horn was blown from an upper window. Shots were fired and the slave holder demanded his property, which he said was concealed in the house. Soon the colored people of the neighborhood, alarmed by the horn, began to gather, armed with guns, axes, corn cutters, and clubs. The slave holders told the blacks that resistance would be useless, as they had a party of thirty men in the woods nearby.

An hour passed in angry threats. During this time several white men appeared on the scene. They were Friends, highly esteemed in the neighborhood as worthy and peaceable citizens. A deputy marshal ordered these newcomers on the scene to aid him, as a United States officer, to capture the fugitive slaves. The white men not only refused to do so but advised the deputy that he had better be on his way.

"Do you really think so?" the deputy asked.

"Yes," they replied; "the sooner you leave the better, if you would prevent bloodshed."

The deputy retired to the woods for a time, apparently to talk things over, but the slave hunter, Edward Gorsuch, remarked that he would "go to hell or have his slaves."

Presently one of the slaves attempted to leave the house. Gorsuch, with a revolver, ordered him back. The Negro made a reply that so maddened the slave owner that he fired. The shot was returned by the blacks. Gorsuch was killed and the rest of the party fled into the woods, while the fugitives made their escape.

There was plenty of excitement over this affair throughout the country. The President of the United States placed a company of marines at the disposal of the government marshal and the marines proceeded to the place of the riot. Thirty-five Negroes and three Quakers, who were either arrested or gave themselves up, were taken to Philadelphia and indicted by the grand jury for treason.

An indication of public feeling is shown by the following extracts from leading journals of Philadelphia at the time:

There can be no difference of opinion concerning the shocking affair which occurred at Christiana, where the majesty of the government was defied and life taken in one and the same act. Doubly heavy becomes the crime of murder in such a case, and doubly serious the accountability of all who have any connection with the act as advisors, suggestors, countenancers, or accessories in any way whatever.

From another journal:

The unwarranted outrage committed last week at Christiana is a foul stain upon the fair name and fame of our state. We are pleased to see that the officers of the federal and state government are upon the tracks of those who were engaged in the riot, and that several arrests have been made. The men who are now chargeable with treason against the United States government and with the death of Mr. Gorsuch, an estimable citizen of Maryland, are unquestionably white, with hearts black enough to incite them to the commission of any crime equal in atrocity to that committed in Lancaster county. Pennsylvania has now but one course to pursue, and that is to aid, and vigorously aid, the United States in bringing to condign punishment every man engaged in the plot.

The time had come, however, when men of character and reputation, and possessors of ability and eloquence, were quite willing to place themselves on the side of fugitive slave law opponents. In the Christiana case, for example, Thaddeus Stevens was a prominent figure. Among those who presented the arguments against the fugitive slave law before the United States Supreme court in these trying times were Salmon P. Chase and William H. Seward.

AS the most spectacular of all violators of the fugitive slave law, and the boldest of all operators of the Underground Railroad, John Brown has his place in history. Brown, apparently, had not the slightest desire to conceal his dramatic activities. He had a theory that the institution of slavery could be abolished by destroying the money value of slave property in making such property insecure. In 1858, on the night of Dec. 20, Brown, who had just returned to Kansas from the east, was encamped with a party of his men at Bain's Fort. It was while there that a slave by the name of Dandy, chattel of one James Lawrence of Missouri, made his way into the camp with a prayer to "help to get away" his wife, two children, and another Negro man. The appeal did not fall on deaf ears.

Brown made his raid into Missouri, surrounded the house of the slave owner, and carried off the human property. With a mere handful of men he proposed to escort his band of freed men on a journey of 125 miles to Canada in the dead of winter.

Despite the fact that his foray had been given great publicity, and that there was a reward of $3,000 for his arrest, Brown came northward by way of Topeka, thence through Osawatomie, into Nebraska. During this journey he dispersed a party of pursuers, greatly outnumbering him, in flight. Crossing the Missouri on ice, he reached the Underground Railroad station at Tabor, Ia., but here, "contrary to his expectation," met with rebuff. Brown was not only made unwelcome in Tabor, but a public meeting was called at which he was commanded as a disturber of the peace.

There were some friendly families in Tabor, however, and, aided by these, John Brown left with his party for Grinnell, Ia., at which point, late in February, the Hon. J. B. Grinnell, hitherto mentioned as a fearless underground agent, entertained the refugees in his home. At West Liberty, Ia., the party was put aboard a freight car on the Rock Island road and was met in Chicago by Allen Pinkerton, the famous detective, and started for Detroit, a place which was reached on the tenth of March.

Two days later, under Brown's direction, the freed men ferried across the river to Windsor, Canada.

In this venture John Brown was not only successful in making a most satisfactory underground trip, but the effect in the south was very much as he had anticipated. A wild panic went with news of the invasion, which resulted in clearing the counties of Bates and Vernon in Missouri of their slaves. Large numbers were sold, many ran away and escaped, and others were removed farther inland.

John Brown's later attack on Harper's Ferry is said to have caused the value of slave property in Virginia to decline to the extent of $10,000,000.

Matters by this time were fast shaping toward an event in American history that was to make the Underground Railroad unnecessary through the cancellation of the fugitive slave law, a measure whose enactment Sumner had urged congress was palsied by a righteous public sentiment, an act "ill adapted to generate the respect that a good law deserves." Definite decision on a problem that had harassed the states from their beginnings was brought about on the bloody battlefields of the civil war!

Mrs. Galahad

Dilly Grew Bored with the Image of Her Model Husband Forever in Its Niche—Grew Bored Until He Threatened to Fall, and Then She Was the First to Wish Him Back Again.

"Sorry, Vivvy, but you ought to know John by this time."

THE French are a thrifty race. Americans are wasteful. Witness the respective languages. At great length and most inadequately will an American describe a state which is partly mental, partly physical, and partly of the soul's low demesne.

Thus says George Smith-Jones of an acquaintance whom he likes and oddly envies, but not for the other's possessions: "Great chap (or great girl, as the case may be)! Interested in everything that comes along, don't you know. Don't mind the weather. Likes a good show, or a good meal, or a pretty woman, or a good book, or a good argument. Politics or a sunrise, Amundsen's jaunt, or new paving on Main street—nothing really seems to bore him. Healthy fellow, too. Hardly ever needs a doctor. Got what you'd call a receptive nature. Comfortable person to have around. Likes to sleep and likes to get up in the morning. That sort, you see. Likes to be alive, as a fact."

But the thrifty French murmur, "He [or she] has joie de vivre." Not a word more. The hearer understands well. Likely enough the hearer sighs, as if for a far, kind country.

Joie de vivre! Dilly Galahad knew the phrase well enough. Once her pretty oval face and a tan felt mountain hat—imported model and ninety-five dollars to a favored customer—had been so captioned for Wurd and Murd's March booklet.

Of the last year or two—or was it longer?—it had come to Dilly that she knew no joie de vivre. Neither by day nor by night. Preposterous, of course. She had everything that a woman could want—youth, comeliness, health, wealth, and a good looking, young, devoted, wealthy, healthy, kind, honorable, and good husband.

Indeed, for John Galahad the adjectives could come tumbling from tongue like candies from a beautiful cornucopia. But, returning home this last year or two—or was it longer? —Dilly had formed the habit of proceeding without delay to her own room, there to sit unemotionally in a chair before the fire, after a maid had taken her hat and gloves, and try not to wait for John's gentle and courteous summons.

The room was chiefly soft gray satin. Young women dream about such sitting rooms on Park avenue, and try vicariously to receive satisfaction from the screen's two-dimensional copies. Dilly would lie back in a satin chair while her maid brought a chiffon lounging robe. Young women of all degrees dream about such gray satin chairs, such chiffon rest robes, such deferential maid service.

Dilly had dreamed once. She could recall when she, returning home, was wont to stand hopefully in the hall below, looking at the great carved doors of the library at her left. Was John home? Did he need her help?

Even on Park avenue the Galahad library was held complete and uniquely handsome. The great hall with its onyx walls and rugs was the trademark, or the birthmark, or some sort of mark, of the Galahad family. In America, where traditions are still questioned and under cloud of brevity, if not of authenticity, that hall was traditional. Magazines asked for photographs of it; their editors, per young women secretaries, writing correct letters of thanks on the best bond paper. Two motion picture studios had asked to use it for a superspectacle. John's mother had refused one. But John, approached by the other, had given gentle consent.

Sometimes Dilly recalled that when she first entered it, six years ago, she had stopped, awed to silence, and wondered ecstatically how she could ever thank her God for that hall and for John's forehead. Both were perfect.

Dilly herself had a very nice forehead. The soft, white, medium high kind. She had the kind of hair, too, that blows delightfully in a little breeze. And nice eyes and a perfect chin. It is hardly likely that six years ago any one in America hadn't seen Dilly's pretty girl face, with its smiling, shapely lips and wide flung hair. She smiled from smart magazines like La Mode and Pretty Women's Ways. In photogravure she was repeated over all the smart world of two continents.

She had, advertising writers and artists said, the "college girl" face. It was not wholly feature nor coloring that made her seem, in a chic felt hat and a white knitted sport suit, the sweet exponent of youth and love. Something illusive lay in her face, depending not on sweet curve of cheek nor deep, youthful, blue eyes, nor even on the hair which always seemed wind flung. And the wind seemed to have been a nice, gentle, tonic wind, too, a freshman or sophomore wind, with a green golf course just around the bend and a packed basket of cold meats and salads just beyond its blowing.

In short, Dilly looked like that basic fact which is back of the statistics of birth, marriage, and own your own home.

Strange how vision turned backward has a magnifying effect. This day, sitting thoughtfully in her own gray satin chair, Dilly tried not to remember that once, in a very passion of love and happiness, she had poured out adjectives from a mental cornucopia on John. She had lain awake all night long and reflected rapturously what a lucky, lucky girl.

For weeks she could not sleep peacefully for telling herself what kind of man was John Galahad. She had not attended to her work days for wondering what return she might ever make him for his great favor of loving her—her, little Dilly Wilson, ordinary Dilly Wilson, hat and coat model at a sporting wear shop.

Dilly had not been unsophisticated nor affectedly modest. She was city born, the daughter of a Brooklyn bookkeeper. She had graduated from a Brooklyn high school, with her four years of Latin and adjusted semesters of chemistry, literature, and medieval history. Besides all that, sixty dollars a week and an offer nearly every other week from some other high class shop of sporting wear, a coaxing we-will-give-you-more-than-sixty offer, had not hurt Dilly's natural self-respect.

She could hardly have been humble minded with her income and the petting she got from advertisement writers. Nor could she have been entirely unsophisticated after having, for three seasons, tried on hats for the three Bohns sisters, besides Donni, the film actress, and a long string of pretty ladies whose accounts with shops on the avenue were settled, but not by husbands' nor fathers' checks.

The three Bohns sisters were wealthy little orphans who raced from Lake George to Palm Beach in married men's cars and jibed at the wives left behind. Donni, it was said, refused to leave New York for Hollywood because she'd heard the latter place had a four mile limit. She'd left school in the fourth grade, but knew life and, it was said, a police station or two. But she was a brave soul who never omitted a damn nor a bad anecdote, because she foolishly felt that, being famous, she ought to stand on her dignity among shopgirls.

She and the Bohns sisters and some of the pretty ladies often advised Dilly, whom they admired. They told her that she ought to get more out of life with her profile than trying on hats for themselves. The sex jealousy is often less than stated. Dilly had listened and smiled—her sweet, illusive smile, which was neither sophisticated nor yet sentimental. She knew enough to know later that her courtship was a very beautiful thing and rare among men.

For instance, the first time John saw her. He had come with his sister Julia, who was going abroad in a hurry and needed hats. He sat quietly at one side while Julia made the purchases. She was a well known young society matron who had had decided tastes since her babyhood. Julia had mannish hair, but pleasant gray eyes.

He was good looking, her brother. The Reform society used his photograph on its letterheads. His features were clear, like Phidian marble. He had a pleasant, gentle mouth and sensitive upper lip.

Dilly knew at once that his eyes were unobtrusively following her as she promenaded back and forth. She would not have been surprised had his further actions been different. O, she had had plenty of men take quiet notice of her. But John Galahad was not like other men. He did not follow precedent. He took his sister out to her car. He came back and sought the vice president of the Wurd and Murd Shops, Inc. He was asked to introduce John Galahad to Miss Wilson and make it very plain to her that the request was most respectful.

The vice president was entirely willing. In New York few people refused any request made by a Galahad.

The manager of the shop on the avenue, hearing later, was much displeased. Two of the felt buyers were profane. Knowing what they did of Mr. John Galahad, they foresaw that the shop was going to lose the best sports wear model it had ever owned. They were not disappointed in their foreseeing.

Sitting thoughtfully now in her gray satin chair, with the motors of the street below sending up their faint but powerful tom-tom, Dilly admitted that in so far as one gift can be perfectly given by heaven to maid it had been given to her. Most maids call it the best gift. She had had a wooing blent of poesy, and money, and delicacy, and luxury! All the exquisite devotion, the tact, the consideration that could be shown by a man of birth, breeding, wealth, and goodness had been shown to her, showered upon her. Flowers, gifts, homage, courtesy. Those rides at sunset along the Hudson, most beautiful of streams. Those little lovely dinners in restaurants to which entrance in itself was a tribute. The Sunday afternoons among the foothills when he read Emerson and Tennyson aloud. He liked Tennyson. He said that Dilly might have been one of Maud's high born retinue.

It was the kind of courtship that naïve young girls dream about, wise young women know there is no such animal, while brasen women at life's end drop scalding tears because it never happened to them!

She was surprised when soon—too soon—he took her to his home.

The elder sister Julia, Mrs. Roger de Covey, was one of the aloof mannered customers of whom salesgirls stood a little in awe. The other sister, Lillian, mother, and brother, Dilly did not know even by sight.

Still, no mental support need have been laid in. None was needed.

THE Galahad dining room was a noted room. It, too, had been pictured in Sunday photogravure.

John's mother proved to be a dignified old woman who carried white hair and her sixties well. She belonged to the horseshoe circle of the Metropolitan opera house. Julia had her husband along. Both were impassive New Yorkers, with handsome faces and manners. Lillian, the other sister, was tall and thin and rather esthetic in gliding walk and shoulders. Dilly had read in the papers that an engagement was imminent between her and a young Englishman of titled descent if not expectations. Honny, the brother, younger than John by five years, was a pleasantly impassive young man with lightish hair.

But all of them were most kindly to Dilly, rather hushed and shy. John's dignified mother kissed her and Julia patted her cheek and later leaned across the table to murmur, "You dear!" Lillian's deep blue eyes were most gracious. Honny was almost pathetically anxious to talk about matters that interested her. At the foot of the impressive table sat John, beaming his pride in her and his pleasure in his family's attitude.

There seemed no reason why they should not marry immediately. At a later confidential luncheon, John's impressive, white haired mother spoke most sweetly to her. "We're so glad that John's fallen in love with a dear girl like yourself."

Lillian and Mrs. De Covey took masterful but considerate charge of her trousseau. Lillian was candid, but affectionate and unwounding. "Dear Dilly, don't be silly! That's a rhyme. But if I lend you twenty-five thousand dollars for a few necessary clothes, four or forty years after you and John are married you can pay me back with ninety-nine per cent interest if you'll feel better."

"Lillian's mad about helping other women choose clothes," said Julia.

"Dilly's such a doll, too."

Julia kissed her lightly on one cheek and added, "Dear Dilly, I don't want to libel my oldest brother and I don't want to hurt you, but I'm sure that he did not fall in love with you because he had heard that you are good to your mother."

Dilly laughed and blushed and remembered that, accompanying his sister Julia, John had first laid eyes upon her when she was slowly promenading in a three hundred dollar white flannel beach coat. After all, she was sensible enough to realize, their attitude was that of generous persons who have always been too used to money to overestimate or underestimate its need. And she would really like a perfect outfit—for John's sake. It was wonderful that so clever and spiritual a man should have loved her. That was what certain magazine editors termed John Galahad—clever and spiritual and a boon to a materialistic age. The Galahad hotels for workingmen, the Galahad free coffee and hot dog stands for the down and out men, the Galahad measures that constantly assailed Albany and even Washington, the Galahad log rolling for better industrial conditions and better bathtubs for tenements, and better tenements for congested parts of cities, and better cities and better citizens—all this had been accepted by the world, the American world and even wider, at its par value.

And it was doubly sweet that the wonderful family of so wonderful a man should welcome her. Dilly sensibly realized the truth, she told herself. It was moonshine, not the sun's glow of love. They liked her because John loved her and they loved John. It was a wonderful condition of affairs in a world that contained the Bohns sisters and their sordid romances. But it was not the less agreeable and lucky for her.

She and John had been married. A plain wedding. John, by every law of his life, liked plainness and simplicity. But the veil was very old lace. Lillian and Julia saw to that, and the white embroidered satin train. Mrs. Galahad saw to the wedding breakfast. And there were twenty-two reporters on hand.

Dilly had privately wondered whether she and John would have their own home or live with the others. Nothing had been said beforehand. She had learned from certain bits of chat that John owned the big house on Park avenue, but his mother had a life interest in it. She might not care to be supplanted by a little chit who had worked for her daily bread.

Dilly had thought to herself that, anyhow, she would prefer an apartment. She wasn't used to handling servants. It would be better fun and not so startling to live more plainly and help John in his work.

If they should stay on in the big house, Dilly felt that it would be better for her if all the family lived with her and John. His mother would continue to run the house. John might not like, indeed, to do without his mother or sisters. She had noticed that his plans came first. Always when any project was broached there was an air of waiting to find out what John had on his engagement pad.

And it wasn't, Dilly had at that time reflected, as if they would be hard in-laws! They were kind and unaffected. She could rub corners with them better than with some of the pompous salesgirls whom she had known. Honny was a kindly dear, always obliging and rather humble. In any event, she could say Te Deum and be thankful.

But somehow it had all been arranged without her being included in the preliminary discussions. She and John à deux were to have the big house and its servants. His mother was kind and frank. She was a little tired of big places and would love an apartment by herself, with time to knit. O, no—John could not get along in a smaller establishment. Didn't Dilly know that twice a week the great drawing rooms were thrown open to public gatherings? And his records, prison, labor, and political, occupied half an upper wing. Besides, even the impressive and thrice photogravured dining room was not always quite adequate to his trades union guests.

Julia and her husband had already their own place in the same block, of course. Lillian said she was going to take a studio. "And stay a good deal with me?" put in the mother. "O, certainly." Mother and daughter had the same gracious ways of lifting a hand in agreement. Honny was the only one who hesitated at leaving the house.

ODD! Did they seem to hurry to make excuses not to live with John and his bride? One evening Dilly happened to hear what seemed like an inadvertent reproach from Lillian to Honny, who sounded as if he had suggested leaving, too.

"You might stay on awhile, Honny! It wouldn't hurt you!"

"Is that so, darling sis? Listen, I'm pretty fed up, too, and——"

They saw Dilly. Honny hastily made an excuse to leave the music room. "Told John," he murmured with as much awkwardness as Dilly had ever seen in the courteous and graceful Honny, "that I'd run over those lodging house reports for him."

Dilly had removed her eyes from Lillian, who was also ill at ease. Often when trying on hats Dilly had been wisely obliged to practice nonobservation of customers' asides. So her natural savoir faire had been cultivated. It was almost as capable of sudden response as was the self-command of the socially trained Lillian.

But the impression had hung in the great gilded room, cluttered with chairs for the workingmen's wives' musicale to be held that afternoon, that Lillian feared Dilly had overheard something.

Presently Lillian had said, with a touch of confusion, "You mustn't think we're all running away from you and John, dear Dilly. We're sure you'd rather be alone—for a while, at least."

"I'm not used to a lot of things," explained Dilly, with a betraying glance at a man servant entering with a tray. Of course, she would a little rather be alone with John, except for servants and such accessories of great wealth.

"You'll get used to some things easily enough," said Lillian, with a faint odd inflection. She spoke almost comfortingly. Now, why should Dilly, lucky in love, loved Dilly, need comfort?

It happened that just then another man servant entered the room. Mr. John wished his sister's aid for a half hour, if she were free. Lillian went.

Dilly had sat on in the soft, handsome room and watched the sun through an eastern window lighten the pottery base of a huge flower-filled vase beside the gilded orchestra stand.

She had not been hurt because John sent for his sister, not her. Merely wishful. Would she ever suit John as audience and adviser when they were alone? She wished that she might have gone along and observed how the wiser Lillian assisted her brother by advice or suggestion.

And then, unexpectedly, Lillian had returned to the room. "Still here, Dilly dear? John thinks he'd like your opinion also on his speech. To the legislature next week, you know. On the workingmen's privilege bill."

She had sprung up excitedly. "O, I couldn't give an opinion! I wouldn't know! But I'll love to hear it."

Odd. Was Lillian looking at her a little pityingly? Surely not. Or—or possibly Lillian thought that John expected too much from a little hat-wearer.

O, most odd! Six years since that bright day—since that huge pottery vase was flower-filled for those workingmen's wives! Six years.

She had gone down eagerly to the great library, which was wholly given over to the eldest son of the family. John had been standing beside the huge onyx mantle, whose carved corners were continent renowned. One arm lay lightly across the carved faun's profile of the left corner. In one hand he held with loose-leaved grace a number of purple-typed gray sheets of paper. His dark hair, which had a slight natural wave, was a little disheveled off the fine, high, white forehead. His glance was burning, as if a large audience waited for his word.

At her entrance his absent burning glance focused on her affectionately. He cleared his throat. At his soft open silk collar the white skin and cords could be seen to strain and relax under this throat clearing. He lifted his shoulders a little, in oratorical attitude. He frowned down meditatively at the typed pages held extended. He began to read in his low but perfectly distinct musical voice.

Six years. And now, sitting in her gray satin room, Dilly waited. Perhaps he would not know that she had returned. But of course he would know! He would have left word to be informed of her return. Especially—Dilly's smile was curled and most disdainful—if Vivvy Bohns were in town.

She waited. She had not long to wait. A maid named Meta entered. If Mrs. Galahad had leisure, Mr. Galahad would like her to come down to the library. Mrs. Galahad rose obediently and slipped off the chiffon lounging robe and into a chiffon frock. One never knew who would be encountered in the great Galahad library—a cabinet officer or a hodcarriers' delegation.

She went downstairs. Six years had gone by?

John was standing beside the huge onyx mantle; one arm lay lightly across the carved faun's profile which formed the left corner. In one hand he held gracefully a number of loose purple-typed gray sheets. His hair was a little disheveled off his high white forehead. His eyes were burning. At her entrance he greeted her lovingly and cleared his throat. He lifted his straight, shapely shoulders a little and began to read in his low but distinct voice.

She lay back in a chair and tried to think of other things than the injustice of the employers' lien bill, which five state legislatures were chewing in hungry dog fashion. It was not easy. She tried to think of Meta, the maid, whose eyes had been red. Dilly could guess why. Meta's husband, Alfred, the second man (in any other similar establishment he would have been second footman, but the Galahad menage was less formally titled) had again been philandering.

She should have asked Meta what was wrong. It was the Galahad rule always to take alert and sympathetic interest in the servants' moods. John insisted. Privately and publicly he lived up to his professed ideals. But now Dilly unsympathetically wished that Meta's red eyes hadn't given point to a wisteria envelope that lay on John's great desk.

It was a scented envelope. Heavy, overlooped handwriting. Dilly knew whose hand. Vivvy Bohns'. Dilly knew why it lay in plain sight. John was wearing his hair shirt. John was disciplining himself.

And, knowing her husband's least inflection of voice—O, what wife does not, after six years?—Dilly was not surprised when, after his speech had been read to her and her opinion had been obtained, John coughed with a gentle air of awkwardness and suggested that they start a week earlier to the Maine lodge.

LAST year they had gone to Maine a week earlier than usual. Dilly knew why. Poor John. He tried so hard to be good! And Vivvy Bohns was a little devil, with her mixed Thais and gamin soul. For two years now she had set her malicious and illicit and lovely little cap at him. She was the youngest of three lovely, unprincipled sisters. And John—poor old John—O, Dilly saw clearly. He loved her, Dilly, and, being an anomaly in this age, was faithful to her in word and act. But in thought—ah, Dilly was aware as well as if she had been told by him that some slight fleshly chord in his almost unfleshly makeup was set a-quivering by lovely, shameless Vivvy. And now, as last year, John was running away!

Last year Vivvy had given up gayly and gone abroad for four months, flitting back to find John well chaperoned by a national election, with its press of speeches and exacting committee work. In pique she had left him alone all winter. Spring must have thrilled her anew. Or else people's laughter had made Vivvy stubborn. Dilly had heard that people had laughed. Lillian had laughed. And Julia. And—and Albion Marle had laughed! Dilly admitted to herself that of all the laughter Albion Marle's had been most annoying. And he had been John's secretary only two months last autumn. So it was rather impertinent of him to be amused at all.

"Do you mind going earlier, dear?" John now repeated.

"No, dear," she said, sweetly. "And you don't mind if I ask some people along?"

"Do, dear. Then I'll feel more free to lose myself in my work. You'll not be dull."

It was old and stereotyped exchange.

"Whom are you asking this year, dear?" absently he queried.

"O, the Kermanns, Sir Petey, Honny, the Durell girls, and Vivvy Bohns."

The Galahad lodge in Maine had been built by John's grandfather, done over in Normandy style by his mother, and re-cretonned by Dilly. It was a huge and comfortable place. The Atlantic breezes kissed it. Foothills at the west embraced it like a mother's arms. Beyond the fine white sand of the beach was a three mile limit where rum ships daily played cribbage on their great wet board. Beyond the foothills were marshes containing, in season, huckleberries, mosquitoes, and snakes. But the lodge was too large and manorial to be affected by such remote ugliness of environment.

Indeed, the place was the pride, chief support, and curio of three Maine villages. Its usual summer intake at front doors and back doors was, in lieu of a better word, so mixed! While an English baronet's yacht might be speeding toward the white-capped beach to take tea with the owners, a man of all work behind the big tile roofed garages would be advising a barefoot boy to take his game birds, shot out of season in the marshes, around to the side door, which opened to a passage to Mr. Galahad's study. "Tell him you hit 'em by mistake, hunting snakes. He'll pay you whatever you say the fine'll be! He's soft," the man would sigh richly, "as mush in milk."

In that first beautiful summer Dilly was touched almost to tears by John's noble orders for the treatment of all small barefoot boys who besieged the kitchen regions with pails of blueberries. John emptying his white flannel pockets of change every day made her feel proud and humble and exalted. Her John!

In the fifth summer she heard Albion Marle murmur in her ear, "Myself, I was brought up on such sad fare of facts that if I want to give away a handful of chicken feed I must first earn it. This cramps one's philanthropy, I find."

Albion Marle had once run cash in a department store on Thirty-fourth street. He had been copy writer at the Wurd and Murd Shops, Inc., after Dilly left to marry. He had a "rising" face—thin, clever, mobile lips, bright blue eyes, and aquiline profile. A senator had spoken of him to John Galahad as perfect secretarial material.

Later, to Dilly, John had generously disagreed with his friend the senator. "Marle's out of the ordinary. For his own good I can't hang on to him. He was never meant to be a yes-man. But he's the kind of secretary out of which cabinet members are made."

Naturally, between the young man and his employer's wife Wurd and Murd's, Inc., was a sort of link. Human nature cannot control its reactions of spirit to such links.

Once in the previous summer when John took his usual posture at the fireplace while preparing to read his usual typed pages Albion Marle shot a quick glance at Mrs. Galahad, sitting near in listening posture. Dilly made her face immobile—and then was ashamed of the quick impulse to do so. Was she afraid this young man would suspect what she might be thinking of John?

And that was a year back. This summer saw a closer degree of acquaintanceship with young Mr. Marle. O, yes—it was not exactly a triangle, including Vivvy, but a rectangle. Dilly did not like her own thoughts, and she wished this summer were over—well over.

Moreover, she blushed faintly when, on the piazza, Marle raised his smooth, thin eyebrows at sight of Vivvy Bohns, in white cloth coat and white suede gauntlets, stepping from a motor car. Behind was another car with Vivvy's hat boxes, trunks, tennis racquets, golf bag, private stock, and maid.

Dilly was wroth. Let his eyebrows behave! But there was no easy way of explaining to him that not feeling for him, but feeling against John, had caused the invitation to lovely, angling Vivvy.

Dilly found the study door locked the next morning. Albion Marle opened it instantly at her knock. John explained that he wished to guard for a few days against needless interruption. Dilly must use a signal of white knuckles.

Late in the afternoon Dilly used the signal agreed upon. "John, Vivvy wants you to go swimming before dinner."

"Won't you tell Miss Bohns I'm sorry, dear," regretted John, his head bent over his desk and a great wad of foolscap. "I swam before breakfast, you know. I'm afraid she doesn't understand that we have pretty regular work hours, even here."

"She said," spoke Dilly, "that if you didn't come out she'd come into your parlor, said the fly to the spider, and spoil your schedule by pure force of mind over matter."

"He was about unconscious when I found him."

His head continued to be bent. "I daresay. She is an extravagant talker. But she has a poor host just at present, I'm afraid."

Dilly forgot the third person present. Her lip curled. She felt that she'd respect John more if he came out and yielded to temptation instead of fighting it like a poseur. Then she colored. Marle had smiled, too—behind John's back.

But, being a wife as well as a woman, she had a certain measure of content in later telling Vivvy: "Sorry, Vivvy. But you ought to know John by this time. When he won't, he won't—and there's an end on't."

Vivvy had the resolution, at will, of the modern Circe. Next morning she swam before breakfast—before John's breakfast, which was an early affair.

The next morning Dilly swam early with John and Vivvy. John asked her along. Plaintively he asked her—like a little boy wanting protection. Vivvy screamed with laughter at sight of Dilly in her blue taffeta cape, so that a chaperonish nausea, in lieu of better description, filled Dilly's soul. Vivvy's scream of laughter met a whitecap.

The next morning along came Marle to swim, too, at the unearthly dawn kissed hour. Dilly had asked him along. Dilly raced him—through whitecaps that licked icily at bare knees and slapped zestfully at straining shoulders.

"Race you to the three mile limit?" lightly challenged Marle, with John and Vivvy as far to his side as he and Dilly could leave them.

"Not that far. Land's too much the other side."

"How far?" He waved. "How far'll you race, then?"

"Twenty yards."

He laughed. Dilly admitted to herself that his laugh could increase in charm to a woman's ear.

O, Wurd and Murd's, Inc., was a link! She floated, the salt spray a mask to any emotion on her oval face, and she pictured Marle's future. Interesting. He'd go up—up. Eventually he'd be the kind of person, a senator or business executive, whom wealthy idealists like John invited for weekends and worth while exchange of views. And his wife would find life interesting, too. Just to help him, watch him rise. As for John——

But about this time Dilly decided to get back to her maid, her breakfast, and her guest filled day. It was preferable to continuing a potential comparison which inevitably would prove odious.

Crossing the white beach, her satin sandals leaving a small, firm track, she was conscious that two men watched her. Both wished she'd stay in the water. And each man had his reason. Dilly's teeth clicked viciously over one man's reason. Did John expect her actually to keep guard on his virtue, his precious virtue?

In her own rooms she wished fretfully that she'd stayed on the beach. Her maid Meta again was red eyed. She was tired of Meta's red eyes. Now what had Alfred done this time? At Dilly's impatient tone Meta seemed more hurt.

"Well, you know men, Mrs. Galahad," she sniveled. "I guess they're all alike. All wrapped up in themselves, and what do they care if a woman has to grit her teeth all the time over their mean ways?"

"Never mind men in general, Meta," said Dilly coldly. "What, at present, is Alfred doing?"

Well, it seemed that Alfred was doing plenty. Meta was a native of Maine. Alfred was city born—Sixth avenue. Meta had numerous kin in the three villages thereabout. Native born kin. Alfred had stumbled upon an aunt—so he said—of his own living in the farthest village. A Sixth avenue aunt who had moved her lares from asphalt to daisy fields.

"But it isn't his Aunt Tildy that he's running over all the time to see—and fix her roof, and mow her yard, and put up her curtain rods." Meta's wrath and her tears mingled and spurted in duet. "Not her—but his cousin Liddy! That little hussy that's tried to go to Hollywood, and tried to get on Broadway, and tried to model in a Fifth avenue shop, and tried to be an artist's model! And he needn't tell me he's off today in the marsh picking a pail of huckleberries for his Aunt Tildy because she wants to can some——"

"Just what do you wish me to do, Meta?" Dilly spoke wearily.

"Well, if you'd just say a word to Mr. Galahad, Mrs. Galahad! If you'd just hint to Mr. Galahad that Alfred's a natural born liar and why should he be taking half days and whole days off and the other servants having to look after his work? Mrs. Galahad, you know Mr. Galahad is too good and kind ever to think, much less accuse a man of untruthfulness! But you know, Mrs. Galahad, in spite of Mr. Galahad, that some men are just born liars——"

"I see. I'll do what I can, Meta."

"Here this morning he went to pick those huckleberries for, he says, his Aunt Tildy! And tells me to mind my own business, because his Aunt Tildy was good to him when he was a little Sixth avenue alley rat——"

"I see. Never mind saying any more, Meta."

But it was late afternoon before she had opportunity to speak to John. And after all, she might have saved her breath. John was sweet, attentive, but stubborn.

"I really do not believe that Alfred is untruthful, dear. And even if such were the case—you know, dear, it is always distasteful to me to reflect that other men's hours are at my whim, to be controlled by me!"

"He left early this morning and has not yet returned. Meta feels that one day ought to supply the aunt's need for huckleberries. Try to think of Meta's distastes, John."

"Of course, dear. I'll talk to Alfred when he makes another request of the kind."

DINNER was as usual. Nothing untoward. But the evening was distinguished by Vivvy's symbolical dance. Vivvy insisted upon giving the exhibition. And the old Greeks had nothing, said one Durell girl, on Vivvy Bohns in the way of removing hampering garments. Only the phlegmatic Sir Petey watched the performance with stolid eyes. The Durell girl said it was symbolical of corkscrews, nothing more. Honny inclined to an angleworm with epilepsy. The Kermanns were merely bored. It was their third week-end at various places with Vivvy.

During the dance John left the great, brilliant living room. Dilly's lip curled. John was removing himself from temptation! Strong willed John! Something within her seemed more akin to Marle watching Vivvy with careless interest. As if conscious of her thought and her eyes, Marle glanced across the room. He joined her later at a card table. Vivvy, having danced to the end of a whirling disarray of black georgette drapery, left the room. In search of John, it was to be presumed.

But Dilly afterward found him in an upper hall talking to Meta, whose eyes were redder. Alfred had not returned. Alfred was making a day and a night of his aunt's company!

Later, in Dilly's sitting room, John was serious. "Meta is afraid that Alfred may have lost himself in the marshes, with which he is unfamiliar."

"If I were Meta," said Dilly with shortness, "I'd hope he was lost."

"You don't mean that, dear," smiled John.

The smile was sweet, tender, and composed. Dilly wondered if it were not, too, a little prideful—at having withstood bold, bad Vivvy. And did John think that she, Dilly, his wife, ought to rejoice with him that he had been true to his higher nature? And could she—ah, could she—in time learn to dislike John's smile? Dilly feared that she could.

Meta entered, red eyed. Dilly went to bed, but not to sleep. John said that he was sitting up late to work. He had been interrupted a little. "Merely a little, dear. Don't feel disturbed." He had a bit of intensive statistical research on the employment of children of three years in the preceding century in the British coal mines.

The next day, close on to noon, Vivvy rode off in her imported racer. To drop in on friends forty miles north, she said airily.

It proved that the house party was due to break up. The Durell girls decided to take a tennis-sprained ankle into town to an osteopath. They were keen dancers and aghast at endangering the family skill. Sir Petey had an engagement in Boston for the week-end. The Kermanns were bent on a walking trip to Canada.

Dilly was almost relieved. Still, Honny and Marle were left. She hoped Vivvy wouldn't return soon. But she would. The situation would be tighter, that was all. And then toward dinner hour Dilly became rather sick at heart. Where was John? Some one said John had gone away in his imported roadster. When? O, early after luncheon.

Nothing equals the sense of telepathy possessed by any hostess. Even before she quite grasped her own suspicion, Dilly knew that the Kermanns would postpone their walking trip, that the Durell girls, ankle or no, would stay over until they knew more about where John had gone and why, at the same time that Vivvy went somewhere for some reason. She knew that Honny would be silent but sympathetic, and Marle would be tactfully cognisant. She knew that dinner and evening would be twin ordeals.

So it came to pass.

No John for dinner—where was John? Dilly sat at the head of the table, slim and composed, in white crêpe, with the Galahad emeralds at her throat and wrists. The Kermanns and the Durells talked a shade too much and too fast. Honny avoided Dilly's eye. Marle was too tactful.

Inwardly Dilly was hot with anger at John, and cold with anger at him. O, this was the way John would do! Not under his own roof, with his wife to be humiliated or hurt, would he err in word or deed! No, indeed. John was too fine of soul for that! No—he'd ride away like an Abelard, or any other silly passion possessed soul, and choose a more fitting mise en scène. Even before the wretched dinner was ended, Dilly knew the truth. She knew that she was devastated of her happiness. Poseur? Prating egotist? Had she ever tried to persuade herself that such she believed John to be? How foolish of her! She knew now that underneath everything had lain a vital little hope that John was different from other men, and not made of common clay.

Marle? No—Marle could never replace John. In a way, of course, he might! O, in a second rate, flippant, superficial fashion life might be zestful with Albion Marle. Zestful—suddenly she loathed the word. Who cared to be zestful? Who cared for anything but docilely serving to a man better than most men?

Dinner ended. The evening endured somehow. Honny and Marle chatted of politics and prize fights. Bridge at one table later, and poker at the other table.

The Kermanns and the Durell girls found a good deal of reason for spasmodic laughter as the hours passed. They were shrieking by midnight. In her anger at John, Dilly was moved to a curious pity for him. Poor John—how foolish of him to overthrow much good work and allow himself, besides, to become this target for a world's mirth.

It was after midnight when she found Albion Marle at her side. Well, Dilly always had had a curiously lovely face and an inexplicable charm. Wurd and Murds had considered Dilly unique in a world of pretty girls. So it was not so surprising that Marle did not wait long. After her fashion, Dilly had given him advance encouragement, too!

"It's a lovely night," he said, a little short of breath. "Outdoors—that red rose hedge is positively magnificent in the moonlight. Perhaps you've been too busy to keep track of those red giants——"

"Sorry," said Dilly, briefly. "Too sleepy." Dislike of him surged in her heart. His forehead was too white and sleek.

In the privacy of her sitting room, she let tears well. Common clay—John. Kosher. She had been right in her impatience. He was common clay. Poorer clay than most men, for he tried to pretend to be better, whereas most disdained pretense.

Meta entered. Meta's eyes were swollen lobsters of at least two pounds apiece.

"Alfred, Mrs. Galahad," she began in a whisper——

"Meta, I am very tired. I do not wish to be unkind. But I cannot listen to anything about Alfred tonight."

In bed, Dilly lay with wide eyes and waited morning. Common clay—he might have been common clay, as he pretended so to be. He might have been—he might have—he might have been. It sang an odious refrain toward morning.

Morning—hateful morning. To the east the Atlantic whipped white waves in its usual exuberance. And breakfast was waiting—and the Durells and the Kermanns. And the Honny and of Albion Marle. All waiting for Dilly wondered if she could endure the day. Almost she felt that she could sob and scream and go into hysterics, like any other deserted wife.

It was in a kind of silent hysteria that she rose and crossed the dressing rooms and entered her room. A half conscious impulse urged her to dramatize her emotion with sight of the almost severe simplicity of furniture with which John, in his room, played up to his pretensions. "Played up"—was the phrase Dilly used to herself.

She flung open the connecting door.

And there in John's room, on the edge of the bed, sat John. But what a figure! Dilly's eyes strained from their lovely sockets.

WAS it John? He was disheveled. Both his clothes hung in shreds. His hair had happened to his wonderful hair! It smeared his forehead; it was matted. His face and hands were horribly mottled and swollen, as if by poisonous insects. There were scratches—claw marks.

"John, where have you been?"

He swallowed hard. His throat was swollen. He seemed to be trying with his bloated face to smile sheepishly.

"I didn't want any one to know, dear. I hoped to return unnoticed——"

"John, where have you been! Where!"

"In those marshes," he said, as if deeply ashamed. "Hunting Alfred."

Hurriedly he went on to explain. "You see, dear, I knew that he was city reared. And not familiar with this countryside. It occurred to me, when he did not return at the stated hour, that he might have lost his way. Even the men hereabouts don't do that. It occurred to me likewise that if I organized a searching party and he turned up safe and sound somewhere else, I would appear to have tried to—to do something a little spectacular." He smiled, uncomfortably. "Wealthy philanthropy seeks publicity—you know the sort of stuff."

"And was Alfred"—she had difficulty in saying—"lost in the marshes?"

"Yes," he said, simply.

"Ah!"

"He lost his way—got into mire, fell over a tree trunk, and broke his leg. He was about unconscious when I found him. I took the car as near as possible. Then made the actual search on foot. Of course our marshes aren't an African jungle. But poor Alfred, crawling on his knees in the mire and water, met a few snakes. And the mosquitoes were frightful."

"I suppose you had to carry him back," said Dilly. "How many miles?"

"Really, dear, I don't know. But I'm sending him to town as soon as possible. Inoculation, you know, against malaria or typhoid. Please don't say anything downstairs. I—sometimes a man's motives are misunderstood. When," he added, as if painfully, "he is a wealthy man."

"I won't," she promised. "I won't, dear."

* * * * * *

And she didn't. But Meta did. Meta, weeping, laughing, showering her Alfred with apology and kissing; Meta metaphorically kissing her employer's feet. Dilly gave Meta a quite new white silk gown.

STUART'S
DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

The MAGIC MAN By Hallie Erminie Rives

IN PREVIOUS CHAPTERS:

DR. KARL ROSELIUS, "the wizard of Melton Park," discovers a process by which, for a few cents, he can make synthetic pearls that can not be distinguished from the finest orientals. Representatives of the foreign pearl barons, who fear destruction of their trade, propose that Roselius join them in selling his fabrications to the public as genuine. The chemist refuses, announcing that for reasons of sentiment he will destroy the formula. Mitchell Schuyler, scion of a ruined society family, hopes to repair his fortunes by marrying Rose, Roselius' daughter, though the chemist refuses to approve his suit. Schuyler keeps himself in funds by pawning the family silver at the shop of a woman fence, Meg Huchard, who lives at the back of the place with her son, Canuck. Canuck's lack of nerve and his bungles in crime have brought him the contempt of Denny, Meg's handy man, and the rest of the shop's coterie. Roselius exhibits his synthetic pearls and the safe in which he keeps the formula to his friend, Dr. Florian, eminent Belgian surgeon; to the Baroness von Strohm, Florian's sister; to Miss Thorp, the wizard's assistant, and to Schuyler. Schuyler engages Canuck and Tug Holloway, the safe cracker, to steal the pearl formula. Rose shoots Canuck when he resists her attempt to capture him at the safe, though Tug escapes. Florian pronounces the youth dead, but with a new invention Roselius coaxes back life. By a brain operation the surgeon puts Canuck on the road to recovery, with his memory gone. The chemist plans an experiment of regeneration, announcing that the youth is a new assistant wounded by a burglar. Rose acts as nurse.

"What's the use bucking a thing like that?"

INSTALLMENT VII.
A Crucial Test.

THE Schuyler who greeted them today was not the same Schuyler who a few days before had taken Rose to the Country club dance. He had lost some of the buoyancy, and beneath his conventional manner and the easy assurance that habit had made instinctive lurked worry and something approaching a case of "nerves."

In truth, Mitch had been having no happy time of it. He had banked heavily on the success of his throw, and its failure had floored him. He had not gone near the downtown pawnshop. Whether it was Tug Holloway or Canuck who had been taken by surprise didn't signify. The thing had been a failure, and if either of them by any slip had left a clew for the police, the further Mitchell Schuyler stayed from Meg's place the better! There wouldn't be a ghost of a show for another try at the safe. Roselius would see to that. The pearl game was up!

But give up Rose? Not without a struggle! He had paid a heavy tax on the kisses he had taken in the blue garden—paid in disquiet, in humiliation, and hurt pride; in the anguish of passion unreturned and in hope gone pulpless. But he hugged all the tighter the brand that burned him. To see her, to talk to her, had become a necessity to him.

In the few days following the attempt on the safe he had telephoned to the park a number of times, but the reply had been the invariable "Miss Roselius is out, sir," in Wrenn's stately voice, that had left him with the wonder whether her own lips had dictated the answer.

The rankling suspicion pricked his self-esteem unbearably.

Mitch's eyes held Rose's as her cool fingers lay in his, but he could read no message in them. Then he bowed over the baroness' hand and greeted Miss Thorp and the gentlemen.

"I'd been wondering what had become of you," observed the baroness. "There have been 'doings,' as Rose calls them, since you were here."

"I read about it," he answered. "You must have been rather upset by the affair."

"Upset! It's been a madhouse!" grumbled Florian.

"Poor, unhappy wretch!" said Roselius, reflectively, quartering a crumpet. "A burglar at his age! For it appears he was young, Schuyler. No old offender."

Young! So it was Canuck, not Tug, that the assistant had caught at the job.

Rose was waiting, the teapot tilted. "Strong, Mitch? And a slice of lemon, isn't it?"

"Maybe you'd rather have Scotch," said Roselius. "Wrenn, bring an S. O. S."

"Thanks," said Schuyler. "I believe I will." He had scouted up more than one highball that afternoon. He turned the hissing siphon into the filling glass with tongue touching his lips. "And he got nothing for his trouble? That was lucky!"

"Only a gold cigar case," said Roselius. "This one." He held it up.

"But how did you get it back?"

"It was found on his body."

The cigaret Schuyler was tapping on the back of his hand broke in his fingers.

"His body!" he said blankly "The paper said he escaped."

"He was found the next morning on the railroad track below here."

Mitch downed his drink at a gulp to stifle a physical qualm. He had had a swift double vision of Canuck, now leaning elbows on Meg's red covered table, now lying, a mangled thing, on the ties.

Roselius took an envelope from his pocket. "Here's a letter from the coroner."

Schuyler unfolded it, but the writing wavered and wobbled before his eyes. He was obsessed with the fancy that all of them were looking at him queerly.

"He's cracked his last safe," said Roselius, complacently.

Mitch pulled himself together. "How is your man?" he inquired. "The one the burglar shot?"

"A close call!" said Roselius. "We don't know yet how he'll come out. Suffering from amnesia. Miss Thorp is fidgeting now to get back to nursing him. 'O woman! In our hours of ease,' you know. Eh, Thorpie?"

Miss Thorp vouchsafed him no reply, but her glance was envenomed.

"As for his work, Rose is taking his place and helping me every day."

Mitch achieved a smile at her. "That accounts for the costume," he said. "It's amazingly becoming."

"Don't spoil her, young man," warned Roselius. "It's hard enough to keep her nose to the grindstone. If she gets the idea she's too good looking, she'll be lying down on the job."

He got up as he spoke.

"Don't keep her too long, Schuyler. I've a test going on now that she's responsible for."

Roselius linked his arm in Florian's and the pair went off together, to be followed presently by the baroness and Miss Thorp, and Mitch was at last alone with Rose.

He poured himself a second drink and took a long swallow before he said:

"Was it only the work?"

"What do you mean?"

"I haven't been able to get you on the phone for a week."

"I've been very busy with—father's experiment."

"I wanted so to have a talk with you."

The pink was in her cheeks. "What about?"

"To tell you of a discovery of mine."

She gave him a quick look. "O, have you been working at something? Tell me."

"The discovery that I want to marry you more than I ever wanted anything in the world." The color deepened in her face. "I knew I wanted you before that day in the blue garden, but I didn't know how much. It came to me all of a sudden. I hadn't had any thought of pulling that cave man stuff."

"I—I knew that," she said, looking away.

"I felt I'd jarred you, so I've been waiting. I talked with your father that night. He told you about it, no doubt."

"No, he hasn't mentioned it."

"You know what I think of you," he said. "If you hadn't known it before, you must have that day. I said it all then. Can you—care for me, Rose, as I do for you?"

HE was leaning nearer, his hands clenched, wanting to snatch her into his arms and crush that fragrant face against his breast. But her eyes were looking through the walls of the little room, fixed on the distance.

"It's such a big thing, Mitch," she said. "One has to be so very, very sure, and—I'm not a bit sure. We've been seeing each other at dinners and dances and house parties, and we've talked and motored and tennised together a lot. And still—still—I can't answer the way you want me to, yet." She turned to him. "What did Rah-rah say when you talked to him?"

"He seemed to think I ought to be earning my living."

She nodded. She had guessed as much.

"I never was brought up to think about making money. It's—it's a dashed tall hurdle."

"Well," she said, after a slight pause, "hurdles are made to jump."

She was looking at him, half smiling, half puzzled. Minute by minute today she had been growing more sensitive to some curious and undefinable undersurface change in him. No realignment of moral molecules can take place in the metal of a soul without some subtle alteration in its owner's guise.

Mitch shrugged, a little sullenly. The same baffled hedged-in feeling he had had during that conversation with Roselius was stealing over him now, to his acute discomfiture. He knew he wasn't showing at his best, but for the life of him he couldn't help it.

"What's the use bucking a thing like that? Long before I'd be earning anything worth while you'd be honeymooning at Waikiki—with somebody else."

"I might," she admitted.

But the warmth had gone from her tone. His had not been the answer she had expected. This was not the Mitch she had known so well—or was it that she had never really known him?

He looked at her, frowning, conscious of some subtle change in her manner that was beyond his analysis. "There's no other man, is there?"

"No," she answered.

A clock chimed. She rose slowly and held out her hand. "Good-by, Mitch," she said. "I must go back to my work."

He watched her go glumly and poured himself another three fingers before he went out to the hall.

Canuck sat in a big wicker rocker, in kimono and sandals, looking out of the open window. It was a breezy afternoon, with cloud wisps far and high, mares' tails, graying the blue and gold of sky and sunlight.

He was looking down on a tree-shaded tennis court with a marquee of gay striped canvas at one side, where sat a half dozen young people, sunshiny girls and young men, bareheaded and sweatered, furnishing hilarious applause for Rose and a flanneled opponent who whacked at each other across the net. Now and then faces turned to look up at the pale block his own furnished in the shadowed oblong of window, and once Rose waved her racquet at him and he waved back.

A good, fast game! And she could certainly play it! His eyes sparkled as he watched the lithe swing of her young body in its blue sport skirt and blouse open at the throat. He wondered whether he had ever played it—if he had, the know-how would come back to him as soon as he tried. He felt an itch to be down there, dancing about on his toes and swiping at the little white ball. A hard, lean look was growing in his face now, he ate with a healthy appetite and slept each night almost a full circle of the clock.

The game ended, the players melted away, and he picked up the book that lay open on his knee. It was Maeterlinck's "My Dog." Rose had been reading it to him.

Dull stuff it had seemed at first, not a story at all—even the cover had no bright color nor big lettering. Nothing happened, no detectives nor escapes nor adventure; only a man talking about a dog. But all at once it had caught him. He had had the sensation of a snuggle and whine against his knee, of something thrust into his hand that was soft and cold and wrinkly, and the lick of a warm, sticky tongue in his palm. Very far away, something like looking through the wrong end of a spyglass, was this sensation. But it had told him things. He knew what the man who wrote that book was talking about. It hadn't seemed dull after that.

But somehow it was more interesting when Rose read it to him, and after a little he laid the volume aside and sat thinking.

He was sitting up now. Getting stronger ever minute. Nothing to show he'd been hurt except the bandage on his head—and the fact that he was still as far as ever from remembering anything. Maybe in a day or two he'd go. He couldn't stay there forever. They'd have to tell him whatever they knew about him. But he had begun to doubt whether that was any more than he knew himself. Probably he had been run over or something, with nothing on him to show who he was.

He leaned forward in his chair and looked out through a break in the foliage, across gray water, sprinkled with drifting specks of black and dun. Far away were lofty, smoke-shadowed outlines. The prospect of leaving, however alone—and lost—he felt, gave him a peculiar sinking feeling. Leaving meant leaving her!

Canuck straightened his body and stretched out his muscular arms.

"I don't want to go!" he said. "And that's no maybe, either. Damn it, I don't!"

As if in answer to his thought, a knock came at the door. The handle turned and Rose entered. She had donned her white linen again and the organdie filet lay like a band of snow against her hair. Her face was still flushed with the exercise.

"Saw you watching us," she said, glowing. "It was priceless. I love to win."

"Who were the others? Nurses and doctors?"

"No-o-o. Just friends of mine."

"Does the hospital let them come here to play? That's great!"

"When you're well enough, you'll have to take a hand."

He shook his head. "Guess I'll never have the chance."

"Why do you say that?"

"O, I don't know. What's it matter?"

"What does what matter?"

"Anything."

She came close. "You've been trying to remember again. How silly—when you've only to wait!"

"The doc hasn't got me fooled any!" he said, with apparent irrelevance.

"In what way?"

"He doesn't know himself who I am. None of them do."

"O, is that what you've been thinking?" she cried.

"It's so, isn't it?"

"Surely not! I'm certain Mr. Roselius knows all about you."

"Honest to God?"

"Why, of course he does."

"Do you, too?"

"I know a little."

"Have I got any—any folks?" There was appeal in Canuck's face.

"Certainly you have."

"Why haven't they been here?"

"Maybe they have, and the doctor hasn't told you."

A pause.

"I'd been thinking what if I—hadn't anybody or any—any place to light. Sort of a lost dog feeling, you know. It gives me the willies. Do you ever get 'em?"

"Not very often," she told him. "But when it does happen, do you know what I do? I've got a room with all my little-child toys in it. I simply make a dive for it, and flop down on the floor and imagine I've slipped back to about seven, when there weren't any such things as problems and everything was fun. When you get blue, why don't you try fancying you're still a youngster?"

He had thrown an arm up over his eyes.

"I—can't remember that I ever was a kid," he said, in a muffled voice.

For once Rose had no answer. She stood silent, angry with herself for forgetting, and feeling the anger flooded with a surge of compassion.

As she went down the corridor she was struggling with a curious sense of unreality. It was requiring every day more and more of a mental effort for her to realise that the man she had just left was the desperate criminal she had shot down ten days ago in the act of burglary.

FLORIAN came into the lib-lab with snapping eyes and mustachios twitching with agitation. "Charles! Charles!" he exclaimed. "Something outrageous has happened!"

Roselius finished jotting down a temperature record (it was Saturday afternoon, and the staff were gone), and slammed the door of the electric furnace before he said:

"Yes, yes, Prosper. What is it?"

"I've been robbed!"

"So?"

"Some one has rifled my room." He snatched up the telephone from Roselius' desk.

But the latter put forth a detaining hand. "Here! What are you going to do?"

"Obviously, call the police. It's that cursed vaurien of yours! He's not in his room—I've been to look. The first day he has on his clothes he takes his leave—with whatever he can put his hands on! Just as I told you, with your silly quixotic theories!"

Question:

"What can I do to have perfect half moons?"

Ruth L.

Answer: Half Moons are little crescents of white that mark the nail root. Their size and shape varies in every individual and even on each finger. Occasionally the white area is so small that none of it shows above the nail rim.

Usually however, the Half Moons do not show because the old cuticle is not properly removed and it has grown up over the Half Moons. If you try to cut the cuticle away, it grows back thicker than ever.

So many women had trouble with this part of the manicure that I experimented until I found a way of removing the old tissue and softening the cuticle so it is easy to shape it and push it back. That way is with a liquid—and you probably know it as Cutex Cuticle Remover.

With orange stick and cotton dipped in Cutex the old skin is loosened and removed. Then the cuticle is gently pushed back so the Half Moons show. Rubbing in a Cutex Cuticle Cream—after the manicure—and also at night—will help train the nail rims back.

But remember that just one treatment—if you have neglected to train the cuticle properly—won't get the Half Moons to show perfectly. You will need to care for it regularly. Send 10c for Introductory Sizes.

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK by Jane Eddington

"AND FETCH THE NEW NUTS"—Shakespeare

THE lordly marron in the Nesselrode suggests topnotchers in nuts. It is unique, special, elegant. The salted almond in the dainty dish of silver has given initial distinction to more feasts than we can imagine. If you want a "nibbler," it is always a safe bet. Around the cob nut (hazel nut we call it) in its own pretty husk has gathered much of amenity—in England. No gentleman allows a lady to crack her own.

Walnuts and wine were for some centuries a significant table couple. Walnut service for us now has many pretty forms, and the plain sweet new nut makes a fine dessert for a light lunch. It is weighted down with calories. We need it in our larders, preferably and for prettiness in a bag of netted red twine; not only as an ever ready dessert, but for garnishing sweets—bonbons and icings—and for helping out the dessert salads. It enriches breads and cakes and is sometimes briefly fried in deep fat as a garnish for turkey. The even more delicate pecan will give us similar services and has some specifically its own.

The chestnut in its bur has a poetic connotation for us—the poetic qualities of the autumn. Only a few people have the patience and skill to make it into the lordly marron, but in homelier ways it enhances the menus as a stuffing for fowl or as plain vegetable. And it is kindly to mention the little chinquapin—the name is of Indian origin—which is defined as a dwarf chestnut of our eastern United States, although it looks more like an acorn. It is sweet and edible.

The pine nut, which the Indian of the southwest eats and sends to market, has quite an elegant place in European cookery or Italian cookery in special. And speaking of the little nuts, let us not forget the beechnut in its bur, which country children have always had the patience to gather and shell.

And speaking of children and nuts reminds us of the fact that we could write quite a thesis on the roasting of nuts. Many simple gayeties have had this business as their heart.

Roast Lamb

IN general it is believed that lamb should be roasted quickly but the oven must not be too hot. For a small family a five pound roast of lamb, perhaps the leg cut down, is a good size. This is best if roasted without any water in the pan, and as protected in the cooking that it will lose but little of its juice. What juice and fat it does lose can be made the base of an excellent gravy with some meat stock. Scrape and clean the piece of meat. The "fell" on lamb should be removed no matter what the cut or how used. When it cannot be pulled off it can be scraped and the whole outer surface removed. This surface left on gives to meat, particularly old lamb, a "woolly" taste. Use small wire skewers to fix the lamb in firm shape. Pour over it three tablespoons of hot butter and put in hot oven. The butter seasons the meat and also the fat which cooks out, the two furnishing the basting liquid. Add salt to the last basting.

General Stew Recipe (Small)

MAKE meat immaculately clean and wipe dry if washed. Roll it in flour seasoned with salt and pepper and perhaps a bit of homemade curry powder. Saute meat in fat, remembering that the meat juices, fat and flour give a delicious flavor to the stew if they are not burned. Next sweat the vegetables, sliced, in the fat. Add water, stir till it thickens, and then simmer for one hour or more. When tomato is added put in a little before stew is done. A stew in which the vegetables and meat can swim is not agreeable. It is important to manage the thickening well.

1 pound meat
2 or 3 tablespoons flour, seasoning
2 tablespoons fat
1 or 2 onions
1 or two carrots
Other vegetables to suit
1 pint or more water

Lamb and Spareribs Stew

FOLLOW general recipe in making, being sure to remove any skin from pieces of lamb. Add medium sized potatoes when the stew is half done. Serve the stew with pieces of dry toast. The meat in this stew can be used for a hash (wet or dry) or a meat salad, and the liquid for soup. Besides skinning and wiping the pieces of meat, scrape ends of weathered bones and wipe with cloth wrung from hot water.

½ pound lamb, cheap cut
½ pound spareribs
2 carrots, sliced
1 large onion cut fine
1 small green pepper
3 tablespoons flour
1 or two tablespoons fat
2 or more cups water
Some potatoes

STRIKING FABRIC COMBINATIONS GIVE INTEREST TO THE ENSEMBLE

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The person who invented the ensemble had a grudge against most of us. When things began to come into the ark of Fashion in pairs instead of in single file, when each coat was mated with a separate frock and when each hat chose its own consort, the woman of limited income started to have a hard time. For the ensemble fashion is undoubtedly an expensive one and, were it absolutely obligatory, the average sister among us would have to retire to the woods.

Fortunately, there is no "must" about it. Many a smart woman selects a coat quite as promiscuous in its relationships as was the wrap of mid-Victorian days. On the other hand, we find numerous leaders of fashion who reject the idea of general utility as readily as they would the old fashioned umbrella with long handle.

Yes, the ensemble is chic! It is more so, perhaps, than it has ever been before. And certainly no previous season has shown such a range of fabric combination, nor such versatility of expression as does the present autumn.

Our group of ensembles today reflects both of these elements faithfully. From it we have excluded the models dedicated to evening in favor of those types which are a part of the day time mode. At the left you will find the sort of costume the smart Parisian loves to don. For the medium of the graceful coat the designer has chosen that material which has scored such a triumph in the ensemble of formal character. Broadcloth! Time and again we find this associated with the crêpe frock in these sartorial harmonies sent to us from overseas. Either that or velvet represent the most authentic taste in the coat of the afternoon ensemble.

For the color of this broadcloth coat the designer chose that blonde beige now so much in evidence (and yes, ladies prefer blonde beiges this year) and it is lined and cuffed with the same brown satin crêpe employed in the frock. This latter material is exhibited on the lustrous side and it appears again in the lining of that effective scarf collar tied on the shoulder. The model closes at the side and, although it preserves the straight line, a ripple effected in the front folds gives to this mellow silhouette an absolutely fresh aspect.

For the frock worn with this coat we must turn to the fourth figure in the front views. First of all, there's the bodice. This proves once more how indestructible is the sentiment conceived long ago by Mother Eve for the reptilian family. Not only do we have shoes and belts and bags of the snake and lizard and alligator family, but, as I have mentioned before, the women of this autumn are always being tempted by one of these crocodile—printed fabrics—also the lizard printed variety.

This particular model testifies to the wisdom of the serpent choice. For it is of beige satin, lizard printed, and it is exceedingly stunning in combination with its skirt of plain brown satin. You will notice that the latter material also encroaches in a new and attractive way upon sleeves and neck line.

The coat of this autumn's ensemble may be long or—it may be short as a Norwegian day in midwinter. Coat lengths vary, in fact, from box jacket to full range, and in between you find any number of three-fourths or five-eighths lengths. It is the latter which is celebrated in the central figure of the front views. And in this wrap the familiar prejudice for velvet is once more reaffirmed.

The model, that dark green now so much in favor, is quilted in all over fashion and an almost imperceptible flare contradicts its straight line temperament. Only a small collar of brown fur is here to dispute the jungle-like density of this ensemble's green, for the coat is lined with the same metal cloth of Nile tint functioning in the plaited skirt. And, as to the bodice, the Egyptian river again gave the cue to that interesting metal brocade.

The jumper is banded in the plain metal cloth and it has a crush girdle fastened with jade ornaments. In this connection let it not be forgotten that the band about the jumper, usually in connection with a belt, is quite as good as ever, and that bands of alternating color retain all their former authority.

I may already have appeared emotional on the subject of these velvet and velveteen wraps topping the crêpe frock of the ensemble, but what can a mere chronicler do when the couturiers themselves are so fanatical? For the mid-season collections, just seeping through from overseas, indicate that more and more of these two materials are being used.

Molyneux is one of the leading velvet zealots and his coats of these favored materials cover a wide field of apparel. Especially noteworthy are the jackets of velvet or velveteen completing skirts of identical tint in either self-material or cloth.

Velours also possesses a share of popularity and one of its most spectacular uses is indicated in a mid-season model from Patou. This model offers a red crêpe frock topped by matching velours coat trimmed in gray squirrel and, as an extra insurance against goose flesh, comes the jauntiest of sleeveless crêpe jackets lined throughout with the gray fur. It only goes to show how little inspiration lags in the creation of these ensembles. Always there is some brand new idea to relieve the monotony of the original theme.

Kasha is occasionally used in the formal ensemble with good effect. But usually kasha has got away from the hearth and is completely transfigured by some fairy wand. I have spoken at length of the clou d'or effects which created such a sensation this autumn and in the second model of our front views we present yet another glorification of the once unassuming material. For the coat of this model is in an old rose tint and it is woven with a design of small gold flowers. Natural lynx is the fur selected and this pelt is echoed on the hat of matching velvet, where it is associated with a loop of gold ribbon.

But the most interesting function of the lynx is on the sleeves where it is used in two bands—a fashion, by the way, much approved by Philippe et Gaston. One of these bands is set above the elbow and the other below it and the fact that the upper one is wider joins with the flare of the cuff to throw this detail of the wrap into high relief. Of course this is exactly what the designer intends, for the sleeve of the coat is Fashion's "white headed boy" and upon it are lavished all sorts of new riches and extravagances.

The frock accompanying this coat, which is presented second from the left in the back views, chooses for its bloused jumper the same rose satin lining of the coat and its surplus folds are tied at the side above a skirt employing the coat's kasha.

At the extreme right is a sports coat which may be recruited, also, for street wear. This occurs in a light weight tweed in golden brown and upon the sleeves you will find the same plaid effect in russet red and brown that gives so much character to the border. The scarf collar represents a new technique in this detail, for it is short and is fastened smartly with a large bone buckle of dark brown.

In our back views you will see both the front and back of the crepella frock intended for wear beneath this coat. It is, of course, in golden brown to match and it is further related to the wrap by appliqued bands of the border of the coat. The front of the skirt, with its row of diagonal tucks topping a flare of the material, is especially interesting.

Broadcloth in the new blonde beige is used for the coat accompanying the frock shown fourth from the left in the front views. The coat is lined and trimmed with the same brown satin-crêpe employed for the skirt and trimmings of the frock. This latter chooses lizard printed blonde satin for its bodice and completes its harmony of beige and brown by a hat of blonde beige velvet inset with a triangle of brown satin outlined in krimmer.

Second from the left is a coat of old rose kasha with an inwoven design of gold flowers which is trimmed in natural lynx repeated again on the matching velvet hat. The lining of satin is in lighter rose and echoes the jumper of the frock. This frock, the back of which is illustrated in the back views, employs the coat material for its skirt.

Quilted green velvet with collar of brown fur completes a frock of Nile green metallic cloth with jumper of matching brocade sketched in the center.

Last, a sports coat in golden brown tweed is accompanied by a matching crepella gown trimmed in the same border design of the coat. Both views of this frock are given in the smaller group of pictures.

TWELVE YEARS AGO ONE WOMAN IN BOSTON TRIED IT—

NOW OVER SEVEN MILLION HOUSEWIVES USE IT EVERY DAY.

THE modern housewife of today recognizes in Mazola one of the greatest conveniences and economies that help to make her daily life easier.

From a Single Can she takes the finest salad oil the world affords—regardless of price—and makes quickly the most delicious French Dressing or Mayonnaise.

From the same Can of Mazola she obtains a genuinely pure vegetable oil for all frying. Mazola fried foods are free from grease but appetizingly tempting in their own food-flavors.

Again from the same Can of Mazola she obtains a shortening equal in richness to butter—costing much less—and she makes every sort of cake her whims dictate.

Three important cooking uses from a Single Can! You would think Mazola should cost more because of its high quality and convenience. To the contrary, it's so economical that you begin to save money on your grocery bill the day you use it.

And remember this pleasant thought: Mazola is pressed from the hearts of fully-ripened corn kernels—it is itself as wholesome to eat as the corn from which it comes.

THE MAGIC MAN - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - By Hallie Erminie Rives

"I never saw such a man for the police!" exclaimed Roselius. "Prosper, you have a suspicious mind. Put that phone down! It's my phone."

"But I tell you, Charles, it's happened in the last two hours! He can't have got far. How upsetting! And when our ship sails at three o'clock."

Roselius put his huge hands on the surgeon's protestant shoulders, and pushed the dapper, excited figure into a chair.

"Sit down," he rumbled. "Did you look in his bathroom?"

"No."

"Well, why didn't you? That's probably where he is. He's dressing. I only sent his clothes to him half an hour ago. Now then, what's missing?"

"Clothes—jewelry—heaven knows what else."

"How did you find it out?"

"When Hélène went to lock my trunks just now she found the things gone. She keeps a list."

"Yes," said Roselius, moodily, "she would."

"Two suits, six shirts," said Florian, ticking the items off on his fingers, "four sets of underwear, handkerchiefs, cuff links, and a pocketbook with gold initials."

"How much money was in the pocketbook?"

"It was empty. An old one that I don't carry any more."

"And the clothes. New?"

"No, strangely enough, they were old ones."

"H-m! Were the cuff links very valuable?"

"No, but—confound it, Charles, what has that to do with it? A man doesn't relish being robbed!"

Roselius grinned portentously.

"That's true, Prosper," he said, "but the thing was done so hurriedly—really an inspiration, you know. And I didn't have a chance to tell you, with Hélène buzzing round."

Florian's eyes bulged.

"You hadn't time!" he exclaimed. "Mon dieu! It was you who stole them?"

"It was," said Roselius, in a tone that implied, "And what the devil are you going to do about it?"

"For what?"

"I need 'em for that quixotic theory of mine that you just referred to so tenderly."

"That jailbird—my clothes for him!"

"But Prosper!" said Roselius, sweetly. "You see, I discovered that you and he are near enough the same size. That isn't my fault, is it? He couldn't wear my clothes. You wouldn't expect that of him!"

"Your fault? Your fault! Name of a name!" Florian appealed to heaven. "He has to have my clothes because they fit him!" He turned out his hands. "O, very well," he said, resignedly. "Take them. Only I wish I had known. Hélène——"

But the Baroness at this juncture appeared, to speak for herself.

"Prosper, Prosper!" she cried. "It's worse than I thought. The thief has taken your watch. The old one with the monogram."

"Hélène," said Roselius, "I took a sudden fancy to that timepiece, and I made Prosper give it to me. But I'm going to send him one next Christmas to take its place that'll lay it over any watch in Brussels."

"O, Roselius," she said, "you are so kind hearted! That's just your nice way of making up for the stolen things. But really I am desolated that your experiment has to turn out badly! I was so intrigued by it!"

"Hélène!" Florian spoke quickly. "We jumped too quickly to conclusions. Here is your robber." He pointed to Roselius. "Charles 'needed' all those things for his precious project!"

"Then it was you, Charles! Prosper, you'll be cross, I know, but I'm glad it wasn't that young housebreaker, all the same. Yes, I am!"

SHE looked at Roselius, thoughtfully. "I see. He must have clothes—worn ones, that he will think he wore before. To be sure! And you will have to give him a past, Roselius—ah, there is a task even for your ingenuity! I wager you've been lying awake nights inventing a history for him. Haven't you? Certainly you have."

She sat down on the davenport. "You shall tell us, Roselius. I'm perishing to hear it."

"Good!" said Roselius. "I will." He turned to the doctor.

"Somebody once said he'd have liked to see George Washington when he was about to become the father of his country. Prosper, you also are in what is familiarly known as an interesting condition. You are about to become an uncle."

"Don't be ridiculous, Charles!" said the surgeon, glowering. "What on earth are you driving at?"

"Your nephew, Prosper, who was killed in the war."

Florian started. "My nephew! My God!"

"What could be more natural? Our patient speaks French—it was that that made me think of it. He's about the age your nephew should have been if he had lived. And wasn't I going to bring Pierre here to America to be my assistant when the war broke out? Ah, you see now why I wanted the watch and the cuff links and the pocketbook. They have your initials. His name, Pierre Florian, has the same letters as yours."

"Nom de nom de bon dieu de sort!" Florian exploded. "Give this rogue my dead nephew's name? The suggestion is an affront to his memory!"

"Don't niggle over an empty name!" said Roselius. "How can it embarrass you? You're off for Europe today. Sit down. Be calm, and listen."

"I won't sit down! You can't mean it!"

"Why shouldn't I?" Roselius roared. "I'll make him a nephew any one should be proud of if I have half a chance."

"A thief—a common criminal! It's desecration!"

"Ho!" Roselius was snarling now. "You won't help me because you're afraid I'll succeed, and show you up for the thundering blockhead you are! You hate to be proved wrong! I'd as lief be a thief as a fatuous pedant with a cotton batting soul!"

"He'll never be anything but a thief!"

"How do you know?"

"My common sense and experience tell me so."

"Common nonsense! You believe a thief is born so. Rot! He's made one by circumstance—blind, stupid circumstance—and kept one by environment. Those two things no longer control this man. How can they? He has forgotten all the circumstances and associations that went to his making. He has at this moment no environment whatever except what we have created for him in these last few days. He'll no longer have an incentive to thievery. He'll have blood, and family name, self-respect; friends and position, and a reasonable amount of money. It'll pull at him as surely as the pull of matter, the stress and strain of gravitation. He'll live up to it because he'll have a desire to. In six months you won't know him."

"I won't want to," said Florian, with asperity. "My nephew's name, indeed!"

"Only till he gets his feet out of the quicksand, Prosper! I want to give him a real history to grow up to. When his memory comes back—you said it would?"

"Probably it will," frowned Florian. "Maybe naturally, maybe as the result of a mental or even a physical shock, after the brain lesion has healed."

"Good!" Roselius clutched his arm. "When it does, he'll know himself. If it doesn't, and the necessity arises, I'll tell him—when the time comes. But, till then, he'll have his chance."

"You can't make an honest man out of lies!" expostulated the surgeon.

"There are blessed lies as well as damned lies," cried Roselius. "There's nothing in life that's all truth or all untruth—they are the ultimate white and black, but life is made up of grays. Have you, as a surgeon, never learned the compassion and kindness of a lie? A lie may save where the truth destroys like a searing acid!"

"That may be," retorted Florian, "but I'll not have your jail-bird masquerading as my own blood!"

Roselius opened his mouth to reply, but, with a sudden gesture, closed it like a trap and, with one hand nursing an elbow and the fingers of the other knotted in his beard, strode up and down a moment, in silence. Then he halted, and put his big hand on Florian's shoulder.

"Old friend," he said, "I want to do this thing. The Great Planner has delivered this soiled and empty life into my hands, and He is saying to me, 'Fill it!' And so I will—with truth and trust and self-respect. You tell me it's impossible? I say it's only when we try to do the impossible that we're like God!"

In the pause the Baroness spoke; her voice was oddly altered.

"Prosper, the good God knows — though you don't believe in Him, Prosper, I do!—whether Roselius is right or wrong. It wouldn't hurt that poor dead boy in Flanders any, after all, would it?"

The surgeon shrugged away the hand from his shoulder.

"So you've gone crazy, too, have you, Hélène!" he fumed. "Rubbish, Roselius! By character and instinct the man upstairs is a crook, and a crook he'll remain. Whenever you want convincing, leave him alone with the door open and something worth stealing in sight, and you'll see!"

Roselius turned on him. "Will you abide by such a test?"

"What do you mean?"

"We'll try that out. If I'm right, will you agree that he shall be Pierre Florian for a year?"

"No time to test things, when we're leaving within the hour," Florian said, irritably.

Roselius went to his desk, unlocked a drawer, and took from its satin lined box the rope of pearls which he had shown them there once before, gleaming and lustrous. He snapped its string and tossed it on the rug before the fireplace, where it lay, lambent and iridescent, a beaded coil of loveliness. He drew wide a panel of the great window, through which could be seen the drive and the open gate with the lodge beside it, and the highway beyond. He opened the door of the servants' staircase. Lastly he brought from somewhere a cloth cap and laid it on the table.

Then he said, "When he's dressed, Petersen is to show him the way down here. We'll come back after a while."

The three stood, looking at one another, a long moment. Roselius' brows were gathered in an anxious frown.

"I may be wrong," he said, musingly. "Perhaps I haven't given enough weight to the damnable force of mental habit, the result of impressions and influences repeated over and over till they acquire a quality of the compulsory. Perhaps I'm just an old fool, Prosper, and I'm letting you dish my experiment!"

He took a step toward the pearls on the floor, as if minded to snatch them up, but in the moment there came a raucous squawk from the peacock on the lawn outside—like the cackle of a malicious goblin—and he left them lying there.

They went slowly down the stair to the lower hall.

"Well, Hélène," said Florian, satirically, "which are you backing? Roselius or me?"

She shook her head.

But Roselius answered: "Me, of course. For I'm on the side of the angels."

WRENN spread the armful of clothing he had brought with meticulous precision on the bed.

"When you are dressed, sir, Mr. Roselius will be glad if you will come to his room."

"Bully!" said Canuck. "Where is it? This hospital seems to be the devil of a big place."

"The last door, at the end of this corridor, sir. It opens onto a gallery. You go down the staircase, and there you are, sir."

Wrenn departed, and Canuck turned to the garments on the counterpane—underclothing, soft shirt and collar, and a brown sack suit, with tie and socks that matched the border of the handkerchief peeping from the breast pocket of the coat. Funny that one could know all the little everyday things—how to put on clothes, for instance, and the way the buttons went—how to eat and talk—and yet have forgotten every blessed thing he'd ever been or done in his life!

A sudden thought darted to him. The pockets! With a gulp he threw himself on the clothes and through them, once, twice. But they yielded not a single scrap of paper. Nothing that told him what he wanted to know. Only a watch, a half dozen silver coins, and a paper of cigarets—Les Fleurs d'Automne—half emptied. The coins were French and Belgian. French coins, French cigarets, and he knew French!

He frowned, and picked up the watch. It was a hunting case and bore an engraved monogram, the letters P. F. intertwined. He caught the gleam of a cuff link in the silk shirt, and examined it. It carried the same initials. There were letters, too, in the corner of the handkerchief. He drew it from its pocket, and shook it out—P. F. embroidered in white, in a neat lozenge.

Were they the initials of his name? He ran in his mind all the Christian names he knew of beginning with P, but not one carried the least tang of familiarity.

He dressed slowly and, fully arrayed, surveyed himself in the mirror. The clothes, shoes, was a fair, if a somewhat generous fit. Evidently he had fallen off a bit while he was ill, but these imperfections were too slight to affect.

He lighted one of the cigarets and enjoyed the smoke with satisfaction.

"Well," he said, "let's strut our stuff, and see what's coming to us."

He went out to the hall and along the corridor to the last door at the end. An instant later he stood on the gallery of the Lib-Lab, looking down quickly, looking down on the great room, with the sun pouring through the mullioned windows in a wealth of color and beauty.

Canuck's first impression was that he had seen how strayed into a theater and was looking down on a stage setting. Stage palaces were the only things he had ever seen that looked a bit like this. A hospital! Not the kind that he knew anything about. Perhaps there were hospitals like this though, where only millionaires went. Maybe some rich gink had laid him out with his automobile and had sent him here. All at once he chuckled. Wouldn't it be a good one if he turned out to be a rich gink himself, with strings of beans and everything!

"Ha-ha!" he muttered, hollowly. "Pip-pip!" and went slowly down the stairway.

As the room opened and broadened and spread about him, its beauty pierced him with a thousand points of unremembered desires. He stood for the turn, and looked up at the lapis-lazuli dome with its black cross bars of oak, the dull gold luster hanging by its heavy chain from the center, at the tinted window wide open now to the soft air that was gently waving its long blue curtains. He did not know even the names of many things he saw, but they roused strange emotions in him, like starved craving for color that in his babyhood had reached clutching hands for a bright banded agate can and bits of colored glass hoarded on a sunny windowsill was plucking at him.

He went on down till he stood on the floor, with its many hued weaves of Bokhara and Beloochistan and Kurdistan. He looked at the murky red glow of the electric furnace, the black alembic on its tripod, the desk with its litter of writing, the mantel, the paintings.

Canuck stiffened like a pointer. He was looking at a tapestry, hanging on the wall beside a heavy carved table. A curious feeling was stealing over him, vague and indefinable and elusive. He approached it, and presently, as if by some unseen compulsion, put out his hand and lifted it. Behind it closed the door of a safe let into the wall.

He started, half fearfully. Something in his brain, like an incomplete insulation, was sputtering and crackling and flickering, an odd jumble of movement of shadowy images and suggestions was forming somewhere just beyond his grasp. But it frayed away and was gone.

"No," he said. "I thought I had it then, but it dodged me."

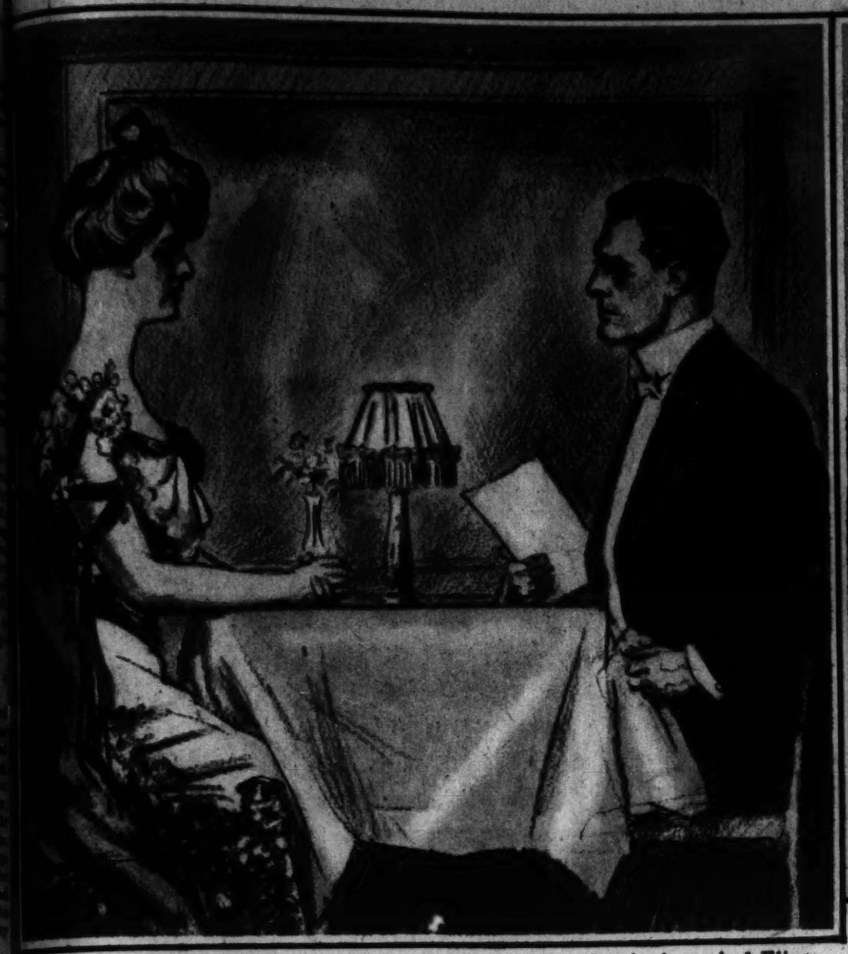
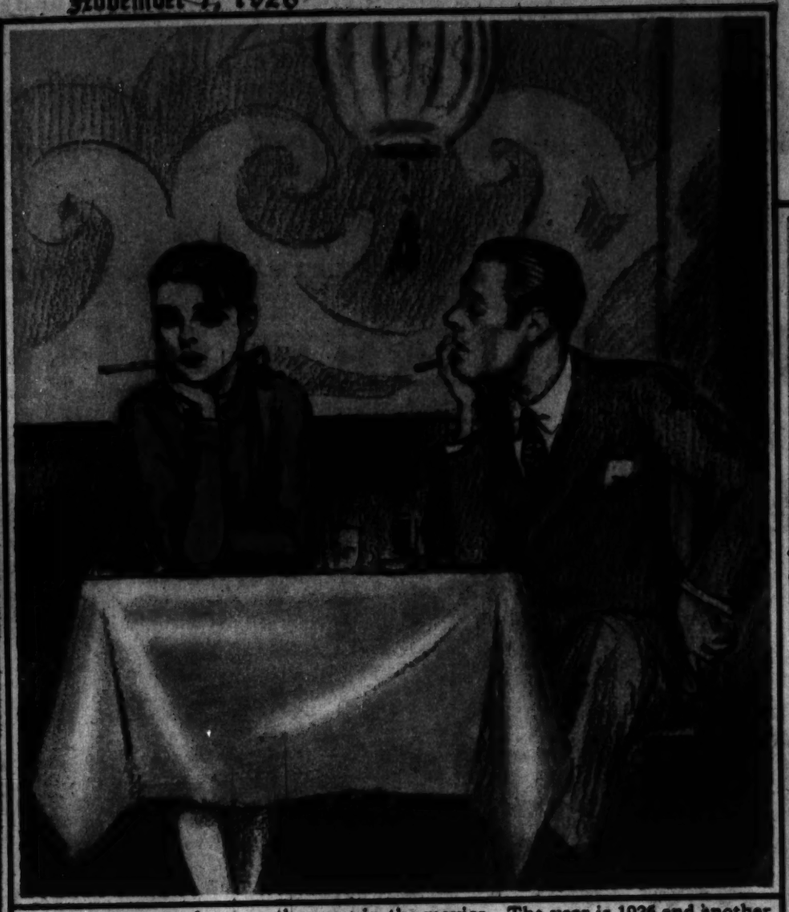
THE MARCH OF PROGRESS

By W. E. Hill



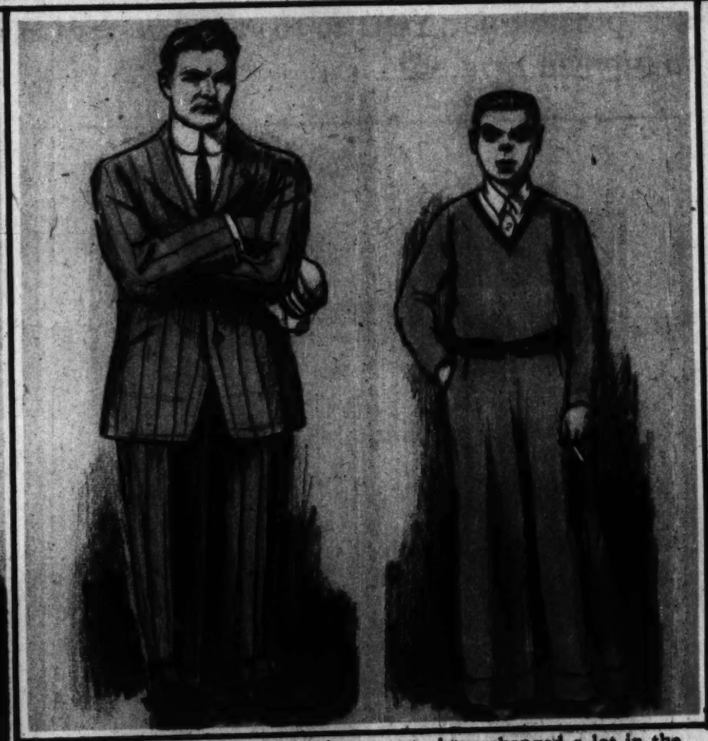
The year is 1906 and Fred has made a bad break. Imagine, he has asked Elinor if she wouldn't like a little Rhine wine cup, or something of the sort! And Elinor, quite freezingly, as any nice girl would, has answered: "Thank you, I never touch wine. A glass of water will be all I wish!" Fred's evening is spoiled.



Twenty years later, as they say in the movies. The year is 1926 and another boy friend has made a bad break. Bobbie and Rae are dining at the Golden Tooth restaurant, and Bobbie doesn't know the head waiter. And he has left his flask at home, which is unpardonable in these days. "I have some gin parked in the cloakroom," Rae is complaining, "but I wanted to save it for later at Ruth's. Why can't you call up your bootlegger or something?" Rae's evening is spoiled.

Present day film lovers waste no time going about what's expected of them. "Up and at her, boy," is the slogan of the 1926 film idol.

What the last thirty summers and as many winters have done for sex appeal. To the left is what drove the boys well-nigh to a red hot frenzy in 1896. To the right we have the 1926 version.



The fashion in boy friends seems to have changed a lot in the last two decades. Time was when a girl looked around for a big rock of strength to get all het up about. Today the sleek youth with the big eyes and the pocket flask is the people's choice.

The movie close-up at the end of the feature film, showing the young lovers kissing, used to be fraught with roguishness. It sometimes took all of three minutes after the caption, "Came the dawn," before the big, strong man gently pressed her to his manly lips.

The high life drama isn't what it used to be twenty or thirty years ago, as any old-timer will tell you. This is a scene from a very high life play of 1906 or thereabouts. Lady Maud Maul is trying to assuage the suspicions of Lord Bertie Denby, who is crazy about her. "Are you," he cries, "a good woman?" And Lady Maul, who, rumor has it, once stayed out in a canoe on the Thames till after 11 p. m. with the notorious Sir Cruller Crabb, is forced to sob: "Alas, the secret is not mine to tell; I can only ask you to trust me!" In the end it will all come out that Lady Maul was shielding her sister.

Nowadays we have plenty of high life on the stage, but with a difference. This is a scene from "Ratsnest," which is all about the lovely Lady Enid Ennis and her friend, Sir Francis Ffolansbye. Lady Enid has come to Ffolansbye's chambers, somewhere in Mayfair, which is where chambers should be, to find out if he is all he seems to be. "I say, Enid," says Ffolansbye, stung by a natural curiosity, "aren't you a bit of a gay girl? I hear you have twenty-eight lovers." Enid looks him square in the eye. "Yes," she answers, "and I am a heroin addict. I have done it for love, Francis, so that my soul should be kept quite untouched for the man I really love." "And that man is——" says Sir Francis. "You, old dear," Enid tells him.

Bathing girls, too, are changed from what bathing girls once were. In the good old days when the channel was just a body of water to be seasick on, a bathing girl never went beyond the life lines. She was always screaming, "Harry, stop splashing me—I'll get my hair all wet"—and if she lost her skirt and her bloomers showed beneath, she was paralyzed with shame, as is the 1906 lady on the left. The 1926 bathing lady on the right is all greased to swim the channel.

Startling Innovation

The New THIRTEENTH EDITION 1926

ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA

In the NEW FORM at a Saving of 40% NOW!

Amazing Bargain Offer

New Policy Breaks all Publishing Precedents

WITH the publication of the new Thirteenth Edition, the ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA has inaugurated a radical change in publishing policy — a change which makes it possible for YOU to secure this new Britannica AT ONCE —at a sweeping reduction in price!

Another Britannica Triumph

This new policy — a policy without precedent in the publishing business — is another Britannica triumph. This is the latest in a long series of startling and successful innovations which have put the ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA far in advance of all other works of reference.

Hitherto, it has been the custom of all publishers to bring out new important works in a single high-priced edition. Costs of book manufacture are high. It is only natural that the publishers should desire to recover their initial costs before bringing out a less expensive edition. But the result has always been that only the well-to-do could afford such a book while it was new.

Why This Offer Is Made

Because the Britannica is primarily an educational institution and because the splendid new 13th Edition, just completed, is by far the greatest aid to practical education ever produced both the editors and publishers were anxious to give it the widest possible distribution, regardless of temporary profit.

Old-fashioned conservative publishing policies, which insured a large return from relatively few purchasers, were fearlessly swept aside. Such policies were against bringing out this new edition in a popular-priced form side by side with the more expensive Cambridge Issue, the De Luxe format in which earlier editions have been first produced.

But, to follow old-time custom would mean limited distribution. It would mean that thousands and thousands of persons of moderate income would be compelled to put off buying their sets for many months perhaps for years.

And so it was decided to give everyone an equal opportunity to obtain this complete new Thirteenth Edition now, at a sweeping reduction in price a price, in fact, that means a saving of more than 40% as compared with the more expensively bound Cambridge Issue.

How You Can Save 40%

To give YOU this amazing opportunity, 15,000 sets of the complete new 13th Edition have been bound in the NEW FORM a method first introduced by this Company two years ago, and now famous throughout the world. It was instantly acclaimed a master stroke of genius, and more than 60,000 sets were sold in this popular form.

The specifications of the NEW FORM have been published broadcast, in every civilized country in the world. These specifications, which are the secret of the amazing success of the NEW FORM, make it in many respects the most attractive, compact and convenient form in which the ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA has ever been issued. They are:

(1) Large type, easy to read.
(2) Complete and latest text (nothing omitted, nothing altered).
(3) Fully illustrated. (All the original plates, maps, etc.)
(4) Sweeping reduction in price. (More than 40% below the price of the famous Cambridge Issue.)

How We Can Do It

How is this amazing bargain made possible?

First of all, by means of mass production. More than twenty-two acres of floor space were required at our printing plants to produce this Thirteenth Edition in the NEW FORM rapidly and economically. Huge orders were placed for all materials. Britannica resources made this possible.

Second, by binding the 32 volumes as 16 (two volumes in one cover), thus saving 50% of the binding cost.

Third, by printing the NEW FORM from the same plates used in the higher-priced Cambridge Issue, thus saving the cost of resetting 33,000 pages of type. The use of these plates is your guarantee that the text is identical in both issues.

What You Get

You get in the NEW FORM everything contained in the more expensive Cambridge Issue — and at an amazing bargain!

You get the same 45,000 separate articles, by more than 1,500 world-famous authorities covering every branch and every avenue of human activity, from the beginning of the world, right down to this very hour. Trotsky, Joseph Caillaux, Dr. Adolph Lorenz, Senator Marconi, George Eastman, Mme. Curie, Dame Millicent Fawcett, and Suzanne Lenglen, are numbered among these contributors.

You get also the full record of man's achievement during the "short but tremendous epoch" from 1910 to 1926—those transforming years in which the world has gained a century.
